

BOOK III
1781-83

Ministers successively stumble, and fall Be it 'want of fiscal genius,' or some far other want, there is the palpable discrepancy between Revenue and Expenditure, a Deficit of the Revenue you must 'choke (combler) the Deficit,' or else it will swallow you! Thus is the stern problem, hopeless seemingly as squaring of the circle Controller Joly de Fleury, who succeeded Necker, could do nothing with it, nothing but propose loans, which were tardily filled up, impose new taxes, unproductive of money, productive of clamour and discontent. As little could Controller d'Ormesson do, or even less, for if Joly maintained himself beyond year and day, D'Ormesson

DE BENSEVAL

reckons only by months till 'the King purchased Rambouillet without consulting him,' which he took as a hint to withdraw. And so, towards the end of 1783, matters threaten to come to a stillstand Vain seems human ingenuity In vain has our newly devised 'Council of Finances' struggled, our Intendants of Finance, Controller-General of Finances there are unhappily no Finances to control Fatal paralysis invades the social movement, clouds, of blindness or of blackness, envelop us are we breaking down, then, into the black horrors of NATIONAL BANKRUPTCY?

Great is Bankruptcy the great bottomless gull into which all Falschoods, public and private do sink, disappearing, whither, from the first origin of them, they were all doomed For Nature is true and not a lie No lie you can speak or act but it will come, after longer or shorter circulation like a Bill drawn on Nature's Reality, and be presented there for payment,—with the answer, No effects Pity only that it often had so long a circulation that the original forger were so seldom he who bore the final smart of it! Lies, and the burden burden of evil they bring, are passed on; shifted from back to back, and from rank to rank; and so land ultimately on the dumb lowest rank, who with spade and mattock, with sore heart and empty wallet, daily come in contact with reality, and can pass the cheat no further.

Observe nevertheless how, by a just compensating law, if the lie with its burden (in this confused whirlpool of Society) sinks and is shifted ever downwards, then in return the distress of it rises ever upwards and upwards. Whereby, after the long pining and demi-starvation of those Twenty Millions, a Duke de Coigny and his Majesty come also to have their 'real quarrel.' Such is the law of just Nature; bringing, though at long intervals, and were it only by Bankruptcy, matters round again to the mark.

But with a Fortunatus' Purse in his pocket, through what length of time might not almost any Falsehood last! Your Society, your Household, practical or spiritual Arrangement, is untrue, unjust, offensive to the eye of God and man. Nevertheless its heart is warm, its larder well replenished: the innumerable Swiss of Heaven, with a kind of natural loyalty, gather round it; will prove, by pamphleteering, musketeering, that it is a truth; or if not an unmingled (unearthly, impossible) Truth, then better, a wholesomely attempered one (as wind is to the shorn lamb), and works well. Changed outlook, however, when purse and larder grow empty! Was your Arrangement so true, so accordant to Nature's ways, then how, in the name of wonder, has Nature, with her infinite bounty, come to leave it famishing there? To all men, to all women and all children, it is now indubitable that your Arrangement was false. Honour to Bankruptcy; ever righteous on the great scale, though in detail it is so cruel! Under all Falsehoods it works, unweariably mining. No Falsehood, did it rise heaven-high and cover the world, but Bankruptcy, one day, will sweep it down, and make us free of it.

CHAPTER II

CONTROLLER CALONNE

UNDER such circumstances of tristesse, obstruction and sick languor, when to an exasperated Court it seems as if fiscal genius genius had departed from among men, what apparition could be welcomer than that of M. de Calonne? Calonne, a man of indisputable genius; even fiscal genius, more or less; of experience both in managing Finance and Parlements, for he has been Intendant at Metz, at Lille; King's Procureur at Douai. A man of weight, connected with the moneyed classes; of unstained name,—if it were not some peccadillo (of showing a Client's Letter) in that old D'Aiguillon-Lachalotais business, as good as forgotten now. He has kinsmen of heavy purse, felt on the Stock Exchange. Our Foulons, Berthiers intrigue for him;—old Foulon, who has now nothing to do but intrigue; who is known and even seen to be what they call a scoundrel; but of unmeasured wealth; who, from Commissariat-clerk which he once was, may hope, some think, if the game go right, to be Minister himself one day.

BOOK III
1783

CALONNE.

Such propping and backing has M. de Calonne; and then intrinsically such qualities! Hope radiates from his face; persuasion hangs on his tongue. For all straits he has present remedy, and will make the world roll on wheels before him. On the 3rd of November 1783, the Œil-de-Bœuf rejoices in its new Controller-General. Calonne also shall have trial; Calonne also, in his way, as Turgot and Necker had done in theirs, shall forward the consummation; suffuse, with one other flush of brilliancy, our now too leaden-coloured Era of Hope, and wind it up—into fulfilment.

Great, in any case, is the felicity of the Œil-de-Bœuf. Stinginess has fled from these royal abodes: suppression ceases; your Resenval may go peaceably to sleep, sure that he shall awake

awake unplundered. Smiling Plenty, as if conjured by some enchanter, has returned; scatters contentment from her new-flowing horn. And mark what suavity of manners! A bland smile distinguishes our Controller: to all men he listens with an air of interest, nay of anticipation; makes their own wish clear to themselves, and grants it; or at least, grants conditional promise of it. 'I fear this is a matter of difficulty,' said her Majesty.—'Madame,' answered the Controller, 'if it is but difficult, it is done; if it is impossible, it shall be done (se fera).'
A man of such 'facility' withal. To observe him in the pleasure-vortex of society, which none partakes of with more gusto, you might ask, When does he work? And yet his work, as we see, is never behindhand; above all, the fruit of his work: ready-money. Truly a man of incredible facility; facile action, facile eloquence, facile thought: how, in mild suasion, philosophic depth sparkles up from him, as mere wit and lambent sprightliness; and in her Majesty's Soirées, with the weight of a world lying on him, he is the delight of men and women! By what magic does he accomplish miracles? By the only true magic, that of genius. Men name him 'the Minister'; as indeed, when was there another such? Crooked things are become straight by him, rough places plain; and over the Gil-de-Bœuf there rests an unspeakable sunshine.

Nay, in seriousness, let no man say that Calonne had not genius: genius for Persuading; before all things, for Borrowing. With the skilfullest judicious appliances of underhand money, he keeps the Stock-Exchanges flourishing; so that Loan after Loan is filled up as soon as opened. 'Calculators likely to know'¹ have calculated that he spent, in extraordinary, 'at the rate of one million daily'; which indeed is some fifty thousand pounds sterling: but did he not procure something with it; namely peace and prosperity, for the time being? Philosophedom grumbles and croaks; buys, as we said, 80,000 copies of Necker's new Book: but Nonpareil Calonne, in her Majesty's Apartment, with the glittering retinue of Dukes, Duchesses, and mere happy admiring faces, can let Necker and Philosophedom croak.

The misery is, such a time cannot last! Squandering, and Payment by Loan is no way to choke a Deficit. Neither is oil the substance for quenching conflagrations,—alas no, only for assuaging them, not permanently ! To the Nonpareil himself, who wanted not insight, it is clear at intervals, and dimly certain at all times, that his trade is by nature temporary, growing daily more difficult, that changes incalculable lie at no great distance. Apart from financial Deficit, the world is wholly in such a newfangled humour, all things working loose from their old fastenings, towards new issues and combinations. There is not a dwarf joker in cropt Brutus' head, or Anglomane horseman rising on his stirrups that does not betoken change. But what then ? The day, in any case, passes pleasantly, for the morrow, if the morrow come, there shall be counsel too. Once mounted (by munificence, suasion, magic of genius) high enough in favour with the Ceil de Brui, with the King, Queen, Stock Exchange, and so far as possible with all men, a Nonpareil Controller may hope to go careering through the Inevitable, in some unimagined way, as handsomely as another.

¹ Besenval, iii. 216.

At all events, for these three mimulous years, it has been expedient heaped on expedient. till now, with such cumulation and height, the pile topples perilous. And here has this world's wonder of a Diamond Necklace brought it at last to the clear verge of tumbling. Genius in that direction can no more mounted high enough, or not mounted we must fare forth. Hardly is poor Rohan, the Necklace-Cardinal, safely bestowed in the Auvergne Mountains, Dame de Lamotte (unsafely) in the Salpêtrière and that mournful business hushed up, when our sanguine Controller once more astonishes the world. An expedient, unheard of for these hundred and sixty years, has been propounded, and by dint of suasion (for his light audacity, his hope and eloquence are matchless) has been got adopted,—Convocation of the Notables.

Let notable persons the actual or virtual rulers of their districts, be summoned from all sides of France. let a true tale, of his Majesty's patriotic purposes and wretched pecuniary impossibilities be suavely told them, and then the question put. What are we to do ? Surely to adopt healing measures, such as the magic of genius will unfold, such as, once sanctioned by Notables, all Parlements and all men must, with more or less reluctance, submit to.

LE ROI S'AMUSE.

(Louis XV. and Mme. Dubarry.)

CHAPTER III

THE NOTABLES

HERR. then, is verily a sign and wonder; visible to the whole world: bodeful of much. The Œil-de-Bœuf dolorously grumbles; were we not well as we stood,—quenching conflagrations by oil? Constitutional Philosophedom starts with joyful surprise; stares eagerly what the result will be. The public creditor, the public debtor, the whole thinking and thoughtless public have their several surprises, joyful or sorrowful. Count Mirabeau, who has got his matrimonial and other Lawsuits huddled up, better or worse; and works now in the dimmest element at Berlin: compiling Prussian Monarchies, Pamphlets On Cagliostro; writing, with pay, but not with honourable recognition, innumerable Despatches for his Government,—seeks or deseries richer quarry from afar. He, like an eagle or vulture, or mixture of both, preens his wings for flight homewards.¹

M. de Calonne has stretched out an Aaron's Rod over France; miraculous; and is summoning quite unexpected things. Audacity and hope alternate in him with misgivings; though the sanguine-valiant side carries it. Anon he writes to an intimate friend, 'Je me fais pitié à moi-même (I am an object of pity to myself)'; anon, invites some dedicating Poet or Poetaster to sing 'this Assembly of the Notables, and the Revolution that is preparing.'² Preparing indeed; and a matter to be sung,—only not till we have seen it, and what the issue of it is. In deep obscure unrest, all things have so long gone rocking and swaying: will M. de Calonne, with this his alchemy of the Notables, fasten all together again, and get new revenues? Or wrench all asunder; so that it go no longer rocking and swaying, but clashing and colliding?

Be this as it may, in the bleak short days, we behold men of weight and influence threading the great vortex of French Locomotion, each on his several line, from all sides of France, towards the Château of Versailles: summoned thither de par

¹ Fils Adoptif, Mémoires de Mirabeau, t. iv. livv. 4 et 5.

² Biographie Universelle, § Calonne (by Guizot).

BOOK III
Feb 1787

le roi There, on the 22d day of February 1787, they have met, and got installed Notables to the number of a Hundred and Thirty seven as we count them name by name ¹ add Seven Princes of the Blood, it makes the round Gross of Notables Men of the sword, men of the robe, Peers, dignified Clergy, Parliamentary Presidents divided into Seven Boards (Bureaux),

PHILIPPE 'ÉGALITÉ,' DUC D'ORLÉANS

under our Seven Princes of the Blood Monsieur, D'Artois, Penthievre, and the rest, among whom let not our new Duke d'Orléans (for, since 1785 he is Chartres no longer) be forgotten Never yet made Admiral, and now turning the corner of his fortieth year, with spoiled blood and prospects, half weary of a world which is more than half weary of him, Monseigneur's future is most questionable Not in illumination and insight, not even in conflagration, but, as was said, 'in dull smoke

¹ Lacretelle i. l. 256 Montgaillard, l. 347

and

and ashes of outburnt sensualities,' does he live and digest. Sumptuousity and sordidness; revenge, life-weariness, ambition, darkness, putrescence; and, say, in sterling money, three hundred thousand a year,—were this poor Prince once to burst loose from his Court-moorings, to what regions, with what phenomena, might he not sail and drift! Happily as yet he 'affects to hunt daily'; sits there, since he must sit, presiding that Bureau of his, with dull moon-visage, dull glassy eyes, as if it were a mere tedium to him.

We observe finally, that Count Mirabeau has actually arrived. He descends from Berlin, on the scene of action; glares into it with flashing sun-glance; discerns that it will do nothing for him. He had hoped these Notables might need a Secretary. They do need one; but have fixed on Dupont de Nemours; a man of smaller fame, but then of better;—who indeed, as his friends often hear, labours under this complaint, surely not a universal one, of having 'five kings to correspond with.'¹ The pen of a Mirabeau cannot become an official one; nevertheless it remains a pen. In defect of Secretaryship, he sets to denouncing Stock-brokerage (Dénonciation de l'Agiotage); testifying, as his wont is, by loud bruit, that he is present and busy;—till, warned by friend Talleyrand, and even by Calonne himself underhand, that 'a seventeenth Lettre-de-Cachet may be launched against him,' he timefully flits over the marches.

And now, in stately royal apartments, as Pictures of that time still represent them, our hundred and forty-four Notables sit organised; ready to hear and consider. Controller Calonne is dreadfully behindhand with his speeches, his preparatives; however, the man's 'facility of work' is known to us. For freshness of style, lucidity, ingenuity, largeness of view, that opening Harangue of his was unsurpassable:—had not the subject-matter been so appalling. A Deficit, concerning which accounts vary, and the Controller's own account is not unquestioned; but which all accounts agree in representing as 'enormous.' This is the epitome of our Controller's difficulties: and then his means? Mere Turgotism; for thither, it seems, we must come at last: Provincial Assemblies; new Taxation; nay, strangest of all, new Land-tax, what he calls Subvention Territoriale, from which neither Privileged nor Unprivileged, Noblemen, Clergy, nor Parlementeers, shall be exempt!

¹ Dumont, Souvenirs sur Mirabeau (Paris, 1832), p. 20.

THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

CORRUPTION.

(The Court of Love, 'le bien a mal')

THE FRENCH REVOLUTION
A HISTORY

BY THOMAS CARLYLE

WITH ILLUSTRATIONS BY
EDMUND J. SULLIVAN, A.R.W.S.

Μέγας ὁ ἀγὼν ἐστὶ, θεῖον γὰρ ἔργον· ὑπὲρ βασιλειᾶς, ὑπὲρ ἐλευθερίας, ὑπὲρ εὐροίας, ὑπὲρ ἀταραξίας.

ARRIANUS

Δόγμα γὰρ αὐτῶν τίς μεταβάλλει; χωρὶς δὲ δογμάτων μεταβολῆς, τί ἄλλο ἢ δουλεία στενόντων καὶ πειθεσθαι προσποιουμένων;

ANTONINUS

IN TWO VOLUMES

VOL. I

LONDON
CHAPMAN AND HALL
LIMITED

1910

CONTENTS OF VOLUME I

I. THE BASTILLE

BOOK I. DEATH OF LOUIS XV

CHAP.	PAGE
I. LOUIS THE WELL-BELOVED	1
II. REALISED IDEALS	6
III. VIATICUM	15
IV. LOUIS THE UNFORGOTTEN	19

BOOK II. THE PAPER AGE

I. ASTRÆA REDUX	28
II. PETITION IN HIEROGLYPHS	34
III. QUESTIONABLE	36
IV. MAUREPAS	40
V. ASTRÆA REDUX WITHOUT CASH	44
VI. WINDBAGS	48
VII. CONTRAT SOCIAL	53
VIII. PRINTED PAPER	56

BOOK III. THE PARLEMENT OF PARIS

I. DISHONOURED BILLS	63
II. CONTROLLER CALONNE	67
III. THE NOTABLES	71
IV. LOMÉNIE'S EDICTS	80
V. LOMÉNIE'S THUNDERBOLTS	84

vi THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

CHAP	PAGE
VI. LOMÉNIE'S PLOTS	83*
VII INTERECINE	92
VIII. LOMÉNIE'S DEATH-THROAT	97
IX. BURIAL WITH BONFIRE	107

BOOK IV. STATES-GENERAL

I. THE NOTABLES AGAIN	112
II. THE ELECTION	117
III. GROWN ELECTRIC	123
IV. THE PROCESSION	126

BOOK V. THE THIRD ESTATE

I INERTIA	146
II MERCURY DE BRÉZÉ	154
III BROGLIE THE WAR-GOD	160
IV TO ARMS!	166
V GIVE TO ARMS	172
VI STORM AND VICTORY	178
VII NOT A REOLT	186
VIII CONQUERING YOUR KING	191
IX THE LANTERNE	195

BOOK VI. CONSOLIDATION

I MAKE THE CONSTITUTION	201
II THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY	206
III THE GENERAL OVERTEEN	212
IV IN QUELLE	219
V. THE FOURTH ESTATE	222

CONTENTS

vii

BOOK VII. THE INSURRECTION OF WOMEN

CHAP.	PAGE
I. PATROLLISM	226
II. O RICHARD, O MY KING	230
III. BLACK COCKADES	235
IV. THE MENADS	237
V. USHER MAILLARD	240
VI. TO VERSAILLES	246
VII. AT VERSAILLES	249
VIII. THE EQUAL DIET	253
IX. LAFAYETTE	258
X. THE GRAND ENTRIES	262
XI. FROM VERSAILLES	267

II. THE CONSTITUTION

BOOK I. THE FEAST OF PIKES

I. IN THE TUILERIES	277
II. IN THE SALLE DE MANÈGE	281
III. THE MUSTER	293
IV. JOURNALISM	301
V. CLUBBISM	305
VI. JE LE JURE	310
VII. PRODIGES	313
VIII. SOLEMN LEAGUE AND COVENANT	316
IX. SYMBOLIC	322
X. MANKIND	324
XI. AS IN THE AGE OF GOLD	330
XII. SOUND AND SMOKE	336

X THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

	PAGE
MME. DE POMPADOUR	8
THE PRINCESSES ADELAIDE, VICTOIRE AND SOPHIE DAUGHTERS OF LOUIS XV	16
MARIA JOSEPH	18
LA COMTESSE D'ARRE	23
MME. CAMPA	26
DE MONTESQUIEU	29
TURGOT	31
LOUIS DE BRIENNE	39
VOLTAIRE	42
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN	43
J. NECKER	47
MARAT	50
JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU	53
CALLOTTA	57
CARDINAL DE FOH	59
DE BEZENT	60
CALONNE	64
PHILIPPE 'LOUIS, DUC D'ORLANS,	72
D'EPHRENI	82
PRINCE VICTOR DE BROGLIE	103
JOSEPH CALLOTTIN	121
THOMAS DE MERICOURT	130
LOUISPIERRE	136
CALLOTTA	137
DE LA ROCHEFOUCAULT D'ARRE	140
L'ABBÉ MACRY	142
LAFARE HODU	164
CAMILLE DESMOULINS	165
DE LAMAY	177
MALLOD	184

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

xi

	PAGE
LA ROCHEFOUCAULT, COMTE DE LIANCOURT	190
LE PRINCE DE CONDÉ	193
ADRIEN DUPONT	209
ALEXANDRE DE LAMETH	211
MIRABEAU	228
COMTE D'ESTAING	231
LECHAPELIER	243
BAILLY	245
LAFAYETTE	258
LE DAUPHIN	259
MARIE ANTOINETTE	268
JEAN JOSEPH MOUNIER	270
CLERMONT-TONNEIRE	271
SIEYÈS	282
CHARLES BARBAUX	291
CHAUMETTE	293
CLOOTZ	298
COMTESSE DE GENLIS	300
FOQUIER-TINVILLE	306
LOUIS PHILIPPE D'ORLÉANS, DUC DE CHARTRES, KING OF THE FRENCH, 1830-1848	309
MME. ROLAND	320
ROLAND	321
LEPELLETIER DE SAINT-FARGEAU	326
DE BEAUHARNAIS	333
TALLEYRAND	339
LÜCKNER	345
BOUILLÉ	354
BOUILLÉ	365
JACQUES RENÉ HÉBERT	379
L'ABBÉ FAUCHET	383

xii THE FRENCH REVOLUTION

	PAGE
ROBESPIERRE . . .	336
CHARLES DE LAMETH . .	339
BERTHIER . . .	393
DENIS DIDEROT . . .	400
MIRABEAU . . .	412

I
THE BASTILLE

Immer wieder wird's ich das Recht der Gerechtigkeit
Nur dem Willen des Vaters das ist die Tugend der Gerechtigkeit
Nur dem Willen des Vaters das ist die Tugend der Gerechtigkeit
Nur dem Willen des Vaters das ist die Tugend der Gerechtigkeit
Nur dem Willen des Vaters das ist die Tugend der Gerechtigkeit

Wieder

THE BASTILLE

BOOK FIRST

DEATH OF LOUIS XV.

CHAPTER I

LOUIS THE WELL-BELOVED

PRESIDENT HÉNAULT, remarking on royal Surnames of Honour how difficult it often is to ascertain not only why, but even when, they were conferred, takes occasion, in his sleek official way, to make a philosophical reflection. 'The Surname of Bien-aimé (Well-beloved),' says he, 'which Louis xv. bears, will not leave posterity in the same doubt. This Prince, in the year 1744, while hastening from one end of his kingdom to the other, and suspending his conquests in Flanders that he might fly to the assistance of Alsace, was arrested at Metz by a malady which threatened to cut short his days. At the news of this, Paris, all in terror, seemed a city taken by storm : the churches resounded with supplications and groans ; the prayers of priests and people were every moment interrupted by their sobs : and it was from an interest so dear and tender that this Surname of Bien-aimé fashioned itself,—a title higher still than all the rest which this great Prince has earned.'¹

So stands it written ; in lasting memorial of that year 1744. Thirty other years have come and gone ; and 'this great Prince' again lies sick ; but in how altered circumstances now ! Churches resound not with excessive groanings ; Paris is stoically calm : sobs interrupt no prayers, for indeed none are offered ; except Priests' Litanies, read or chanted at fixed money-rate per hour, which are not liable to interruption.

¹ Abrégé Chronologique de l'Histoire de France (Paris, 1775), p. 701.

BOOK I
1744-74

The shepherd of the people has been carried home from Little Trianon, heavy of heart, and been put to bed in his own Château of Versailles: the flock knows it, and heeds it not. At most, in the immeasurable tide of French Speech (which ceases not day after day, and only ebbs towards the short hours of night), may this of the royal sickness emerge from time to time as an article of news. Bets are doubtless depending; nay, some people express themselves loudly in the streets.¹ But for the rest, on green field and steeped city, the May sun shines out, the May evening fades; and men ply their useful or useless business as if no Louis lay in danger.

LOUIS XV.

Dame Dubarry, indeed, might pray, if she had a talent for it; Duke d'Alquillon too, Maupeou and the Parlement Maupeou: these, as they sit in their high places, with France harnessed under their feet, know well on what basis they continue there. Look to it, D'Aiguillon; sharply as thou didst, from the Mill of St. Cast, on Quiberon and the invading English; thou, 'covered if not with glory yet with meal!' Fortune was ever accounted inconstant: and each dog has but his day.

¹ Mémoires de M. de Forme de la Cour (Paris, 1744, p. 197).

CHAP.
1744-74

Forlorn enough languished Duke d'Aiguillon, some years ago; covered, as we said, with meal; nay with worse. For La Chalotais, the Breton Parlementeer, accused him not only of poltroonery and tyranny, but even of concussion (official plunder of money); which accusations it was easier to get 'quashed' by backstairs Influences than to get answered: neither could the thoughts, or even the tongues, of men be tied. Thus, under disastrous eclipse, had this grand-nephew of the great Richelieu to glide about; unworshipped by the world; resolute Choiseul, the abrupt proud man, disdaining him, or even forgetting him. Little prospect but to glide into Gascony, to rebuild Châteaux there,¹ and die inglorious killing game! However, in the year 1770, a certain young soldier, Dumouriez by name, returning from Corsica, could see 'with sorrow, at Compiègne, the old King of France, on foot, with doffed hat, in sight of his army, at the side of a magnificent phaeton, doing homage to the—Dubarry.'²

Much lay therein! Thereby, for one thing, could D'Aiguillon postpone the rebuilding of his Château, and rebuild his fortunes first. For stout Choiseul would discern in the Dubarry nothing but a wonderfully dizen'd Scarlet-woman; and go on his way as if she were not. Intolerable: the source of sighs, tears, of pettings and poutings; which would not end till 'France' (La France, as she named her royal valet) finally mustered heart to see Choiseul; and with that 'quivering in the chin (tremblement du menton)' natural in such case,³ faltered out a dismissal: dismissal of his last substantial man, but pacification of his scarlet-woman. Thus D'Aiguillon rose again, and culminated. And with him there rose Maupeou, the banisher of Parlements; who plants you a refractory President 'at Croc in Combrailles on the top of steep rocks, inaccessible except by litters,' there to consider himself. Likewise there rose Abbé Terray, dissolute Financier, paying eightpence in the shilling,—

¹ Arthur Young, Travels during the years 1787-88-89 (Bury St. Edmunds, 1792), i. 44.

² La Vie et les Mémoires du Général Dumouriez (Paris, 1822), i. 141.

³ Besenval, Mémoires, ii. 21.

BOOK I
1744-74

so that wits exclaim in some press at the playhouse, 'Where is Abbé Terray, that he might reduce us to two-thirds!' And so have these individuals (verily by black art) built them a Domdaniel or enchanted Dubarradom, call it an Armida Palace, where they dwell pleasantly, Chancellor Maupeou 'playing blind man a buff' with the scarlet Enchantress, or gallantly presenting her with dwarf Negroes,—and a Most Christian King has unspeakable peace within doors whatever he may have without. 'My Chancellor is a scoundrel, but I cannot do without him.'¹

Beautiful Armida Palace, where the inmates live enchanted lives; lapped in soft music of adulation, waited on by the splendours of the world,—which nevertheless hangs wondrously as by a single hair. Should the Most Christian King die, or even get seriously afraid of dying! For alas had not the fair haughty Chateauroux to fly, with wet cheeks and flaming heart, from that Fever scene at Metz long since, driven forth by sour shavelings? She hardly returned when fever and shavelings were both swept into the background. Pompulour too, when Damiens wounded Royalty 'slightly, under the fifth rib' and our drive to Trianon went off futile in shrieks and madly shaken torches—had to pack and be in readiness; yet did not go the wound not proving poisoned. For His Majesty has religious faith, believes at least in a Devil. And now a third peril, and who knows what may be in it! For the Doctors look grave, ask gravely, if His Majesty had not the small pox long ago?—and I doubt it may have been a false kind. Yes Maupeou jucker those sinister frowns of thine, and peer out on it with thy malign rat eyes. It is a question, all the case. Sure only that man is mortal, that with the life of one mortal snaps irrevocably the wonderfulest talisman and all Dubarrad in rules off with tumult, into infinite Space, and ye as subterranean Apparitions are wont, vanish utterly,—leaving only a smell of sulphur!

These and what I odds of these may pray—to Heed'el sh or whoever will hear them. But from the rest of France there comes as was said no prayer, or one of an opposite character, 'expressed openly in the streets' (L'Ardeur de l'Hotel) where an enlightened 1770s² was sent in as many things as not given to prayer: neither are Rossbach victories, Terray Finances, nor, say only 'sixty thousand Lettres de Cachet' (which is Maupeou's share), persuasives towards that. O Hénault! Prayers? From a France smitten (by black-art) with plague after plague, and lying now, in shame and pain, with a Harlot's foot on its neck, what prayer can come? Those lank scarecrows, that prowl hunger-stricken through all highways and byways of French Existence, will they pray?

¹ (Source of note for the 1744-74) 1744

CHAP. I
1744-74

DE MAUPEOU.

The dull millions that, in the workshop or furrowfield, grind foredone at the wheel of Labour, like haltered gin-horses, if blind so much the quieter? Or they that in the Bicêtre Hospital, 'eight to a bed,' lie waiting their manumission? Dim are those heads of theirs, dull stagnant those hearts: to them the great Sovereign is known mainly as the great Regrater of Bread. If they hear of his sickness, they will answer with a dull Tant pis pour lui; or with the question, Will he die?

Yes,

BOOK I 1744 74

Yes, will he die? that is now, for all France, the grand question, and hope, whereby alone the King's sickness has still some interest

CHAPTER II

REALISED IDEALS

' SUCH a changed France have we, and a changed Louis Changed, truly, and further than thou yet seest!—To the eye of History many things, in that sick room of Louis, are now visible, which to the Courtiers there present were invisible For indeed it is well said, 'in every object there is inexhaustible meaning, the eye sees in it what the eye brings means of seeing' To Newton and to Newton's Dog Diamond, what a different pair of Universes, while the painting on the optical retina of both was, most likely, the same! Let the Reader here, in this sick room of Louis, endeavour to look with the mind too

Time was when men could (so to speak) of a given man, by nourishing and decorating him with fit appliances, to the due pitch, make themselves a King almost as the Bees do, and what was still more to the purpose, loyally obey him when made The man so nourished and decorated, thenceforth named royal, does verily bear rule, and is said, and even thought, to be, for example, 'prosecuting conquests in Flanders,' when he lets himself like luggage be carried thither and no light luggage, covering miles of road For he has his unblushing Châteauroux, with her handboxes and rouge pots, at his side, so that, at every new station, a wooden gallery must be run up between their lodgings He has not only his Maison Bouche, and Valcaille without end, but his very Troop of Players, with their pasteboard coulisses, thunder barrels, their kettles, fiddles, stage wardrobes portable larders (and chaffering and quarrelling enough), all mounted in wagons, tumbrils, second hand chaises,—sufficient not to conquer Flanders, but the patience of the world With such a flood of loud jingling appurtenances does he lumber along, prosecuting his conquests in Flanders wonderful to behold So nevertheless it was and had been to some solitary thinker it might seem strange, but even to him inevitable, not unnatural

For

, For ours is a most fictile world; and man is the most fingent plastic of creatures. A world not fixable; not fathomable! An unfathomable Somewhat, which is Not we; which we can work with, and live amidst,—and model, miraculously in our miraculous Being, and name World.—But if the very Rocks and Rivers (as Metaphysic teaches) are, in strict language, made by those outward Senses of ours, how much more, by the Inward Sense, are all Phenomena of the spiritual kind: Dignities, Authorities, Holies, Unholies! Which inward Sense, moreover, is not permanent like the outward ones, but for ever growing and changing. Does not the Black African take of Sticks and Old Clothes (say, exported Monmouth-Street cast-clothes) what will suffice, and of these, cunningly combining them, fabricate for himself an Eidolon (Idol, or Thing Seen), and name it Mumbo-Jumbo; which he can thenceforth pray to, with upturned awestruck eye, not without hope? The white European mocks; but ought rather to consider; and see whether he, at home, could not do the like a little more wisely.

So it was, we say, in those conquests of Flanders, thirty years ago: but so it no longer is. Alas, much more lies sick than poor Louis: not the French King only, but the French Kingship; this too, after long rough tear and wear, is breaking down. The world is all so changed; so much that seemed vigorous has sunk decrepit, so much that was not is beginning to be!—Borne over the Atlantic, to the closing ear of Louis, King by the Grace of God, what sounds are these; muffled ominous, new in our centuries? Boston Harbour is black with unexpected Tea: behold a Pennsylvanian Congress gather; and ere long, on Bunker Hill, DEMOCRACY announcing, in rifle-volleys death-winged, under her Star Banner, to the tune of Yankee-doodle-doo, that she is born, and, whirlwind-like, will envelope the whole world!

Sovereigns die and Sovereignties: how all dies, and is for a Time only; is a 'Time-phantasm, yet reckons itself real!' The Merovingian Kings, slowly wending on their bullock-carts through the streets of Paris, with their long hair flowing, have all wended slowly on,—into Eternity. Charlemagne sleeps at Salzburg, with truncheon grounded; only Fable expecting that he will awaken. Charles the Hammer, Pepin Bow-legged, where now is their eye of menace, their voice of command?

Rollo

BOOK I
1744-74

Rollo and his shaggy Northmen cover not the Seine with ships, but have sailed off on a longer voyage. The hair of Towhead (Tête d'étoupes) now needs no combing, Iron-cutter (Taillefer) cannot cut a cobweb, shrill Fredegonda, shrill Brunhilda have had out their hot life scold, and lie silent, their hot life-frenzy cooled. Neither from that black Tower de Nesle descends now darkling the doomed gallant, in his sack, to the Seine waters,

MADAME DE POMPADOUR.

plunging into Night. For Dame de Nesle now cares not for this world's gallantry, heeds not this world's scandal. Dame de Nesle is herself gone into Night. They are all gone, sunk,—down, down with the tumult they made, and the rolling and the tramping of ever new generations passes over them, and they hear it not any more for ever.

And yet withal has there not been realised somewhat? Consider (to go no further) these strong Stone edifices, and what they hold! Mud Town of the Borderers (Lutetia Parisiorum) orum or Barisiorum) has paved itself, has spread over all the Seine Islands, and far and wide on each bank, and become City of Paris, sometimes boasting to be 'Athens of Europe,' and even 'Capital of the Universe.' Stone towers frown aloft; long-lasting, grim with a thousand years. Cathedrals are there, and a Creed (or memory of a Creed) in them; Palaces, and a State and Law. Thou seest the Smoke-vapour; unextinguished Breath as of a thing living. Labour's thousand hammers ring on her anvils: also a more miraculous Labour works noiselessly, not with the Hand but with the Thought. How have cunning workmen in all crafts, with their cunning head and right-hand, tamed the Four Elements to be their ministers; yoking the Winds to their Sea-chariot, making the very Stars their Nautical Timepiece;—and written and collected a Bibliothèque du Roi; among whose Books is the Hebrew Book! A wondrous race of creatures: these have been realised, and what of Skill is in these: call not the Past Time, with all its confused wretchednesses, a lost one.

Observe, however, that of man's whole terrestrial possessions and attainments, unspeakably the noblest are his Symbols, divine or divine-seeming; under which he marches and fights, with victorious assurance, in this life-battle: what we can call his Realised Ideals. Of which realised Ideals, omitting the rest, consider only these two: his Church, or spiritual Guidance, his Kingship, or temporal one. The Church: what a word was there; richer than Golconda and the treasures of the world! In the heart of the remotest mountains rises the little Kirk; the Dead all slumbering round it, under their white memorial-stones, 'in hope of a happy resurrection':—dull wert thou, O Reader, if never in any hour (say of moaning midnight, when such Kirk hung spectral in the sky, and Being was as if swallowed up of darkness) it spoke to thee—things unspeakable, that went into thy soul's soul. Strong was he that had a Church, what we can call a Church: he stood thereby, though 'in the centre of Immensities, in the conflux of Eternities,' yet manlike towards God and man; the vague shoreless Universe had become for him a firm city, and dwelling which he knew. Such virtue was in Belief; in these words, well spoken: I believe. Well might men prize their Credo, and raise stateliest Temples for it, and reverend Hierarchies, and give it the tithe of their substance; it was worth living for and dying for.

Neither

Neither was that an inconsiderable moment when wild armed men first raised their Strongest aloft on the buckler throne, and, with clanging armour and hearts, said solemnly Be thou our Acknowledged Strongest! In such Acknowledged Strongest (well named King, Kon ning, Can ning, or Man that was Able) what a Symbol shane now for them,—significant with the destinies of the world! A Symbol of true Guidance in return for loving Obedience, properly, if he knew it, the prime want of man. A Symbol which might be called sacred, for is there not, in reverence for what is better than we, an indestructible sacredness? On which ground, too, it was well said there lay in the Acknowledged Strongest a divine right, as surely there might in the Strongest, whether Acknowledged or not,—considering who it was that made him strong. And so, in the midst of confusions and unutterable incongruities (as all growth is confused), did this of Royalty, with Loyalty environing it, spring up, and grow mysteriously, subduing and assimilating (for a principle of Life was in it), till it also had grown world great, and was among the main facts of our modern existence. Such a Fact, that Louis XIV, for example, could answer the expostulatory Magistrate with his 'L'État c'est moi' (The State? I am the State)', and be replied to by silence and abashed looks. So far had accident and fore thought, had your Louis Elevenths, with the leaden Virgin in their hatband, and torture wheels and conical oubliettes (man eating!) under their feet, your Henri Fourths, with their prophesied social millennium, 'when every peasant should have his fowl in the pot'; and on the whole, the fertility of this most fertile Existence (named of Good and Evil)—brought it, in the matter of the Kingship. Wondrous! Concerning which may we not again say, that in the huge mass of Evil, as it rolls and swells, there is ever some Good working imprisoned, working towards deliverance and triumph?

How such Ideals do realise themselves, and grow, wondrously, from amid the incongruous ever fluctuating chaos of the Actual: this is what World History, if it teach anything, has to teach us. How they grow, and, after long stormy growth, bloom out mature, supreme; then quickly (for the blossom is brief) fall into decay; sorrowfully dwindle; and crumble down, or rush down, noisily or noiselessly disappearing. The blossom is so brief; as of some centennial Cactus flower, which which after a century of waiting shines out for hours! Thus from the day when rough Clovis, in the Champ de Mars, in sight of his whole army, had to cleave retributively the head of that rough Frank, with sudden battle-axe, and the fierce words, 'It was thus thou cleavest the vase' (St. Remi's and mine) 'at Soissons,' forward to Louis the Grand and his L'État c'est moi, we count some twelve hundred years: and now this the very next Louis is dying, and so much dying with him!—Nay, thus too, if Catholicism, with and against Fendalism (but not against Nature and her bounty), gave us English a Shakespeare and Era of Shakespeare, and so produced a blossom of Catholicism—it was not till Catholicism itself, so far as Law could abolish it, had been abolished here.

But of those decadent ages in which no Ideal either grows or blossoms? When Belief and Loyalty have passed away, and only the cant and false echo of them remains; and all Solemnity has become Pageantry; and the Creed of persons in authority has become one of two things: an Imbecility or a Machiavelism? Alas, of these ages World-History can take no notice; they have to become compressed more and more, and finally suppressed in the Annals of Mankind; blotted out as spurious,—which indeed they are. Hapless ages: wherein, if ever in any, it is an unhappiness to be born. To be born, and to learn only, by every tradition and example, that God's Universe is Belial's and a Lie; and 'the Supreme Quack' the hierarch of men! In which mournfulest faith, nevertheless, do we not see whole generations (two, and sometimes even three successively) live, what they call living; and vanish,—without chance of reappearance?

In such a decadent age, or one fast verging that way, had our poor Louis been born. Grant also that if the French Kingship had not, by course of Nature, long to live, he of all men was the man to accelerate Nature. The Blossom of French Royalty, cactus-like, has accordingly made an astonishing progress. In those Metz days, it was still standing with all its petals, though bedimmed by Orléans Regents and Roué Ministers and Cardinals; but now, in 1774, we behold it bald, and the virtue nigh gone out of it.

Disastrous indeed does it look with those same 'realised ideals,' one and all! The Church, which in its palmy season, seven hundred years ago, could make an Emperor wait barefoot,

BOOK I
1744-4 foot, in penance-shirt three days in the snow, has for centuries seen itself decaying, reduced even to forget old purposes and enmities, and join interest with the Kingship on this younger strength it would fain stay its decrepitude, and these two will henceforth stand and fall together. Alas the Sorbonne still sits there in its old mansion, but mumbles only jargon of dotage, and no longer leads the consciences of men: not the Sorbonne, it is Encyclopedies, Philosophie, and who knows what nameless innumerable multitude of ready Writers, profane Singers, Romancers, Players, Disputators, and Pamphleteers that now form the Spiritual Guidance of the world. The world's Practical Guidance too is lost, or has glided into the same miscellaneous hands. Who is it that the King (Able man named also Roi, Rex or Director) now guides? His own huntsmen and priekers: when there is to be no hunt, it is well said, 'Le Roi ne fera rien (Today his Majesty will do nothing)'.¹ He lives and lingers there, because he is living there, and none has yet laid hands on him.

The nobles, in like manner, have nearly ceased either to guide or misguide, and are now, as their master is little more than ornamental figures. It is long since they have done with butchering one another or their king: the Workers protected encouraged by Majesty, have ages ago built walled towns, and there ply their craft, will permit no Robber Baron to 'live by the saddle' but maintain a gallows to prevent it. Ever since that period of the Fronde the Noble has changed his fighting sword into a court rapier, and now loyally attends his king as ministering satellite, divides the spoil, not now by violence and murder, but by soliciting and finesse. These men call themselves supports of the throne: singular gilt pasteboard caryatides in that singular edifice! For the rest, their privileges every way are now much curtailed. That Law authorising a Seigneur as he returned from hunting to kill not more than two Serfs and refresh his feet in their warm blood and bowels has fallen into perfect desuetude—and even into incredibility, for if Deputy Lapoule can believe in it and call for the abrogation of it so cannot we.² No Charolois for these last fifty years, though never so fond of shooting, has been in use to bring down slaters and plumbers, and see them roll from their roofs;¹ but contents himself with partridges and grouse. Close-viewed, their industry and function is that of dressing gracefully and eating sumptuously. As for their debauchery and depravity, it is perhaps unexampled since the era of Tiberius and Commodus. Nevertheless, one has still partly a feeling with the lady Maréchalé: 'Depend upon it, Sir, God thinks twice before damning a man of that quality.'² These people, of old, surely had virtues, uses; or they could not have been there. Nay, one virtue they are still required to have (for mortal man cannot live without a conscience): the virtue of perfect readiness to fight duels.

¹ Mémoires sur la vie privée de Marie Antoinette par Madame Campan (Par. 1826) i. 12.

² Histoire de la Révolution Française par Deux Amis de la Liberté (Par. 1792) ii. 312.

Such are the shepherds of the people: and now how fares it with the flock? With the flock, as is inevitable, it fares ill, and ever worse. They are not tended, they are only regularly shorn. They are sent for, to do statute-labour, to pay statute-taxes; to fatten battle-fields (named 'bed of honour') with their bodies, in quarrels which are not theirs; their hand and toil is in every possession of man; but for themselves they have little or no possession. Untaught, uncomfortable, unfed; to pine stagnantly in thick obscurity, in squalid destitution and obstruction; this is the lot of the millions; peuple taillable et corvéable à merci et miséricorde. In Brittany they once rose in revolt at the first introduction of Pendulum Clocks; thinking it had something to do with the Gabelle. Paris requires to be cleared out periodically by the Police; and the horde of hunger-stricken vagabonds to be sent wandering again over space—for a time. 'During one such periodical clearance,' says Lacretelle, 'in May 1750, the Police had presumed within to carry off some reputable people's children, in the hope of extorting ransoms for them. The mothers fill the public places with cries of despair; crowds gather, get excited; so many women in distraction run about exaggerating the alarm: an absurd and horrid fable rises among the people; it is said that the doctors have ordered a Great Person to take baths of young human blood for the restoration of his own, all spoiled by debaucheries. Some of the rioters,' adds Lacretelle, quite coolly, 'were hanged on the following days'; the Police went on.¹ O ye poor naked wretches ! and this, then, is your inarticulate cry to Heaven, as of a dumb tortured animal, crying from uttermost depths of pain and debasement ? Do these azure skies, like a dead crystalline vault, only reverberate the echo of it on you ? Respond to it only by ' hanging on the following days ' ?—Not so : not for ever ! Ye are heard in Heaven. And the answer too will come,—in a horror of great darkness, and shakings of the world, and a cup of trembling which all the nations shall drink.

¹ Lacretelle, Histoire de France pendant le 18^{me} Siècle (Paris, 1819), i. 271.

² Dulaure, vii. 261.

Remark, meanwhile, how from amid the wrecks and dust of this universal Decay new Powers are fashioning themselves, adapted to the new time and its destinies. Besides the old Noblesse, originally of Fighters, there is a new recognised Noblesse of Lawyers ; whose gala-day and proud battle-day even now is. An unrecognised Noblesse of Commerce, powerful enough, with money in its pocket. Lastly, powerfulest of all, least recognised of all, a Noblesse of Literature ; without steel on their thigh, without gold in their purse, but with the ' grand thaumaturgic fasci^{on} of Thought ' in their head. French Philosophism has arisen ; in which little word how much do we include ! Here, indeed, lies properly the cardinal symptom of the whole widespread malady. Faith is gone out ; Scepticism is come in. Evil abounds and accumulates, no man has Faith to withstand it, to amend it, to begin by amending himself ; it must even go on accumulating. While hollow language and vacu^{ity} is the lot of the Upper, and want and stagnation of the Lower, and universal misery is very certain, what other thing is certain ? That a Lie cannot be believed ! Philosophism knows only this : her other belief is mainly, that in spiritual supersensual matters no Belief is possible. Unhappy ! Nay, as yet the Contradiction of a Lie is some kind of Belief ; but the Lie with its Contradiction once swept away, what will remain ? The five unsatisfied Senses will remain, the sixth insatiable Sense (of vanity) ; the whole de^{mon}iac nature of man will remain,—hurled forth to rage blindly without rule or rein, savage itself, yet with all the tools and weapons of civilisation : a spectacle new in His^{to}ry.

In such a France, as in a Powder tower, where fire unquenched and now unquenchable is smoking and smouldering

¹ Lacretelle iv. 173.

CAGED.

all round, has Louis xv. lain down to die. With Pompadourism and Dubarryism, his Fleur-de-lis has been shamefully struck down in all lands and on all seas ; Poverty invades even the Royal Exchequer, and Tax-farming can squeeze out no more ; there is a quarrel of twenty-five years' standing with the Parlement ; everywhere Want, Dishonesty, Unbelief, and hotbrained Sciolists for state-physicians : it is a portentous hour.

CHAP. II
1774

Such things can the eye of History see in this sick-room of King Louis, which were invisible to the Courtiers there. It is twenty years, gone Christmas-day, since Lord Chesterfield, summing up what he had noted of this same France, wrote, and sent off by post, the following words, that have become memorable : ' In short, all the symptoms which I have ever met with in History, previous to great Changes and Revolutions in government, now exist and daily increase in France.'¹

CHAPTER III

VIATICUM

For the present, however, the grand question with the Governors of France is : Shall extreme unction, or other ghostly viaticum (to Louis, not to France), be administered ?

It is a deep question. For, if administered, if so much as spoken of, must not, on the very threshold of the business, Witch Dubarry vanish ; hardly to return should Louis even recover ? With her vanishes Duke d'Aiguillon and Company, and all their Armida-Palace, as was said ; Chaos swallows the whole again, and there is felt nothing but a smell of brimstone. But then, on the other hand, what will the Dauphinists and Choiseulists say ? Nay what may the royal martyr himself say, should he happen to get deadly-worse, without getting delirious ? For the present, he still kisses the Dubarry hand ; so we, from the anteroom, can note : but afterwards ? Doctors' bulletins may run as they are ordered, but it is ' confluent small-pox,'—of which, as is whispered too, the Gatekeeper's once so buxom Daughter lies ill : and Louis xv. is not a man to be trifled with in his viaticum. Was he not wont to catechise his very girls in the Parc-aux-cerfs, and pray with and for them, that they might preserve their—orthodoxy? ¹ A strange fact, not an unexampled one; for there is no animal so strange as man.

¹ Chesterfield's Letters : December 25th, 1753.

BOOK I 1774

For the moment, indeed, it were all well, could Archbishop Beaumont but be prevailed upon—to wink with one eye! Alas, Beaumont would himself so fain do it: for, singular to tell, the Church too, and whole posthumous hope of Jesuitism,

THE PRINCESS'S ADÉLAÏDE, VICTOIRE, AND SOPHIE, DAUGHTERS OF LOUIS XV.

now hangs by the apron of this same unmentionable woman. But then 'the force of public opinion'? Rigorous Christophe de Beaumont, who has spent his life in persecuting hysterical Jansenists and incredulous Non-confessors; or even their dead bodies, if no better might be,—how shall he now open Heaven's gate, and give Absolution with the corpus delicti still under his nose? Our Grand-Almoner Roche-Aymon, for his part, will not higgie with a royal sinner about turning of the key: but there are other Churchmen; there is a King's Confessor.

¹ Doleur (viz. 217); Beauval, etc.

foolish Abbé Mondon; and Fanaticism and Decency are not yet extinct. On the whole, what is to be done? The doors can be well watched; the Medical Bulletin adjusted; and much, as usual, be hoped for from time and chance.

CHAP. III
1774

The doors are well watched, no improper figure can enter. Indeed, few wish to enter; for the putrid infection reaches even to the Oil-de-Baruf; so that 'more than fifty fall sick, and ten die.' Mesdames the Princesses alone wait at the loathsome sick-bed; impelled by filial piety. The three Princesses, Graille, Chiffre, Coche (Rag, Snip, Pig, as he was wont to name them), are assiduous there; when all have fled. The fourth Princess, Loque (Dud), as we guess, is already in the Nunnery, and can only give her orisons. Poor Graille and Sisterhood, they have never known a Father; such is the hard bargain Grandeur must make. Scarcely at the Debut (when Royalty took off its boots) could they snatch up their 'enormous hoops, gird the long train round their waists, huddle on their black cloaks of taffeta up to the very chin'; and so, in fit appearance of full dress, 'every evening at six,' walk majestically in; receive their royal kiss on the brow; and then walk majestically out again, to embroidery, small-scandal, prayers, and vacaney. If Majesty came some morning, with coffee of its own making, and swallowed it with them hastily while the dogs were uncompling for the hunt, it was received as a grace of Heaven.¹ Poor withered ancient women! in the wild tossings that yet await your fragile existence, before it be crushed and broken; as ye fly through hostile countries, over tempestuous seas, are almost taken by the Turks; and wholly, in the Sansenlottic Earthquake, know not your right hand from your left, be this always an assured place in your remembrance: for the act was good and loving! To us also it is a little sunny spot, in that dismal howling waste, where we hardly find another.

Meanwhile, what shall an impartial prudent Courtier do? In these delicate circumstances, while not only death or life, but even sacrament or no sacrament, is a question, the skilfullest may falter. Few are so happy as the Duke d'Orléans and the Prince de Condé; who can themselves, with volatile salts, attend the King's antechamber; and, at the same time, send their brave sons (Duke de Chartres, Égalité that is to

¹ Campan, i. 11-36.

BOOK 1 be; Duke de Bourbon, one day Condé too, and famous among 1774 Dotards) to wait upon the Dauphin With another ten, it is a resolution taken; jacta est alea Old Richelieu,—when Archbishop Beaumont, driven by public opinion, is at last for entering the sick room,—will twitch him by the rochet, into a recess; and there, with his old dissipated mastiff face, and the oddest vehemence, be seen pleading (and even, as we judge by Beaumont's change of colour, prevailing) 'that the King be not killed by a proposition in Divinity.' Duke de Fronsac, son of Richelieu, can follow his father: when the Curé of Versailles

MARIA JOSEPHA.

Versailles whimpers something about sacraments, he will threaten to 'throw him out of the window if he mention such a thing.'

CHAP. III

1774

Happy these, we may say; but to the rest that hover between two opinions, is it not trying? He who would understand to what a pass Catholicism, and much else, had now got; and how the symbols of the Holiest have become gambling-dice of the Basest,—must read the narrative of those things by Besenval, and Soulavie, and the other Court Newsmen of the time. He will see the Versailles Galaxy all scattered asunder, grouped into new ever-shifting Constellations. There are nods and sagacious glances; go-betweens, silk dowagers mysteriously gliding, with smiles for this constellation, sighs for that: there is tremor, of hope or desperation, in several hearts. There is the pale grinning Shadow of Death, ceremoniously ushered along by another grinning Shadow, of Etiquette: at intervals the growl of Chapel Organs, like prayer by machinery; proclaiming, as in a kind of horrid diabolic horse-laughter, Vanity of vanities, all is Vanity!

CHAPTER IV

LOUIS THE UNFORGOTTEN

Poor Louis! With these it is a hollow phantasmagory, where like mimes they mope and mowl, and utter false sounds for hire; but with thee it is frightful earnest.

Frightful to all men is Death; from of old named King of Terrors. Our little compact home of an Existence, where we dwelt complaining, yet as in a home, is passing, in dark agonies, into an Unknown of Separation, Foreignness, unconditioned Possibility. The Heathen Emperor asks of his soul: Into what places art thou now departing? The Catholic King must answer: To the Judgment-bar of the Most High God! Yes, it is a summing-up of Life; a final settling, and giving-in the 'account of the deeds done in the body': they are done now; and lie there unalterable, and do bear their fruits, long as Eternity shall last.

Louis xv. had always the kingliest abhorrence of Death. Unlike that praying Duke of Orleans, Egalité's grandfather,— for

BOOK I 1774

for indeed several of them had a touch of madness,—who honestly believed that there was no Death! He, if the Court Newsmen can be believed started up once on a time glowing with sulphurous contempt and indignation on his poor Secretary, who had stumbled on the words, feu roi d'Espagne (the late King of Spain) 'Feu roi Monsieur?'—'Monsieur,' hastily answered the trembling but adroit man of business 'c'est une titre qu'ils prennent (tis a title they take)'¹ Louis we say, was not so happy, but he did what he could. He would not suffer Death to be spoken of, avoided the sight of churchyards, funereal monuments, and whatsoever could bring it to mind. It is the resource of the Ostrich, who hard hunted sticks his foolish head in the ground and would fain forget that his foolish unseeing body is not unseen too. Or sometimes with a spasmodic antagonism significant of the same thing and of more, he would go, or stopping his court carriages would send into churchyards and ask 'how many new graves there were today,' though it gave his poor Pompadour the disagreeablest qualms. We can figure the thought of Louis that day, when all royally caparisoned for hunting he met, at some sudden turning in the Wood of Senart, a ragged Peasant with a coffin 'For whom?'—It was for a poor brother slave, whom Majesty had sometimes noticed slaving in those quarters. 'What did he die of?'—'Of hunger'—the King gave his steed the spur.²

But figure his thought, when Death is now clutching at his own heart strings, unlooked for inexorable! Yes poor Louis, Death has found thee. No palace walls or life-guards, gorgeous tapestries or gilt huckram of stiffest ceremonial could keep him out, but he is here here at thy very life breath and will extinguish it. Thou whose whole existence hitherto was a chimera and scenic show, at length becomest a reality sumptuous Versailles hursts asunder like a dream into void Immensity, Time is done, and all the scaffolding of Time falls wrecked with hideous clangour round thy soul the pale Kingdoms vawn open, there must thou enter naked all unking'd, and await what is appointed thee! Unhappy man, there as thou turnest, so dull agony on the bed of weariness, what a thought is thine! Purgatory and Hell fire now all too possible in the prospect in the retrospect,—alas, what thing didst thou do that were not better undone ; what mortal didst thou generously help ; what sorrow hadst thou mercy on ? Do the ' five hundred thousand ' ghosts, who sank shamefully on so many battle-fields from Rossbach to Quebec, that thy Harlot might take revenge for an epigram,—crowd round thee in this hour ? Thy foul Harem ; the curses of mothers, the tears and infamy of daughters ? Miserable man ! thou ' hast done evil as thou couldst ' : thy whole existence seems one hideous abortion and mistake of Nature ; the use and meaning of thee not yet known. Wert thou a fabulous Griffin, devouring the works of men ; daily dragging virgins to thy cave ;—clad also in scales that no spear would pierce : no spear but Death's ? A Griffin not fabulous but real ! Frightful, O Louis, seem these moments for thee.—We will pry no further into the horrors of a sinner's deathbed.

¹ Deserres, l. 197.² Cambray, l. 32.

And yet let no meanest man lay flattering unction to his soul. Louis was a Ruler ; but art not thou also one ? His wide France, look at it from the Fixed Stars (themselves not yet Infinitude), is no wider than thy narrow brickfield, where thou too didst faithfully, or didst unfaithfully. Man, ' Symbol of Eternity imprisoned into Time ! ' it is not thy works, which are all mortal, infinitely little, and the greatest no greater than the least, but only the Spirit thou workest in, that can have worth or continuance.

But reflect, in any case, what a life-problem this of poor Louis, when he rose as Bien-Aimé from that Metz sick-bed, really was ! What son of Adam could have swayed such incoherences into coherence ? Could he ? Blindest Fortune alone has cast him on the top of it : he swims there ; can as little sway it as the drift-log sways the wind-tossed moon-stirred Atlantic. ' What have I done to be so loved ? ' he said then. He may say now : What have I done to be so hated ? Thou hast done nothing, poor Louis ! Thy fault is properly even this, that thou didst nothing. What could poor Louis do ? Abdicate, and wash his hands of it,—in favour of the first that would accept ! Other clear wisdom there was none for him. As it was, he stood gazing dubiously, the absurdest mortal extant, a very Solcicism Incarnate, into the absurdest confused world ;—wherein at last nothing seemed so certain as this, That he, the incarnate Solcicism, had five senses ;

BOOK II senses, that there were Flying Tables (Tables Volantes, which 174 vanish through the floor, to come back reloaded), and a Parc aux cerfs

Whereby at least we have again this historical curiosity a human being in an original position, swimming passively, as on some boundless 'Mother of Dead Dogs' towards issues which he partly saw. For Louis had withal a kind of insight in him. So when a new Minister of Marine, or what else it might be, came announcing his new era, the Scarlet woman would hear from the lips of Majesty at supper 'Yes, he spread out his ware like another, promised the beautifullest things in the world, not a thing of which will come—he does not know this region, he will see'. Or again 'Tis the twentieth time I have heard all that, France will never get a Navy, I believe'. How touching also was this 'If I were Lieutenant of Police, I would prohibit those Paris cabriolets'.¹

Doomed mortal,—for is it not a doom to be Solecism in carnate! A new Roi Faintant, King Donothing, but with the strangest new Mayor of the Palace—no bow legged Pepin now for Mayor, but that same cloud cap, fire breathing Spectre of DEMOCRACY, incalculable which is enveloping the world!—Was Louis then no wickedder than this or the other private Donothing and Eatall, such as we often enough see under the name of Man of Pleasure cumbering God's diligent Creation, for a time? Say, wretcheder! His Life solecism was seen and felt of a whole scandalised world, him endless Oblivion cannot engulf, and swallow to endless depths,—not yet for a generation or two.

However, be this as it will we remark, not without interest, that on the evening of the 4th 'Dame Dubarry issues from the sick room with perceptible 'trouble in her visage'. It is the fourth evening of May, year of Grace 1774. Such a whispering in the Fil de Beauif. Is he dying then? What can be said is that Dubarry seems making up her packages, she sails weeping through her gilt boudoirs as if taking leave. D'Aiguillon and Company are near their last card, nevertheless they will not yet throw up the game. But as for the sacramental controversy, it is as good as settled without being mentioned, Louis sends for his Abbé Mondon in the course of next night ; is confessed by him, some say for the space of 'seventeen minutes,' and demands the sacraments of his own accord.

¹ Journal de Madame de Han et p. 293 etc

CHAP. IV
1774

LA COMTESSE DUBARRY.

Nay already, in the afternoon, behold is not this your Sorceress Dubarry with the handkerchief at her eyes, mounting D'Aiguillon's chariot ; rolling off in his Duchess's consolatory arms ? She is gone : and her place knows her no more. Vanish, false Sorceress ; into Space ! Needless to hover at neighbouring Ruel ;

BOOK I
1774

Ruel, for thy day is done Shut are the royal palace gates for evermore, hardly in coming years shalt thou, under cloud of night, descend once, in black domino, like a black night-bird, and disturb the fair Antonette's music party in the Park, all Birds of Paradise flying from thee, and musical windpipes growing mute! Thou unclean, yet unmalignant, not unpitiable thing! What a course was thine from that first trucklebed (in Joan of Arc's country) where thy mother bore thee, with tears to an unnamed father forward, through lowest subterranean depths, and over highest sunlit heights of Harlotdom and Rascaldom—to the guillotine axe, which shears away thy vainly whimpering head! Rest there uncursed, only buried and abolished what else befitted thee?

Louis, meanwhile, is in considerable impatience for his sacraments, sends more than once to the window, to see whether they are not coming Be of comfort, Louis, what comfort thou canst they are under way, those sacraments Towards six in the morning, they arrive Cardinal Grand Almoner Roche Aymon is here in pontificals with his pyxes and his tools he approaches the royal pillow, elevates his wafer, mutters or seems to mutter somewhat,—and so (as the Abbé Georgel, in words that stick to one expresses it) has Louis 'made the amende honorable to God' so does your Jesuit construe it—'If a, If a' as the wild Clotaire groined out, when life was departing 'what great God is this that pulls down the strength of the strongest kings!'

The amende honorable, what 'legal apology' you will, to God—but not if D'Aiguillon can help it to man Dubarry still hovers in his mansion at Ruel, and while there is life, there is hope Grand Almoner Roche Aymon accordingly (for he seems to be in the secret) has no sooner seen his pyxes and gear repacked than he is stepping majestically forth again as if the work were done! But King's Confessor Abbé Moudon starts forward, with anxious acidulent face, twitches him by the sleeve, whispers in his ear Whereupon the poor Cardinal has to turn round, and declare audibly, 'That his Majesty repents of any subjects of scandal he may have given (a pu donner), and purposes by the strength of Heaven assisting him, to avoid the like—for the future!' Words listened to by Richelieu with mastiff face growing blacker, and answered to, aloud, 'with an epithet,'—which Besenval will not repeat. Old Richelieu, conqueror of Minorea, companion of Flying-Table orgies, perforator of bedroom walls,¹ is thy day also done ?

¹ Campan i. 197

² Georgel u. Tu oenau, // ter lib. iv. cap. 21

CHAP. IV
10 May 1774

Alas, the Chapel organs may keep going; the Shrine of Sainte Geneviève be let down, and pulled up again,—without effect. In the evening the whole Court, with Dauphin and Dauphiness, assist at the Chapel: priests are hoarse with chanting their 'Prayers of Forty Hours'; and the heaving bellows blow. Almost frightful! For the very heaven blackens; battering rain-torrents dash, with thunder; almost drowning the organ's voice: and electric fire-flashes make the very flambeaux on the altar pale. So that the most, as we are told, retired, when it was over, with hurried steps, 'in a state of meditation (recueillement),' and said little or nothing.²

So it has lasted for the better half of a fortnight; the Dubarry gone almost a week. Besenval says, all the world was getting impatient que cela finît; that poor Louis would have done with it. It is now the 10th of May 1774. He will soon have done now.

This tenth May day falls into the loathsome sick-bed; but dull, unnoticed there: for they that look out of the windows are quite darkened; the cistern-wheel moves discordant on its axis; Life, like a spent steed, is panting towards the goal. In their remote apartments, Dauphin and Dauphiness stand road-ready; all grooms and equerries booted and spurred: waiting for some signal to escape the house of pestilence.³ And, hark! across the Œil-de-Bœuf, what sound is that; sound 'terrible and absolutely like thunder'? It is the rush of the whole Court, rushing as in wager, to salute the new Sovereigns: Hail to your Majesties! The Dauphin and Dauphiness are King and Queen! Overpowered with many emotions, they two fall on their knees together, and, with streaming tears, exclaim,

¹ Besenval i. 159-172. Genlis; Duc de Levis, etc.

² Weber, Mémoires concernant Marie-Antoinette (London, 1809), i. 22.

³ One grudges to interfere with the beautiful theatrical 'candle,' which Madame Campan (i. 79) has lit on this occasion, and blown out at the moment of death. What candles might be lit or blown out, in so large an Establishment as that of Versailles, no man at such distance would like to affirm: at the same time, as it was two o'clock in a May Afternoon, and these royal Stables must have been some five or six hundred yards from the royal sick-room, the 'candle' does threaten to go out in spite of us. It remains burning indeed—in her fantasy; throwing light on much in those Mémoires of hers.

BOOK SECOND

THE PAPER AGE

CHAPTER I

ASTREA REDUX

A PARADOXICAL philosopher, carrying to the uttermost length that aphorism of Montesquieu's, 'Happy the people whose annals are tiresome,' has said, 'Happy the people whose annals are vacant' In which saying, mad as it looks, may there not still be found some grain of reason? For truly, as it has been written, 'Silence is divine,' and of Heaven, so in all earthly things too there is a silence which is better than any speech. Consider it well, the Event, the thing which can be spoken of and recorded, is it not, in all cases, some disruption some solution of continuity? Were it even a glad Event, it involves change, involves loss (of active Force); and so far, either in the past or in the present, is an irregularity, a disease. Stillest perseverance were our blessedness, not dislocation and alteration,—could they be avoided

DE MONTESQUIEU

The oak grows silently, in the forest, a thousand years, only

ohly in the thousandth year, when the woodman arrives with his axe, is there heard an echoing through the solitudes; and the oak announces itself when, with far-sounding crash, it falls. How silent too was the planting of the acorn; scattered from the lap of some wandering wind! Nay, when our oak flowered, or put on its leaves (its glad Events), what shout of proclamation could there be? Hardly from the most observant a word of recognition. These things befall not, they were slowly done; not in an hour, but through the flight of days: what was to be said of it? This hour seemed altogether as the last was, as the next would be.

It is thus everywhere that foolish Rumour babbles not of what was done, but of what was misdone or undone; and foolish History (ever, more or less, the written epitomised synopsis of Rumour) knows so little that were not as well unknown. Attila Invasions, Walter-the-Penniless Crusades, Sicilian Vespers, Thirty-Years Wars: mere sin and misery; not work, but hindrance of work! For the Earth, all this while, was yearly green and yellow with her kind harvests; the hand of the craftsman, the mind of the thinker rested not: and so, after all, and in spite of all, we have this so glorious high-domed blossoming World; concerning which, poor History may well ask, with wonder, Whence it came? She knows so little of it, knows so much of what obstructed it, what would have rendered it impossible. Such, nevertheless, by necessity or foolish choice, is her rule and practice; whereby that paradox, 'Happy the people whose annals are vacant,' is not without its true side.

And yet, what seems more pertinent to note here, there is a stillness not of unobstructed growth, but of passive inertness, the symptom of imminent downfall. As victory is silent, so is defeat. Of the opposing forces the weaker has resigned itself; the stronger marches on, noiseless now, but rapid, inevitable: the fall and overturn will not be noiseless. How all grows, and has its period, even as the herbs of the fields, be it annual, centennial, millennial! All grows and dies, each by its own wondrous laws, in wondrous fashion of its own; spiritual things most wondrously of all. Inscrutable, to the wisest, are these latter; not to be prophesied of, or understood. If when the oak stands proudest flourishing to the eye, blessed ones Man awakens from his long somnambulism, chases the Phantasms that beleaguered and bewitched him Behold the new morning glittering down the eastern steeps, fly, false Phantasms, from its shafts of light, let the Absurd fly utterly, forsaking this lower Earth for ever It is Truth and Astræa Redux that (in the shape of Philosophism) hence forth reign For what imaginable purpose was man made, if not to be 'bappy'? By victorious analysis and Progress of the Species, happiness enough now nwaits him Kings can become philosophers, or else philosophers Kings Let but Society be once rightly constituted,—by victorious Analysis The stomach that is empty shall be filled, the throat that is dry shall be wetted with wine Labour itself shall be all one as rest, not grievous, but joyous Wheat fields, one would think, cannot come to grow untilled, no man made clayey, or made weary thereby,—unless indeed machinery will do it? Gratuitous Tailors and Restaurateurs may start up, at fit intervals, one as yet sees not how But if each will according to rule of Benevolence, have a care for all, then surely—no one will be uncared for Nay, who knows but, by sufficiently victorious Analysis, 'human life may be indefinitely lengthened,' and men get rid of Death, as they have already done of the Devil? We shall then be happy in spite of Death and the Devil—So preaches magniloquent Philosophism her Redeunt Saturnia regna

BOOK II
1774-84

The prophetic song of Paris and its Philosophies is audible enough in the Versailles Œil-de-Bœuf, and the Œil-de-Bœuf, intent chiefly on nearer blessedness, can answer, not worst, with a polite 'Why not?' Good old cheery Maurepas is too joyful in Prime Minister to dash the world's joy Sufficient for the day be its own evil Cheery old man, he cuts his jokes, and hovers careless along, his cloak well adjusted to the wind, if so be he may please all persons The simple young King, whom in Maurepas cannot think of troubling with business, has retired into the interior apartments, taciturn, irresolute, though with a sharpness of temper at times he, at length, determines on a little smith work, and so, in apprenticeship with a Sieur Gamain (whom one day he shall have little cause to bless), is learning to make locks¹ It appears further, he understood Geography, and could read English Unhappy

¹ Campan i 125

BOOK II
1774-84

of a kind new in this world,—a fabulous kind, 'four tall lackeys,' says Mercier, as if he had seen it, 'hold him up in the air, that he may fall into the garment without vestige of wrinkle, from which rigorous encasement the same four in the same way, and with more effort, have to deliver him at night'¹ This last is he who now, as a gray timeworn man sits desolate at Gratz,² having winded up his destiny with the Three Days In such sort are poor mortals swept and shovelled to and fro

CHAPTER II

PETITION IN HIEROGLYPHS

With the working people, again, it is not so well Unlucky! For there are from twenty to twenty five millions of them Whom, however, we lump together into a kind of dim compendious unity, monstrous but dim, far off, as the canaille, or, more humanely, as 'the masses' Masses indeed and yet singular to say, if, with an effort of imagination, thou follow them, over broad France, into their clay hovels into their garrets and hutches, the masses consist all of units Every unit of whom has his own heart and sorrows, stands covered there with his own skin, and if you prick him he will bleed O purple Sovereignty, Holiness, Reverence, thou for example Cardinal Grand Almoner, with thy plush covering of honour who hast thy hands strengthened with dignities and moneys and art set on thy world watch tower solemnly, in sight of God for such ends,—what a thought that every unit of these masses is a miraculous Man even as thou thyself art, struggling with vision or with blindness, for his infinite Kingdom (this life which he has got, once only, in the middle of Eternities), with a spark of the Divinity, what thou callest an immortal soul in him!

Dreary, languid do these struggle in their obscure remoteness, their hearth cheerless, their diet thin For them, in this world, rises no Era of Hope, hardly now in the other—if it be not hope in the gloomy rest of Death for their faith too is failing Untaught, uncomforted, unfed! A dumb generation,

¹ Mercier Œuvres à Paris, II. 147

² A. D. 1834

génération ; their voice only an inarticulate cry : spokesman, in the King's Council, in the world's forum, they have none that finds credence. At rare intervals (as now, in 1775), they will fling down their hoes and hammers ; and, to the astonishment of thinking mankind,¹ flock hither and thither, dangerous, aimless ; get the length even of Versailles. Turgot is altering the Corn-trade, abrogating the absurdest Corn-laws ; there is dearth, real, or were it even 'factitious' ; an indubitable scarcity of bread. And so, on the second day of May 1775, these waste multitudes do here, at Versailles Château, in widespread wretchedness, in sallow faces, squalor, winged raggedness, present, as in legible hieroglyphic writing, their Petition of Grievances. The Château gates have to be shut ; but the King will appear on the balcony, and speak to them. They have seen the King's face ; their Petition of Grievances has been, if not read, looked at. For answer, two of them are hanged, on a 'new gallows forty feet high' ; and the rest driven back to their dens,—for a time.

Clearly a difficult 'point' for Government, that of dealing with these masses ;—if indeed it be not rather the sole point and problem of Government, and all other points mere accidental erotichets, superficialities, and beatings of the wind ! For let Charter-Chests, Use and Wont, Law common and special say what they will, the masses count to so many millions of units ; made, to all appearance, by God,—whose Earth this is declared to be. Besides, these people are not without ferocity ; they have sinews and indignation. Do but look what holiday old Marquis Mirabeau, the erabbed old Friend of Men, looked on, in these same years, from his lodging, at the Baths of Mont d'Or : 'The savages descending in torrents from the mountains ; our people ordered not to go out. The Curate in surplice and stole ; Justice in its peruke ; Maréchausée sabre in hand, guarding the place, till the bagpipes can begin. The dance interrupted, in a quarter of an hour, by battle ; the cries, the squealings of children, of infirm persons, and other assistants, tarring them on, as the rabble does when dogs fight : frightful men, or rather frightful wild-animals, clad in jupes of coarse woollen, with large girdles of leather studded with copper nails ; of giantie stature, heightened by high wooden-clogs (sabots), rising on tiptoe to see the fight, tramping time to it, rubbing their sides with their elbows their faces haggard (figures haïes) and covered with their long greasy hair the upper part of the visage waxing pale the lower distorting itself into the attempt at a cruel laugh and a sort of ferocious impatience. And these people pay the taille! And you want farther to take their salt from them! And you know not what it is you are stripping barer or as you call it governing, what, by the spurt of your pen in its cold distard indifference, you will fancy you can starve always with impunity, always till the catastrophe come!—Ah Madame such Government by Blindman's buff stumbling along too far, will end in the General Overtum (coulbute générale)¹

¹ Lacretelle, France pendant le 18^{me} Siècle, ii. 455. Biographie Universelle, § Turgot (by Durozoir).

BOOK II
1774-84

Undoubtedly a dark feature this in an Age of Gold—Age at least of Paper and Hope! Meanwhile trouble us not with thy prophecies O croaking Friend of Men 'tis long that we have heard such, and still the old world keeps wagging in its old way.

CHAPTER III

QUESTIONABLE

ON is this same Age of Hope itself but a simulacrum as Hope too often is? Cloud vapour with rainbows painted on it beautiful to see to sail towards,—which hovers over Niagara Falls? In that case victorious Analysis will have enough to do.

Alas yes! a whole world to remake if she could see it: work for another than she! For all is wrong and gone out of joint, the inward spiritual and the outward economical, head or heart there is no soundness in it. As indeed, evils of all sorts are more or less of kin and do usually go together especially it is an old truth that wherever huge physical evil is, there as the parent and origin of it has moral evil to a proportionate extent been. Before those five-and-twenty labouring Millions for instance could get that haggardness of face which old Mirabeau now looks on in a Nation calling itself Christian, and calling man the brother of man,—what unspeakable, nigh infinite Dishonesty (of seeming and not being) in all manner of Rulers, and appointed Watchers, spiritual and temporal, must there not, through long ages, have gone on accumulating ! It will accumulate : moreover, it will reach a head ; for the first of all Gospels is this, that a Lie cannot endure for ever.

¹ L'ouvrage de l'auteur fut par lui même payé son Père son Oncle et son Frère
A Paris (Paris 1784 3), in 1784.

LOUIS XVI.

CHAP. III
1774-84

In fact, if we pierce through that rosepink vapour of Sentimentalism, Philanthropy, and Feasts of Morals, there lies behind it one of the sorriest spectacles. You might ask, What bonds that ever held a human society happily together, or held it together at all, are in force here ? It is an unbelieving people ; which has suppositions, hypotheses, and froth-systems of victorious Analysis ; and for belief this mainly, that Pleasure is pleasant. Hunger they have for all sweet things ; and the law of Hunger : but what other law ? Within them, or over them, properly none !

Their King has become a King Popinjay : with his Maurepas Government, gyrating as the weather-cock does, blown about by every wind. Above them they see no God ; or they even do not look above, except with astronomical glasses. The Church indeed still is ; but in the most submissive state ; quite tamed by Philosophism ; in a singularly short time ; for the hour was come. Some twenty years ago, your Archbishop Beaumont would not even let the poor Jansenists get buried : your Loménie Brienne (a rising man, whom we shall meet with yet) could, in the name of the Clergy, insist on having the Antiprottestant Laws, which condemn to death for preaching, ‘ put in execution.’¹ And alas, now not so much as Baron Holbach’s Atheism can be burnt,—except as pipe-matches by the private speculative individual. Our Church stands haltered, dumb, like a dumb ox ; lowing only for provender (of tithes) ; content if it can have that ; or, with dumb stupor, expecting its further doom. And the Twenty Millions of ‘ haggard faces ’ ; and, as finger-post and guidance to them in their dark struggle, ‘ a gallows forty feet high ’ ! Certainly a singular Golden Age ; with its Feasts of Morals, its ‘ sweet manners,’ its sweet institutions (institutions douces) ; betokening nothing but peace among men !—Peace ? O Philosophe-Sentimentalism, what hast thou to do with peace, when thy mother’s name is

¹ Boissy d’Anglas, Vie de Malesherbes, i. 15-22.

BOOK II Jezebel ? Foul Product of still fouler Corruption, thou with 1774-84 the corruption art doomed !

Meanwhile it is singular how long the rotten will hold together, provided you do not handle it roughly. For whole generations it continues standing, 'with a ghastly affectation of life,' after all life and truth has fled out of it : so loth are men to quit their old ways ; and, conquering indolence and inertia, venture on new. Great truly is the Actual ; is the Thing that has rescued itself from bottomless deeps of theory and possibility, and stands there as a definite indisputable Fact, whereby men do work and live, or once did so. Wisely shall men cleave to that, while it will endure ; and quit it with regret, when it gives way under them. Rash enthusiast of Change, beware ! Hast thou well considered all that Habit does in this life of ours ; how all Knowledge and all Practice hang wondrous over infinite abysses of the Unknown, Impracticable ;

LOMÉNIE DE BRIENNE.

and

and our whole being is an infinite abyss, overarched by Habit, as by a thin Earth-rind, laboriously built together ?

CHAP. III

1774-84

But if 'every man,' as it has been written, 'holds confined within him a mad-man,' what must every Society do ;—Society, which in its commonest state is called 'the standing miracle of this world' ! 'Without such Earth-rind of Habit,' continues our author, 'call it System of Habits, in a word, fixed ways of acting and of believing,—Society would not exist at all. With such it exists, better or worse. Herein too, in this its System of Habits, acquired, retained how you will, lies the true Law-Code and Constitution of a Society ; the only Code, though an unwritten one, which it can in nowise disobey. The thing we call written Code, Constitution, Form of Government, and the like, what is it but some miniature image, and solemnly expressed summary of this unwritten Code ? Is,—or rather, alas, is not ; but only should be, and always tends to be ! In which latter discrepancy lies struggle without end.' And now, we add in the same dialect, let but, by ill chance, in such ever-enduring struggle,—your 'thin Earth-rind' be once broken ! The fountains of the great deep boil forth ; fire-fountains, enveloping, engulfing. Your 'Earth-rind' is shattered, swallowed up ; instead of a green flowery world there is a waste wild-weltering chaos ;—which has again, with tumult and struggle, to make itself into a world.

On the other hand, be this conceded : Where thou findest a Lie that is oppressing thee, extinguish it. Lies exist there only to be extinguished ; they wait and cry earnestly for extinction. Think well, meanwhile, in what spirit thou wilt do it : not with hatred, with headlong selfish violence ; but in clearness of heart, with holy zeal, gently, almost with pity. Thou wouldst not replace such extinct Lie by a new Lie, which a new Injustice of thy own were ; the parent of still other Lies ? Whereby the latter end of that business were worse than the beginning.

So, however, in this world of ours, which has both an indestructible hope in the Future, and an indestructible tendency to persevere as in the Past, must Innovation and Conservation wage their perpetual conflict, as they may and can. Wherein the 'dæmonic element,' that lurks in all human things, may doubtless, some once in the thousand years,—get vent ! But indeed may we not regret that such conflict,—which, after all,

is

OK II is but like that classical one of 'hate-filled Amazons with 74-84 heroic Youths,' and will end in embraces,—should usually be so spasmodic? For Conservation, strengthened by that mightiest quality in us, our indolence, sits for long ages, not victorious only, which she should be; but tyrannical, incommunicative. She holds her adversary as if annihilated, such adversary lying, all the while, like some buried Enceladus, who, to gain the smallest freedom, has to stir a whole Trinacria with its Ætnas.

Wherefore, on the whole, we will honour a Paper Age too, an Era of Hope! For in this same frightful process of Enceladus Revolt, when the task, on which no mortal would willingly enter, has become imperative, inevitable,—is it not even a kindness of Nature that she lures us forward by cheerful promises, fallacious or not, and a whole generation plunges into the Erebus Blackness, lighted on by an Era of Hope? It has been well said: 'Man is based on Hope; he has properly no other possession but Hope, this habitation of his is named the Place of Hope.'

CHAPTER IV

MAUREPAS

BUT now, among French hopes, is not that of old M de Maurepas one of the best-grounded, who hopes that he, by dexterity, shall contrive to continue Minister? Nimble old man, who for all emergencies has his light jest, and ever in the worst confusion will emerge, cork like, unsunk! Small care to him is Perfectibility, Progress of the Species, and Astræa Redux: good only, that a man of light wit, verging towards fourscore, can in the seat of authority feel himself important among men. Shall we call him, as haughty Châteauroux was wont of old, 'M Faguet (Diminutive of Scoundrel)'? In courtier dialect, he is now named 'the Nestor of France', such governing Nestor as France has.

At bottom, nevertheless, it might puzzle one to say where the Government of France, in these days, specially is. In that Château of Versailles, we have Nestor, King, Queen, ministers and clerks, with paper-bundles tied in tape: but the Government? For Government is a thing that governs, that

that guides; and if need be, compels. Visible in France there is not such a thing. Invisible, inorganic, on the other hand, there is: in Philosophie saloons, in Œil-de-Bœuf galleries; in the tongue of the babbler, in the pen of the pamphleteer. Her Majesty appearing at the Opera is applauded; she returns all radiant with joy. Anon the applauses wax fainter, or threaten to cease; she is heavy of heart, the light of her face has fled. Is Sovereignty some poor Montgolfier; which, blown into by the popular wind, grows great and mounts; or sinks flaccid, if the wind be withdrawn? France was long a 'Despotism tempered by Epigrams'; and now, it would seem, the Epigrams have got the upper hand.

Happy were a young 'Louis the Desired' to make France happy; if it did not prove too troublesome, and he only knew the way. But there is endless discrepancy round him; so many claims and clamours; a mere confusion of tongues. Not reconcilable by man; not manageable, suppressible, save by some strongest and wisest man;—which only a lightly-jesting lightly-gyrating M. de Maurepas can so much as subsist amidst. Philosophism claims her new Era, meaning thereby innumerable things. And claims it in no faint voice; for France at large, hitherto mute, is now beginning to speak also; and speaks in that same sense. A huge, many-toned sound; distant, yet not unimpressive. On the other hand, the Œil-de-Bœuf, which, as nearest, one can hear best, claims with shrill vehemence that the Monarchy be as heretofore a Horn of Plenty; wherefrom loyal courtiers may draw,—to the just support of the throne. Let Liberalism and a New Era, if such is the wish, be introduced; only no curtailment of the royal moneys! Which latter condition, alas, is precisely the impossible one.

Philosophism, as we saw, has got her Turgot made Controller-General; and there shall be endless reformation. Unhappily this Turgot could continue only twenty months. With a miraculous Fortunatus' Purse in his Treasury, it might have lasted longer; with such Purse indeed, every French Controller-General, that would prosper in these days, ought first to provide himself. But here again may we not remark the bounty of Nature in regard to Hope? Man after man advances confident to the Augean Stable, as if he could clean it; expends his little fraction of an ability on it, with such cheerfulness; does, with an inexhaustible toughness and resource, like the skilfullest fencer; on whom, so skilful is he, the whole world now looks. Three long years it lasts, with wavering fortune. In fine, after labours comparable to the Twelve of Hercules, our unconquerable Caron triumphs; regains his Lawsuit and Law suits; strips Reporter Goetzman of the judicial ermine, covering him with a perpetual garment of obloquy instead—and in regard to the Parlement Maupeou (which he has helped to extinguish), to Parlements of all kinds, and to French Justice generally, gives rise to endless reflections in the minds of men. Thus has Beaumarchais, like a lean French Hercules, ventured down, driven by destiny, into the Nether Kingdoms, and victoriously tamed bell-dogs there. He also is henceforth among the notabilities of his generation.

BOOK II
1774-81

CHAPTER V

ASTREA REDUCED WITHOUT CASH

OBSERVE, however, beyond the Atlantic, has not the new day verily dawned! Democracy, as we said, is born, storm gut, is struggling for life and victory. A sympathetic France rejoices over the Rights of Man; in all saloons, it is said, What a spectacle! Now too behold our Deane, our Franklin, American Plenipotentiaries, here in person soliciting¹ the sons of the Saxon Puritans, with their Old Saxon temper, Old Hebrew culture, sleek Silas, sleek Benjamin, here on such errand, among the light children of Heathenism, Monarchy, Sentimentalism, and the Scarlet woman. A spectacle indeed, over which saloons may cackle joyous, though Kaiser Joseph, questioned on it, gave this answer, most unexpected from a Philosophe: ‘Madame, the trade I live by is that of rovalist (Mon métier à moi c’est d’être royaliste)’.

So thinks light Maurepas too, but the wind of Philosophism and force of public opinion will blow him round. Best wishes, meanwhile, are sent; clandestine privateers armed. Paul Jones shall equip his Bon Homme Richard weapons, military stores can be smuggled over (if the English do not seize them), wherein,

¹ 1777, Deane somewhat earlier. Franklin remained till 1785.

wherein, once more Beaumarchais, dimly as the Giant Smuggler, becomes visible,—filling his own lank pocket withal. But surely, in any case, France should have a Navy. For which great object were not now the time; now when that proud Termagant of the Seas has her hands full? It is true, an impoverished Treasury cannot build ships; but the hint once given (which Beaumarchais says he gave), this and the other loyal Seaport, Chamber of Commerce, will build and offer them. Goodly vessels bound into the waters; a Fille de Paris, Leviathan of ships.

CHAP. V
1776-05

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

And now when gratuitous three-deckers dance there at anchor, with streamers flying; and eleutheromaniac Philosphedom grows ever more clamorous, what can a Manrepas do—but gyrate? Squadrons cross the ocean: Gateses, Lees, rough Yankee Generals, 'with woollen night-caps under their hats,' present arms to the far-glancing Chivalry of France; and

BOOK II in the high places of the world, as Ministers Madame, and 1776-85 'Necker not jealous!'¹

A new young Demoiselle, one day to be famed as a Madame and De Staël, was romping about the knees of the Decline and Fall the lady Necker founds Hospitals, gives solemn Philosophic dinner parties to cheer her exhausted Controller General Strange things have happened by clamour of Philosophism management of Marquis de Pezay, and Poverty constraining even Kings And so Necker, Atlas like sustains the burden of the Finances, for five years long² Without wages, for he refused such, cheered only by Public Opinion and the ministering of his noble Wife With many thoughts in him it is hoped, —which, however, he is shy of uttering His Compte Rendu, published by the royal permission, fresh sign of a New Era, shows wonders,—which what hut the genius of some Atlas Necker can prevent from becoming portents? In Necker's head too there is a whole pacific French Revolution of its kind, and in that taciturn dull depth, or deep dulness ambition enough

Meanwhile, alas his Fortunatus' Purse turns out to be little other than the old 'lectical of Parsimony' Nay, he too has to produce his scheme of taxing Clergy, Noblesse to be taxed, Provincial Assemblies, and the rest,—like a mere Turgot! The expiring M de Maurepas must gyrate one other time Let Necker also depart, not unlamented

Great in a private station, Necker looks on from the distance, abiding his time 'Eighty thousand copies' of his new Book which he calls Administration des Finances, will be sold in few days He is gone, hut shall return, and that more than once, borne by a whole shouting Nation Singular Controller General of the Finances, once Clerk in Thellusson's Bank!

CHAPTER VI

WINDBAGS

So marches the world, in this its Paper Age, or Era of Hope Not without obstructions, war explosions, which, however,

¹ Gibbon's Letters date 16th June 1777, etc.

² Till May 1781 heard heard from such distance, are little other than a cheerful marching-music. If indeed that dark living chaos of Ignorance and Hunger, five-and-twenty million strong, under your feet,—were to begin playing !

CHAP. VI
1776-84

For the present, however, consider Longchamp ; now when Lent is ending, and the glory of Paris and France has gone forth, as in annual wont. Not to assist at Tenebris Masses, but to sun itself and show itself, and salute the young Spring.¹ Manifold, bright-tinted, glittering with gold ; all through the Bois de Boulogne, in longdrawn variegated rows ;—like longdrawn living flower-borders, tulips, dahlias, lilies of the valley ; all in their moving flower-pots (of new gilt carriages) : pleasure of the eye, and pride of life ! So rolls and dances the Procession : steady, of firm assurance, as if it rolled on adamant and the foundations of the world ; not on mere heraldic parchment,—under which smoulders a lake of fire. Dance on, ye foolish ones ; ye sought not wisdom, neither have ye found it. Ye and your fathers have sown the wind, ye shall reap the whirlwind. Was it not, from of old, written : The wages of sin is death ?

But at Longchamp, as elsewhere, we remark for one thing, that dame and cavalier are waited on each by a kind of human familiar, named jokei. Little elf, or imp ; though young, already withered ; with its withered air of premature vice, of knowingness, of completed elf-hood : useful in various emergencies. The name jokei (jockey) comes from the English ; as the thing also fancies that it does. Our Anglo-mania, in fact, is grown considerable ; prophetic of much. If France is to be free, why shall she not, now when mad war is hushed, love neighbouring Freedom ? Cultivated men, your Dukes de Liancourt, de la Rochefoucault admire the English Constitution, the English National Character ; would import what of it they can.

Of what is lighter, especially if it be light as wind, how much easier the freighting ! Non-Admiral Duke de Chartres (not yet d'Orléans or Égalité) flies to and fro across the Strait ; importing English Fashions : this he, as hand-and-glove with an English Prince of Wales, is surely qualified to do. Carriages and saddles ; top-boots and rédingotes, as we call riding-coats.

¹ Mercier, Tableau de Paris, ii. 51. Louvet, Roman de Faublas, etc.

BOOK II Nay the very mode of riding : for now no man on a level with [1776-84] his age but will trot à l'Anglaise, rising in the stirrups ; scornful of the old sitfast method, in which, according to Shakspeare, ' butter and eggs ' go to market. Also, he can urge the fervid wheels, this brave Chartres of ours ; no whip in Paris is rasher and surer than the unprofessional one of Monseigneur.

MARAT.

• Ell jockeis, we have seen ; but see now real Yorkshire jockeys, and what they ride on, and train : English racers for French Races. These likewise we owe first (under the Providence of the Devil) to Monseigneur. Prince d'Artois also has his stud of racers. Prince d'Artois has withal the strangest horseleech ; a moonstruck, much-enduring individual, of Neuchâtel in Switzerland,—named Jean Paul Marat. A problematic Chevalier d'Eon, now in petticoats, now in breeches, is no less problematic in

in London than in Paris ; and causes bets and lawsuits. Beautiful days of international communion ! Swindlery and Blackguardism have stretched hands across the Channel, and saluted mutually : on the racecourse of Vincennes or Sablons, behold, in English curriele-and-four, wafted glorious among the principalities and rascalities, an English Dr. Dodd,¹—for whom also the too early gallows gapes.

CHAP. VI
1776-84

Duke de Chartres was a young Princee of great promise, as young princes often are ; which promise unfortunately has belied itself. With the huge Orléans Property, with Duke de Penthièvre for Father-in-law (and now the young Brother-in-law Lamballe killed by excesses),—he will one day be the richest man in France. Meanwhile, 'his hair is all falling out, his blood is quite spoiled,'—by early transcendentalism of debauchery. Carbuncles stud his face ; dark studs on a ground of burnished copper. A most signal failure, this young Prince ! The stuff prematurely burnt out of him : little left but foul smoke and ashes of expiring sensualities : what might have been Thought, Insight, and even Conduct, gone now, or fast going,—to confused darkness, broken by bewildering dazzlements ; to obstreperous crotchets ; to activities which you may call semi-delirious, or even semi-galvanic ! Paris affects to laugh at his chariotteering ; but he heeds not such laughter.

On the other hand, what a day, not of laughter, was that, when he threatened, for lucre's sake, to lay sacrilegious hand on the Palais-Royal Garden !² The flower-parterres shall be riven up ; the Chestnut Avenues shall fall : time-honoured boscaes, under which the Opera Hamadryads were wont to wander, not inexorable to men. Paris moans aloud. Philidor, from his Café de la Régence, shall no longer look on greenness ; the loungers and losels of the world, where now shall they haunt ? In vain is moaning. The axe glitters ; the sacred groves fall crashing,—for indeed Monseigneur was short of money : the Opera Hamadryads fly with shrieks. Shriek not, ye Opera Hamadryads ; or not as those that have no comfort. He will surround your Garden with new edifices and piazzas : though narrowed, it shall be replanted ; dizened with hydraulic jets, cannon which the sun fires at noon ; things bodily, things spiritual,

¹ Adelung, Geschichte der menschlichen Narrheit, § Dodd.

² 1781-82. (Dulaure, viii. 423.)

BOOK II
1781-84

spiritual, such as man has not imagined,—and in the Palais Royal shall again, and more than ever, be the Sorcerer's Sabbath and Satan at Home of our Planet

What will not mortals attempt? From remote Annonay in the Vivarais, the Brothers Montgolfier send up their paper dome, filled with the smoke of burnt wool¹ The Vivarais Provincial Assembly is to be prorogued this same day Vivarais Assembly members applaud, and the shouts of congregated men Will victorious Analysis scale the very Heavens, then?

Paris bears with eager wonder, Paris shall ere long see From Réveillon's Paper warehouse there, in the Rue St Antoine (a noted Warehouse)—the new Montgolfier air ship launches itself Ducks and poultry have been borne skyward but now shall men be borne² Nay, Chemist Charles thinks of hydrogen and glazed silk Chemist Charles will bunsel ascend, from the Tuileries Garden, Montgolfier solemnly cutting the cord By Heaven, this Charles does also mount, he and another! Ten times ten thousand hearts go palpitating, all tongues are mute with wonder and fear,—till a shout, like the voice of seas, rolls after him, on his wild way He soars, he dwindles upwards, has become a mere gleaming circlet,—like some Turgotine snuffbox, what we call 'Turgotine Platitude', like some new daylight Moon! Finally he descends; welcomed by the universe Duchess Polignac, with a party, is in the Bois de Boulogne, waiting, though it is drizzly winter, the 1st of December 1783 The whole chivalry of France, Duke de Chartres foremost, gallops to receive him³

Beautiful invention, mounting heavenward, so beautifully,—so unguidably! Emblem of much, and of our Age of Hope itself, which shall mount, specifically light, majestically in this same manner, and hover,—tumbling whither Fate will Well if it do not, Pilâtre like, explode, and demount all the more tragically!—So, riding on windbags, will men scale the Empyrean

Or observe Herr Doctor Mesmer, in his spacious Magnetic Halls Long stoled he walks, reverend, glancing upwards, as in rapt commerce, an Antique Egyptian Hierophant in this new age Soft music fluts, breaking fitfully the sacred stillness Round their Magnetic Mystery, which to the eye is 'mere tubs with water,—sit breathless, rod in hand, the circles of Beauty and Fashion, each circle a living circular Passion-Flower: expecting the magnetic afflatus, and new-manufactured Heaven-on-Earth. O women, O men, great is your infidel-faith! A Parleментарy Duport, a Bergasse, D'Espréménil we notice there; Chemist Berthollet too,—on the part of Monseigneur de Chartres.

¹ 5th June 1783 ² October and November 1783 ³ Lacretelle, 18me Siècle lib. 258.

CHAP. VI
1781-84

Had not the Academy of Sciences, with its Baillys, Franklins, Lavoisiers, interfered! But it did interfere.¹ Mesmer may pocket his hard money, and withdraw. Let him walk silent by the shore of the Bodensee, by the ancient town of Constance; meditating on much. For so, under the strangest new vesture, the old great truth (since no vesture can hide it) begins again to be revealed: That man is what we call a miraculous creature, with miraculous power over men; and, on the whole, with such a Life in him, and such a World round him, as victorious Analysis, with her Physiologies, Nervous-systems, Physic and Metaphysic, will never completely name, to say nothing of explaining. Wherein also the Quack shall, in all ages, come in for his share.

CHAPTER VII

CONTRAT SOCIAL

IN such succession of singular prismatic tints, flush after flush suffusing our horizon, does the Era of Hope dawn on towards fulfilment. Questionable! As indeed, with an Era of Hope that rests on mere universal Benevolence, victorious Analysis, Vice cured of its deformity; and, in the longrun, on Twenty-five dark savage Millions, looking up, in hunger and weariness, to that Ecce-signum of theirs 'forty feet high,'—how could it but be questionable?

Through all time, if we read aright, sin was, is, will be, the parent of misery. This land calls itself most Christian, and has crosses and cathedrals; but its High-priest is some Roche-Aymon, some Neeklace-Cardinal Louis de Rohan. The voice of the poor, through long years, ascends inarticulate, in in this wild Universe, which storms in on him, infinite, vague menacing, shall poor man find say not happiness but existence, and footing to stand on, if it be not by girding himself together for continual endeavour and endurance? Wo, if in his heart there dwelt no devout Faith, if the word Duty had lost its meaning for him! For as to this of Sentimentalism, so useful for weeping with over romances and on pathetic occasions, it otherwise verily will avail nothing, nay less. The healthy heart that said to itself, 'How healthy am I!' was already fallen into the fatalest sort of disease. Is not Sentimentalism twin sister to Cant, if not one and the same with it? Is not Cant the materia prima of the Devil, from which all falsehoods, imbecilities, abominations body themselves, from which no true thing can come? For Cant is itself properly a double-distilled Lie, the second power of a Lie.

¹ August 1784.

BOOK II
1781-83

And now if a whole Nation fall into that? In such case, I answer, infallibly they will return out of it! For life is no cunningly-devised deception or self-deception. It is a great truth that thou art alive, that thou hast desires, necessities, neither can these subsist and satisfy themselves on delusions, but on fact. To fact, depend on it, we shall come back. To such fact, blessed or cursed, as we have wisdom for. The lowest, least blessed fact one knows of, on which necessitous mortals have ever based themselves, seems to be the primitive one of Cannibalism. That I can devour Thee. What if such Primitive Fact were precisely the one we had (with our improved methods) to revert to, and begin anew from!

CHAPTER VIII

PRINTED PAPER

IN such a practical France, let the theory of Perfectibility say what it will, discontents cannot be wanting. Your promised Reformation is so indispensable, yet it comes not, who will begin it—with himself? Discontent with what is around us still more with what is above us, goes on increasing, seeking ever new vents.

Of Street Ballads, of Epigrams that from of old tempered Despotism,

Désotism, we need not speak. Nor of Manuscript Newspapers (Nouvelles à la main) do we speak. Bachaumont and his journeymen and followers may close those 'thirty volumes of scurrilous eaves-dropping,' and quit that trade; for at length if not liberty of the Press, there is licence. Pamphlets can be surreptitiously vended and read in Paris, did they even bear to be 'Printed at Pekin.' We have a Courrier de l'Europe in those years, regularly published at London; by a De Morande,

CHAP. VIII
1784-86

CAGLIOSTRO.

whom the guillotine has not yet devoured. There too an unruly Linguet, still unguillotined, when his own country has become too hot for him, and his brother Advocates have cast him out, can emit his hoarse wailings, and Bastille Dévoilée (Bastille Unveiled). Loquacious Abbé Raynal, at length, has his wish; sees the Histoire Philosophique, with its 'lubricity,' unveracity, loose loud eleutheromaniac rant (contributed, they say, by Philosophedom at large, though in the Abbé's name, and to his glory), burnt by the common hangman;—and sets out on his travels as a martyr. It was the Edition of 1781; perhaps the

BOOK II
1784-86

fast going the obedience that made men slaves,—at least to one another Slaves only of their own lusts they now are, and will be Slaves of sin, inevitably also of sorrow Behold the mouldering mass of Sensuality and Falschood, round which plays foolishly, itself a corrupt phosphorescence, some glimmer of Sentimentalism,—and over all, rising, as Ark of their Covenant, the grim Patibulary Fork 'forty feet high', which also is now nigh rotted Add only that the French Nation distinguishes itself among Nations by the characteristic of Excitability, with the good, but also with the perilous evil, which belongs to that Rebellion, explosion, of unknown extent is to be calculated on There are, as Chesterfield wrote, 'all the symptoms I have ever met with in History'!

Shall we say, then Wo to Philosophism, that it destroyed Religion, what it called 'extinguishing the abomination (écraser l'infâme)'? Wo rather to those that made the Holy an abomination, and extinguishable, wo to all men that live in such a time of world abomination and world destruction! Nay, answer the Courtiers, it was Turgot, it was Necker, with their mad innovating, it was the Queen's want of etiquette, it was he, it was she, it was that Friends! it was every scoundrel that had lived, and quack like pretended to be doing, and been only eating and misdoing, in all provinces of life, as Shoeblack or as Sovereign Lord, each in his degree, from the time of Charlemagne and earlier All this (for be sure no falsehood perishes, but is as seed sown out to grow) has been storing itself for thousands of years, and now the account day has come And rude will the settlement be of wrath laid up against the day of wrath O my Brother, be not thou a Quack! Die rather, if thou wilt take counsel, 'tis hut dying once, and thou art quit of it for ever Cursed is that trade, and bears curses thou knowest not bow, long ages after thou art departed, and the wages thou hadst are all consumed, nay, as the ancient wise have written,—through Eternity itself, and is verily marked in the Doom Book of a God!

Hope deferred maketh the heart sick And yet, as we said, Hope is hut deferred, not abolished, not abolishable It is very notable, and touching, how this same Hope does still light onwards the French Nation through all its wild destinies For we shall still find Hope shining, be it for fond invitation, be it for anger and menace; as a mild heavenly light it shone, as 'a red conflagration it shines : burning sulphurous-blue, through darkest regions of Terror, it still shines ; and goes not out at all, since Desperation itself is a kind of Hope. Thus is our Era still to be named of Hope, though in the saddest sense,—when there is nothing left but Hope.

as

CHAP. VIII
1784-86

But if any one would know summarily what a Pandora's Box lies there for the opening, he may see it in what by its nature is the symptom of all symptoms, the surviving Literature of the Period. Abbé Raynal, with his lubricity and loud loose rant, has spoken his word ; and already the fast-hastening generation responds to another. Glance at Beaumarchais' Mariage de Figaro ; which now (in 1784), after difficulty enough, has issued on the stage ; and ' runs its hundred nights,' to the admiration of all men. By what virtue or internal vigour it so ran, the reader of our day will rather wonder :—and indeed will know so much the better that it flattered some pruriency of the time ; that it spoke what all were feeling, and longing to speak. Small substance in that Figaro : thin wiredrawn intrigues, thin wiredrawn sentiments and sarcasms ; a thing lean, barren ; yet which winds and whisks itself, as through a wholly mad universe, adroitly, with a high-sniffing air : wherein each, as was hinted, which is the grand secret, may see some image of himself, and of his own state and ways. So it runs its hundred nights, and all France runs with it ; laughing applause. If the soliloquising Barber ask : ' What has your Lordship done to earn all this ? ' and can only answer : ' You took the trouble to be born (Vous vous êtes donné la peine de naître),' all men must laugh : and a gay horse-racing Anglo-maniac Noblesse loudest of all. For how can small books have a great danger in them ? asks the Sieur Caron ; and fancies his thin epigram may be a kind of reason. Conqueror of a golden fleece, by giant smuggling ; tamer of hell-dogs, in the Parlement Maupeou ; and finally crowned Orpheus in the Théâtre Français, Beaumarchais has now culminated, and unites the attributes of several demigods. We shall meet him once again, in the course of his decline.

Still more significant are two Books produced on the eve of the ever-memorable Explosion itself, and read eagerly by all the world : Saint-Pierre's Paul et Virginie, and Louvet's Chevalier de Faublas. Noteworthy Books ; which may be considered that he might be looked up to by his fellow creatures. How shall he in all Philosophe soirées and saloons of elegant culture, become notable as a Friend of Darkness? Among the Paris Long robes there may be more than one patriotie Malesherbes whose rule is conscience and the public good, there are clearly more than one hotheaded D'Espréménil to whose confused thought any loud reputation of the Brutus sort may seem glorious. The Lepelletiers Lamoignons have titles and wealth, yet, at Court, are only styled 'Noblesse of the Robe'. There are Duports of deep scheme, Fréteaus Sabatiers of incontinent tongue all nursed more or less on the milk of the Contrat Social. Nay, for the whole Body, is not this patriotie opposition also a fighting for oneself? Awake Parlement of Paris renew thy long warfare! Was not the Parlement Maupeou abolished with ignominy? Not now hast thou to dread a Louis XIV with the crack of his whip and his Olympian looks not now a Richelieu and Bastilles no the whole Nation is behind thee. Thou too (O heavens!) mayest become a Political Power, and with the shakings of thy horse hair wig shake principalities and dynasties like a very Jove with his ambrosial curls!

BOOK III
1781-83

Light old M de Maurepas since the end of 1781, has been fixed in the frost of death. 'Never more' said the good Louis 'shall I hear his step in the room there overhead', his light jestings and gyratings are at an end. No more can the importunate reality be hidden by pleasant wit, and today a evil be deftly rolled over upon tomorrow. The morrow itself has arrived, and now nothing but a solid phlegmatic M de Vergennes sits there in dull matter of fact, like some dull punctual Clerk (which he originally was), admits what cannot be denied let the remedy come whence it will. In him is no remedy, only clerklike 'despatch of business' according to routine. The poor King grown older yet hardly more experienced must himself with such no-faculty as he has begin governing, wherein also his Queen will give help. Bright Queen with her quick clear glances and impulses, clear, and even noble, but all too superficial vehement shallow for that work! To govern France were such a problem, and now it has grown well nigh too hard to govern even the Ciel-de-Bœuf. For if a distressed People has its cry, so likewise and more audibly, has a bereaved Court. To the Ciel-de-Bœuf it remains inconceivable inconceivable how, in a France of such resources, the Horn of Plenty should run dry: did it not use to flow? Nevertheless Necker, with his revenue of parsimony, has 'suppressed above six hundred places,' before the Courtiers could oust him; parsimonious finance-pedant as he was. Again, a military pedant, Saint-Germain, with his Prussian manœuvres; with his Prussian notions, as if merit and not coat-of-arms should be the rule of promotion, has disaffected military men; the Mousquetaires, with much else are suppressed: for he too was one of your suppressors; and unsettling and oversetting, did mere mischief—to the Œil-de-Bœuf. Complaints abound; scarcity, anxiety: it is a changed Œil-de-Bœuf. Besenval says, already in these years (1781) there was such a melancholy (such a tristesse) about Court, compared with former days, as made it quite dispiriting to look upon.

No wonder that the Œil-de-Bœuf feels melancholy, when you are suppressing its places! Not a place can be suppressed but some purse is the lighter for it; and more than one heart the heavier; for did it not employ the working-classes too,—manufacturers, male and female, of laces, essences; of Pleasure generally, whosoever could manufacture Pleasure? Miserable economies; never felt over Twenty-five Millions! So, however it goes on: and is not yet ended. Few years more and the Wolf-hounds shall fall suppressed, the Bear-hounds, the Falconry; places shall fall, thick as autumnal leaves. Duke de Polignac demonstrates, to the complete silencing of ministerial logic, that his place cannot be abolished; then gallantly, turning to the Queen, surrenders it, since her Majesty so wishes. Less chivalrous was Duke de Coigny, and yet not luckier: 'We got into a real quarrel, Coigny and I,' said King Louis; 'but if he had even struck me, I could not have blamed him.'¹ In regard to such matters there can be but one opinion. Baron Besenval, with that frankness of speech which stamps the independent man, plainly assures her Majesty that it is frightful (affreux); 'you go to bed, and are not sure but you shall rise impoverished on the morrow: one might as well be in Turkey.' It is indeed a dog's life.

How singular this perpetual distress of the royal treasury! And yet it is a thing not more incredible than undeniable. A thing mournfully true: the stumbling-block on which all

¹ Besenval, iii. 255-58.

BOOK III
April May 1787

me what sauce I shall dress you with', to which a Cock responded ing, 'We don't want to be caten,' is checked by 'You wander from the point (Vous vous écartez de la question)' ¹ Laughter and logic, ballad singer, pamphleteer, epigram and caricature what wind of public opinion is this,—as if the Cave of the Winds were bursting loose! At nightfall, President Lamoignon steals over to the Controller's, finds him 'walking with large strides in his chamber, like one out of himself' ² With rapid confused speech the Controller begs M de Lamoignon to give him 'an advice' Lamoignon candidly answers that, except in regard to his own anticipated Keepership, unless that would prove remedial, he really cannot take upon him to advise

'On the Monday after Easter,' the 9th of April 1787, a date one rejoices to verify, for nothing can excel the indolent falsehood of these Histoires and Mémoires,—'On the Monday after Easter, as I, Resenval was riding towards Romainville to the Maréchal de Ségur's, I met a friend on the Boulevards, who told me that M de Calonne was out A little farther on came M the Duke d'Orléans dashing towards me, head to the wind' (trotting à l'Anglaise), 'and confirmed the news' ³ It is true news Treacherous Garde des Sceaux Mitoménal is gone, and Lamoignon is appointed in his room but appointed for his own profit only, not for the Controller's 'next day' the Controller also has had to move A little longer he may linger near, be seen among the money changers, and even 'working in the Controller's office,' where much lies unfinished but neither will that hold Too strong blows and beats this tempest of public opinion, of private intrigue ns from the Cave of all the Winds, and blows him (higher Authority giving sign) out of Paris and France,—over the horizon, into Invisibility, or outer Darkness

Such destiny the magic of genius could not for ever avert Ungrateful Œil de Bœuf! did he not miraculously rain gold manna on you, so that, as a Courtier said, 'All the world held out its hand and I held out my hat,'—for a time? Him self is poor, penniless, had not n' Financier's widow in Lorraine' offered him, though he was turned of fifty, her hand and the rich purse it held Dim henceforth shall be his activity, though unwearied Letters to the King, Appeals, Prognostications,

¹ Republished in the Musée de la Caricature (Paris 1834)

² Resenval i. c. 209.

³ JS lii. 212

Pamphlets (from London), written with the old suasive facility ; which however do not persuade. Luckily his widow's purse fails not. Once, in a year or two, some shadow of him shall be seen hovering on the Northern Border, seeking election as National Deputy ; but be sternly beckoned away. Dimmer then, far-borne over utmost European lands, in uncertain twilight of diplomacy, he shall hover, intriguing for ' Exiled Princes,' and have adventures ; be overset into the Rhine-stream and half-drowned, nevertheless save his papers dry. Unwearied, but in vain ! In France he works miracles no more ; shall hardly return thither to find a grave. Farewell, thou facile sanguine Controller-General, with thy light rash hand, thy suasive mouth of gold : worse men there have been, and better ; but to thee also was allotted a task,—of raising the wind, and the winds ; and thou hast done it.

CHAP. III
April-May 1787

But now, while Ex-Controller Calonne flies storm-driven over the horizon, in this singular way, what has become of the Controllershship ? It hangs vacant, one may say ; extinct, like the Moon in her vacant interlunar cave. Two preliminary shadows, poor M. Fourqueux, poor M. Villedeuil, do hold, in quick succession, some simulacrum of it,¹—as the new Moon will sometimes shine out with a dim preliminary old one in her arms. Be patient, ye Notables ! An actual new Controller is certain, and even ready ; were the indispensable manœuvres but gone through. Long-headed Lamoignon, with Home-Secretary Breteuil, and Foreign-Secretary Montmorin have exchanged looks ; let these three once meet and speak. Who is it that is strong in the Queen's favour, and the Abbé de Vermond's ? That is a man of great capacity ? Or at least that has struggled, these fifty years, to have it thought great ; now, in the Clergy's name, demanding to have Protestant death-penalties ' put in execution ' ; now flaunting it in the Œil-de-Bœuf, as the gayest man-pleaser and woman-pleaser ; gleaning even a good word from Philosophedom and your Voltaires and D'Alemberts ? That has a party ready-made for him in the Notables ?—Loménie de Brienne, Archbishop of Toulouse ! answer all the three, with the clearest instantaneous concord ; and rush off to propose him to the King ; ' in such haste,' says Besenval, ' that M. de Lamoignon had to borrow a

¹ Besenval, iii. 225.

BOOK III
May-June 1787 seigneur, and even better than that '—'Write it,' said Mon seigneur to the Clerks¹—Written accordingly it is, and what is more, will be acted by and by

CHAPTER IV

LOMÉNIE'S EDICTS

THUS, then, have the Notables returned home, carrying, to all quarters of France, such notions of desist, decrepitude, distraction, and that States General will cure it, or will not cure it but kill it. Each Notable, we may fancy, is as a funereal torch, disclosing hideous abysses, better left hid! The unquietest humour possesses all men, ferments, seeks issue, in pamphleteering, caricaturing, projecting, declaiming, vain jangling of thought, word, and deed.

It is Spiritual Bankruptcy, long tolerated, verging now toward Economical Bankruptcy, and become intolerable. For from the lowest dumb rank, the inevitable misery, as was predicted, has spread upwards. In every man is some obscure feeling that his position oppressive or else oppressed, is a false one—all men in one or the other acrid dialect, as assaulters or as defenders, must give vent to the unrest that is in them. Of such stuff national well being, and the glory of rulers is not made. O Loménie, what a wild heaving, waste looking, hungry and angry world hast thou, after life long effort, got promoted to take charge of!

Loménie's first Edicts are mere soothing ones—creation of Provincial Assemblies, 'for apportioning the imposts,' when we get any, suppression of Corvées or statute labour, alleviation of Gabelle. Soothing measures recommended by the Notables, long clamoured for by all liberal men. Oil cast on the waters has been known to produce a good effect. Before venturing with great essential measures, Loménie will see this singular 'swell of the public mind' abate somewhat.

Most proper, surely. But what if it were not a swell of the ¹Toulongeon, Histoire de France depuis la Révolution de 1789 (Paris 1803), t. I. pp. 4.

abating

abating kind ? There are swells that come of upper tempest and wind-gust. But again there are swells that come of subterranean pent wind, some say ; and even of inward decomposition, of decay that has become self-combustion :—as when, according to Neptuno-Plutonic Geology, the World is all decayed down into due attritus of this sort ; and shall now be exploded, and new-made ! These latter abate not by oil.—The fool says in his heart, How shall not tomorrow be as yesterday ; as all days,—which were once tomorrows ? The wise man, looking on this France, moral, intellectual, economical, sees, ‘ in short, all the symptoms he has ever met with in history,’—unabatable by soothing Edicts.

CHAP. IV
May-June
1787

Meanwhile, abate or not, cash must be had ; and for that, quite another sort of Edicts, namely ‘ bursal ’ or fiscal ones. How easy were fiscal Edicts, did you know for certain that the Parlement of Paris would what they call ‘ register ’ them ! Such right of registering, properly of mere writing down, the Parlement has got by old wont ; and, though but a Law-Court, can remonstrate, and higgie considerably about the same. Hence many quarrels ; desperate Maupeou devices, and victory and defeat ;—a quarrel now near forty years long. Hence fiscal Edicts, which otherwise were easy enough, become such problems. For example, is there not Calonne’s Subvention Territoriale, universal, unexempting Land-tax ; the sheet-anchor of Finance ? Or, to show, so far as possible, that one is not without original finance talent, Loménie himself can devise an Édit du Timbre or Stamp-tax,—borrowed also, it is true ; but then from America : may it prove luckier in France than there !

France has her resources : nevertheless, it cannot be denied, the aspect of that Parlement is questionable. Already among the Notables, in that final symphony of dismissal, the Paris President had an ominous tone. Adrien Duport, quitting magnetic sleep, in this agitation of the world, threatens to rouse himself into preternatural wakefulness. Shallower but also louder, there is magnetic D’Espréménil, with his tropical heat (he was born at Madras) ; with his dusky confused violence ; holding of Illumination, Animal Magnetism, Public Opinion, Adam Weisshaupt, Harmodius and Aristogiton, and all manner of confused violent things : of whom can come no good. The very Peerage is infected with the leaven. Our Peers have, in too many cases, laid aside their frogs, laces bagwigs, and go about in English costume, or ride rising in their stirrups — in the most headlong manner, nothing but insubordination, eleuthetomania, confused unlimited opposition in their heads. Questionable not to be ventured upon if we had a Fortunatus' Purse! But Lomenie has waited all June, casting on the waters what oil he had, and now, betide as it may, the two Finance Edicts must out. On the 6th of July, he forwards his proposed Stamp tax and Land tax to the Parlement of Paris, and as if putting his own leg foremost, not his borrowed Calonne's - leg, places the Stamp tax first in order.

BOOK III
May-June 1787

D'ESPRIN del.

Alas the Parlement will not register the Parlement demands instead a 'state of the expenditure' a 'state of the contemplated reductions', 'states' enough, which his Majesty must decline to furnish! Discussions arise, patriotic eloquence the Peers are summoned Does the Nemean Lion begin to bristle? Here surely is a duel, which France and the Universe may look upon with prayers, at lowest, with curiosity and bets. Paris stirs with new animation. The outer courts of the Palais de Justice roll with unusual crowds coming and going, their huge outer hum mingles with the clang of patriotic eloquence within, and gives vigour to it. Poor Lomenie gazes from the distance, little comforted, has his invisible emissaries flying to and fro, assiduous, without result.

So pass the sultry dog-days in the most electric manner; and the whole month of July. And still in the Sanctuary of Justice, sounds nothing but Harmodius Aristogiton eloquence, environed enviored with the hum of crowding Paris; and accomplished, and no 'states' furnished. 'S lively Parlementeer: 'Messieurs, the states t furnished us, in my opinion are the STATES- which timely joke there follow cachinnatory buzz What a word to be spoken in the Palais de D'Ormesson (the Ex-Controller's uncle) shakes head; far enough from laughing. But the and Paris and France, catch the glad sound, a shall repeat it, and re-echo and reverberate it a deafening peal. Clearly enough here is no be thought of.

The pious Proverb says, 'There are remedies, but death.' When a Parlement refuses registering by long practice, has become familiar to the sim of Justice. One complete month this Parlement mere idle jargonning, and sound and fury; the not registered, or like to be; the Subvention not as spoken of. On the 6th of August let the whole Body roll out, in wheeled vehicles, as far as the Ki of Versailles; there shall the King, holding his Be order them, by his own royal lips, to register. T monstrate, in an under tone; but they must obey, unknown thing befall them.

It is done: the Parlement has rolled out, on royal has heard the express royal order to register. it has rolled back again, amid the hushed expecta And now, behold, on the morrow, this Parlement, more in its own Palais, with 'crowds inundating courts,' not only does not register, but (O porten all that was done on the prior day to be null, and Justice as good as a futility! In the history of verily is a new feature. Nay better still, our heroic getting suddenly enlightened on several things, de for its part, it is incompetent to register Tax-edict having done it by mistake, during these late centu for such act one authority only is competent: the Three Estates of the Realm!

To such length can the universal spirit of a Na trate the most isolated Body-corporate: say rather,

no registering CHAP. IV states?' said a July 1787 that should be GENERAL.' On es of approval.
Justice! Old his judicious outer courts, and repeat it;
till it grow registering to for all things the remedy, plest: a Bed has spent in Timbre Edict yet so much le refractory ng's Château

d of Justice, they may re-lest a worse

l summons; Whereupon
ncy of men.
seated once the outer t!) declares the Bed of France here Parlement, clares that,
s at all,— ries; that assembled

tion penewith such weapons,

BOOK III
July 1787

weapons, homicidal and suicidal, in exasperated political duel, will Bodies corporate fight! But, in any case, is not this the real death grapple of war and internecine duel, Greek meeting Greek; whereon men, had they even no interest in it, might look with interest unspeakable? Crowds, as was said, inundate the outer courts— inundation of young eleutheromaniae Noblemen in English costume, uttering audacious speeches, of Procureurs, Basoche Clerks, who are idle in these days, of Loungers, Newsmongers and other nondescript classes,—rolls tumultuous there ‘From three to four thousand persons,’ waiting eagerly to hear the Arrêts (Resolutions) you arrive at within, applauding with bravos, with the clapping of from six to eight thousand hands! Sweet also is the meed of patriotic eloquence, when your D Espréménil, your Fréteau, or Sabatier, issuing from his Demosthenic Olympus, the thunder being hushed for the day, is welcomed, in the outer courts, with a shout from four thousand throats, is borne home shoulder high ‘with benedictions,’ and strikes the stars with his sublime head

CHAPTER V

LOMFNIE'S THUNDERBOLTS

ARISE, Loménie Brienne here is no case for ‘Letters of Jussion’, for faltering or compromise Thou seest the whole loose fluent population of Paris (whatsoever is not solid, and fixed to work) inundating these outer courts like a loud destructive deluge; the very Basoche of Lawyers’ Clerks talks sedition The lower classes, in this duel of Authority with Authority, Greek throttling Greek, have ceased to respect the City Watch Police satellites are marked on the back with chalk (the M signifies mouchard, spy), they are hustled hunted like feræ naturæ Subordinate rural Tribunals send messengers of congratulation, of adherence Their Fountain of Justice is becoming a Fountain of Revolt The Provincial Parlements look on with intent eye, with breathless wishes, while their elder sister of Paris does battle the whole Twelve are of one blood and temper; the victory of one is that of all

Ever worse it grows. on the 10th of August, there is ‘Plainte’ emitted

emitted touching the 'prodigalities of Calonne,' and permission to 'proceed' against him. No registering, but instead of it, denouncing: of dilapidation, peculation; and ever the burden of the song, States-General! Have the royal armories no thunderbolt, that thou couldst, O Loménie, with red right-hand, launch it among these Demosthenic theatrical thunder-barrels, mere resin and noise for most part;—and shatter, and smite them silent? On the night of the 14th of August, Loménie launches his thunderbolt, or handful of them. Letters named of the Seal (de Cachet), as many as needful, some six-score and odd, are delivered overnight. And so, next day betimes, the whole Parlement, once more set on wheels, is rolling incessantly towards Troyes in Champagne; 'escorted,' says History, 'with the blessings of all people'; the very inn-keepers and postilions looking gratuitously reverent.¹ This is the 15th of August 1787.

CHAP. V
Aug. 1787

What will not people bless; in their extreme need! Seldom had the Parlement of Paris deserved much blessing, or received much. An isolated Body-corporate, which, out of old confusions (while the Sceptre of the Sword was confusedly struggling to become a Sceptre of the Pen), had got itself together, better and worse, as Bodies-corporate do, to satisfy some dim desire of the world, and many clear desires of individuals; and so had grown, in the course of centuries, on concession, on acquirement and usurpation, to be what we see it: a prosperous Social Anomaly, deciding Lawsuits, sanctioning or rejecting Laws; and withal disposing of its places and offices by sale for ready-money,—which method sleek President Hénault, after meditation, will demonstrate to be the indifferent-best.²

In such a Body, existing by purchase for ready-money, there could not be excess of public spirit; there might well be excess of eagerness to divide the public spoil. Men in helmets have divided that, with swords; men in wigs, with quill and ink-horn, do divide it: and even more hatefully these latter, if more peaceably; for the wig-method is at once irresistible and baser. By long experience, says Besenval, it has been found useless to sue a Parlementeer at law; no Officer of Justice will serve a writ on one: his wig and gown are his Vulcan's-panoply, his enchanted cloak-of-darkness.

¹ A. Lameth, Histoire de l'Assemblée Constituante (Int. 73).

² Abrégé Chronologique, p. 975.

BOOK III
July 1787

The Parlement of Paris may count itself an unloved body, mean, not magnanimous on the political side. Were the King weak, nwynys (as now) has his Parlement barked ear like at his heels, with what popular cry there might be. Were he strong, it barked before his face, hunting for him as his alert beagle. An unjust Body, where foul influences have more than once worked shameful perversion of judgment. Does not, in these very days, the blood of murdered Lally cry aloud for vengeance? Baited, circumvented, driven mad like the snared lion, Valour had to sink extinguished under vindictive Chicane. Behold him, that hapless Lally, his wild dark soul looking through his wild dark face, trailed on the ignominious death hurdle, the voice of his despair choked by a wooden gag! The wild fire soul that has known only peril and toil, and, for three score years, has buffeted against Fate's obstruction and men's perfidy, like genius and courage amid poltroonery, dishonesty and commonplacé, faithfully enduring and endeavouring,—O Parlement of Paris dost thou reward it with a gibbet and a gag? ¹ The dying Lally bequeathed his memory to his boy, a young Lally has arisen demanding redress in the name of God and man. The Parlement of Paris does its utmost to defend the indefensible, abominable, nay, what is singular, dusky glowing Aristogiton d'Espréménil is the man chosen to be its spokesman in that Such Social Anomaly is it that France now blesses. An unequal Social Anomaly, but in duel against another worse! The exiled Parlement is felt to have 'covered itself with glory.' There are quarrels in which even Satan bringing help were not unwelcome, even Satan, fighting stiffly, might cover himself with glory,—of a temporary sort.

But what a stir in the outer courts of the Palais, when Paris finds its Parlement trundled off to Troyes in Champagne, and nothing left but a few mute Keepers of Records, the Democratic thunder become extinct, the martyrs of liberty clean gone! Confused wail and menace rises from the four thousand throats of Procureurs, Basoche Clerks, Nondescripts, and Anglomaniac Noblesse, ever new idlers crowd to see and hear, Rascality, with increasing numbers and vigour, hunts mouchards. Loud whirlpool rolls through these spaces; the rest of the City, fixed to its work, cannot yet go rolling. Audacious placards are legible; in and about the Palais, the speeches are as good as seditious. Surely the temper of Paris is much changed. On the third day of this business (18th of August), Monsieur and Monseigneur d'Artois, coming in state-carriages, according to use and wont, to have these late obnoxious Arrêts and Protests 'expunged' from the Records, are received in the most marked manner. Monsieur, who is thought to be in opposition, is met with vivats and strewed flowers: Monseigneur, on the other hand, with silence; with murmurs, which rise to hisses and groans; nay an irreverent Rascality presses towards him in floods, with such hissing vehemence, that the Captain of the Guards has to give order, 'Haut les armes (Handle arms)!'—at which thunder-word, indeed, and the flash of the clear iron, the Rascal-flood recoils, through all avenues, fast enough.¹ New features these. Indeed, as good M. de Malesherbes pertinently remarks, 'it is a quite new kind of contest this with the Parlements': no transitory splutter, as from collision of hard bodies; but more like 'the first sparks of what, if not quenched, may become a great conflagration.'²

¹ 9th May 1766: Biograph & L'Année 3 Lally

This good Malesherbes sees himself now again in the King's Council, after an absence of ten years: Loménie would profit if not by the faculties of the man, yet by the name he has. As for the man's opinion, it is not listened to;—wherefore he will soon withdraw, a second time; back to his books and his trees. In such King's Council what can a good man profit? Turgot tries it not a second time: Turgot has quitted France and this Earth, some years ago; and now cares for none of these things. Singular enough: Turgot, this same Loménie, and the Abbé Morellet were once a trio of young friends; fellow-scholars in the Sorbonne. Forty new years have carried them severally thus far.

Meanwhile the Parlement sits daily at Troyes, calling cases; and daily adjourns, no Procureur making his appearance to plead. Troyes is as hospitable as could be looked for: nevertheless one has comparatively a dull life. No crowds now to carry you, shoulder-high, to the immortal gods; scarcely a Patriot or two will drive out so far, and bid you be of firm courage. You are in furnished lodgings, far from home and domestic

¹ Montgaillard, i. 369. Besenval, etc.² Montgaillard, i. 373.

BOOK III
Aug. Sept.
1787

domestic comfort little to do but wander over the unlovely Champagne fields, seeing the grapes ripen, taking counsel about the thousand times consulted a prey to tedium, in danger even that Paris may forget you. Messengers come and go—pacific Lomenie is not slack in negotiating promising, D'Ormesson and the prudent elder Members see no good in strife.

After a dull month the Parlement, yielding and retaining makes truce, as all Parlements must. The Stamp tax is withdrawn the Subvention Land tax is also withdrawn, but in its stead there is granted what they call a 'Prorogation of the Second Twentieth'—itself a kind of Land tax, but not so oppressive to the Influential classes, which lies mainly on the Dumb class. Moreover, secret promises exist (on the part of the Elders) that finances may be mised by Loan. Of the ugly word States General there shall be no mention.

And so, on the 20th of September, our exiled Parlement returns. D'Espréménil said 'it went out covered with glory, but had come back covered with mud (de boue). Not so, Aristogiton, or if so, thou surely art the man to clean it.

CHAPTER VI

LOMÉNIE'S PLOTS

Was ever unfortunate Chief Minister so bestead as Loménie-Brienne? The reins of the State fairly in his hand these six months, and not the smallest motive power (of Finance) to stir from the spot with this way or that! He flourishes his whip but advances not. Instead of ready money, there is nothing but rebellious debating and recalcitrating.

Far is the public mind from having calmed, it goes chafing and fuming ever worse and in the royal coffers with such yearly Deficit running on there is hardly the colour of coin. Ominous prognostics! Malesherbes seeing an exhausted exasperated France grow hotter and hotter talks of 'consolation'. Mirabeau without talk, has as we perceive descended on Paris again close on the rear of the Parlement,¹—not to quit his native soil any more.

¹ Paris, 10 Sept. 1787

Over the Frontiers, behold Holland invaded by Prussia ;¹ the French party oppressed, England and the Stadtholder triumphing : to the sorrow of War-secretary Montmorin and all men. But without money, sinews of war, as of work, and of existence itself, what can a Chief Minister do ? Taxes profit little : this of the Second Twentieth falls not due till next year ; and will then, with its 'strict valuation,' produce more controversy than cash. Taxes on the Privileged Classes cannot be got registered ; are intolerable to our supporters themselves : taxes on the Unprivileged yield nothing,—as from a thing drained dry more cannot be drawn. Hope is nowhere, if not in the old refuge of Loans.

To Loménie, aided by the long head of Lamoignon, deeply pondering this sea of troubles, the thought suggested itself : Why not have a Successive Loan (Emprunt Successif), or Loan that went on lending, year after year, as much as needful ; say, till 1792 ? The trouble of registering such Loan were the same : we had then breathing time ; money to work with, at least to subsist on. Edict of a Successive Loan must be proposed. To conciliate the Philosophes, let a liberal Edict walk in front of it, for emancipation of Protestants ; let a liberal Promise guard the rear of it, that when our Loan ends, in that final 1792, the States-General shall be convoked.

Such liberal Edict of Protestant Emancipation, the time having come for it, shall cost a Loménie as little as the 'Death-penalties to be put in execution' did. As for the liberal Promise, of States-General, it can be fulfilled or not : the fulfilment is five good years off ; in five years much intervenes. But the registering ? Ah, truly, there is the difficulty !—However, we have that promise of the Elders, given secretly at Troyes. Judicious gratuities, cajoleries, underground intrigues, with old Foulon, named 'Amé damnée, Familiar-demon, of the Parlement,' may perhaps do the rest. At worst and lowest, the Royal Authority has resources,—which ought it not to put forth ? If it cannot realise money, the Royal Authority is as good as dead ; dead of that surest and miserablest death, inanition. Risk and win : without risk all is already lost ! For the rest, as in enterprises of pith, a touch of stratagem often proves futhersome, his Majesty announces a Royal Hunt, for the 19th his doom. In a second simultaneous Lettre-de-Cachet, Goody Fréteau is hurled into the Stronghold of Ham amid the Norman marshes, by a third Sabotier de Cabre into Mont St Michel, amid the Norman quicksands. As for the Parlement, it must, on summons travel out to Versailles with its Register-Book under its arm to have the Protest biffé (expunged), not without admonition and even rebuke. A stroke of authority, which, one might have hoped would quiet matters.

¹ October 1787. Montpalliard, i. 374. Escorial, iii. 262.

BOOK III
1787

Unhappily, no—it is n mere taste of the whip to rearing coursers which makes them rear worse! When n team of Twenty five Millions begins rearing what is Loménie's whip? The Parlement will nowise acquiesce meekly, and set to register the Protestant Edict, and do its other work, in salutary fear of these three Lettres de-Cachet. Far from that, it begins questioning Lettres de Cachet generally, their legality, endurability, emits dolorous oburgation petition on petition to have its three Martyrs delivered, cannot, till that be complied with, so much as think of examining the Protestant Edict, but puts it off always 'till this day week'!

In which oburgatory strain Paris and France joins it, or rather has preceded it, making fearful chorus. And now also the other Parlements at length opening their mouths, begin to join, some of them, as at Grenoble and at Rennes, with portentous emphasis—threatening by way of reprisal, to interdict the very Tax-gatherer. 'In all former contests,' as Malesherbes remarks, 'it was the Parlement that excited the Public, but here it is the Public that excites the Parlement.'

CHAPTER VII

INTERMINE

WHAT n France through these winter months of the year 1787! The very Gilde-de-Bœuf is doleful uncertain, with n general feeling, among the Suppressed that it were better to be in Turkey. The Wolf hounds are suppressed the Bear hounds. Duke de Coigny, Duke de Polignac in the Trianon little heaven her Majesty, one evening takes Besenval's arm, asks his candid opinion. The intrepid Besenval—having, as he hopes, nothing of the sycophant in him,—plainly signifies that, with a Parlement in rebellion, and an Œil-de-Bœuf in suppression, the King's Crown is in danger;—whereupon, singular to say, her Majesty, as if hurt, changed the subject, *et ne me parla plus de rien!*¹

¹ Besenval, l.c. 309.

² Weber l.c. 466.

CHAP. VII
April
1787-88

To whom, indeed, can this poor Queen speak? In need of wise counsel, if ever mortal was; yet beset here only by the hubbub of chaos! Her dwelling-place is so bright to the eye, and confusion and black care darkens it all. Sorrows of the Sovereign, sorrows of the woman, thick-coming sorrows environ her more and more. Lamotte, the Necklace-Countess, has in these late months escaped, perhaps been suffered to escape, from the Salpêtrière. Vain was the hope that Paris might thereby forget her; and this ever-widening lie, and heap of lies, subside. The Lamotte, with a V (for Volceuse, Thief) branded on both shoulders, has got to England; and will therefrom emit lie on lie; defiling the highest queenly name: mere distracted lies;² which, in its present humour, France will greedily believe.

For the rest, it is too clear our Successive Loan is not filling. As indeed, in such circumstances, a Loan registered by expunging of Protests was not the likeliest to fill. Denunciation of Lettres-de-Cachet, of Despotism generally, abates not: the Twelve Parlements are busy; the Twelve hundred Placarders, Balladsingers, Pamphleteers. Paris is what, in figurative speech, they call 'flooded with pamphlets (regorgé de brochures)'; flooded and eddying again. Hot deluge,—from so many Patriot ready-writers, all at the fervid or boiling point; each ready-writer, now in the hour of eruption, going like an Iceland Geyser! Against which what can a judicious Friend Morellet do; a Rivarol, an unruly Linguet (well paid for it),—spouting cold!

Now also, at length, does come discussion of the Protestant Edict: but only for new embroilment; in pamphlet and counter-pamphlet, increasing the madness of men. Not even Orthodoxy, bedrid as she seemed, but will have a hand in this confusion. She once again in the shape of Abbé Lenfant,

¹ Besenval, iii. 264

² Mémoires justificatifs de la Comtesse de Lamotte (London, 1788). Vie de Jeanne de St. Remi, Comtesse de Lamotte, etc. etc. See Diamond Necklace (ut suprà).

'whom

BOOK III
1780

thought, brave Loménie; thou Garde des Sceaux Lamoignon, who hast ideas! So often defeated, balked cruelly when the golden fruit seemed within clutch, rally for one other struggle To tame the Parlement, to fill the King's coffers. these are now life and death questions

Parlements have been tamed, more than onre Set to perch 'on the peaks of rocks inaccessible except by fitters,' a Parlement grows reasonable O Maupeou, thou bold bad man, had we left thy work where it was!—But apart from exile, or other violent methods, is there not one method, whereby all things are tamed, even lions? The method of hunger! What if the Parlement's supplies were cut off, namely its Lawsuits!

Minor Courts, for the trying of innumerable minor causes, might be instituted these we could call Grand Baillages Whereon the Parlement, shortened of its prey, would look with yellow despair, but the Public, fond of cheap justice, with favour and hope. Then for Finance, for registering of Edicts why not, from our own Ordre de Bœuf Dignitaries, our Princes, Dukes, Marshals, make a thing we could call Plenary Court, and there, so to speak, do our registering ourselves? Saint Louis had his Plenary Court, of Great Barons,¹ most useful to him: our Great Barons are still here (at least the Name of them is still here), our necessity is greater than his

Such is the Loménie-Lamoignon device, welcome to the King's Council, as a light beam in great darkness The device seems feasible, it is eminently needful be it once well executed, great deliverance is wrought Silent, then, and steady, now or never!—the World shall see one other Historical Scene, and so singular a man as Loménie de Brienne still the Stage manager there

Behold, accordingly, a Home Secretary Bréteuil 'beautifying Paris,' in the percieablest manner, in this hopeful spring weather of 1788; the old hovels and hutches disappearing from our Bridges as if for the State too there were holiday weather, and nothing to do but beautify Parlement seems to sit acknowledged victor Brienne says nothing of Finance, or even says, and prints, that it is all well How is this; such holiday quiet; though the Successive Loan did not fill? In a victorious Parlement, Counsellor Goetslard de Monsabert even denounces that 'fevring of the Second Twentieth on strict valuation',

¹ Montesquieu, l. 405

valuation'; and gets decree that the valuation shall not be strict,—not on the Privileged classes. Nevertheless Brienne endures it, launches no Lettre-de-Cachet against it. How is this ?

CHAP. VII
1788

Smiling is such vernal weather; but treacherous, sudden! For one thing, we hear it whispered, 'the Intendants of Provinces have all got order to be at their posts on a certain day.' Still more singular, what incessant Printing is this that goes on at the King's Château, under lock and key? Sentries occupy all gates and windows; the Printers come not out; they sleep in their workrooms; their very food is handed in to them!¹ A victorious Parlement smells new danger. D'Espréménil has ordered horses to Versailles; prowls round that guarded Printing-Office; prying, snuffing, if so be the sagacity and ingenuity of man may penetrate it.

To a shower of gold most things are penetrable. D'Espréménil descends on the lap of a Printer's Danaë, in the shape of 'five hundred louis d'or': the Danaë's Husband smuggles a ball of clay to her; which she delivers to the golden Counsellor of Parlement. Kneaded within it, there stick printed proof-sheets:—by Heaven! the royal Edict of that same self-registering Plenary Court; of those Grand Bailliages that shall cut short our Lawsuits! It is to be promulgated over all France on one and the same day.

This, then, is what the Intendants were bid wait for at their posts: this is what the Court sat hatching, as its accursed cockatrice-egg; and would not stir, though provoked, till the brood were out! Hie with it, D'Espréménil, home to Paris; convoke instantaneous Sessions; let the Parlement, and the Earth, and the Heavens know it.

CHAPTER VIII

LOMÉNIE'S DEATH-THROES

On the morrow, which is the 3d of May 1788, an astonished Parlement sits convoked; listens speechless to the speech of D'Espréménil, unfolding the infinite misdeed. Deed of

¹ Weber, i. 276.

valuation'; and gets decree that the valuation shall not be strict,—not on the Privileged classes. Nevertheless Brienne endures it, launches no Lettre-de-Cachet against it. How is this? CHAP. VII
1788

Smiling is such vernal weather; but treacherous, sudden! For one thing, we hear it whispered, 'the Intendants of Provinces have all got order to be at their posts on a certain day.' Still more singular, what incessant Printing is this that goes on at the King's Château, under lock and key? Sentries occupy all gates and windows; the Printers come not out; they sleep in their workrooms; their very food is handed in to them!¹ A victorious Parlement smells new danger. D'Espréménil has ordered horses to Versailles; prowls round that guarded Printing-Office; prying, snuffing, if so be the sagacity and ingenuity of man may penetrate it.

To a shower of gold most things are penetrable. D'Espréménil descends on the lap of a Printer's Danaë, in the shape of 'five hundred louis d'or': the Danaë's Husband smuggles a ball of clay to her; which she delivers to the golden Counsellor of Parlement. Kneaded within it, there stiek printed proof-sheets:—by Heaven! the royal Edict of that same self-registering Plenary Court; of those Grand Bailliages that shall cut short our Lawsuits! It is to be promulgated over all France on one and the same day.

This, then, is what the Intendants were bid wait for at their posts: this is what the Court sat hatching, as its accursed cockatrice-egg; and would not stir, though provoked, till the brood were out! Hie with it, D'Espréménil, home to Paris; convoke instantaneous Sessions; let the Parlement, and the Earth, and the Heavens know it.

CHAPTER VIII

LOMÉNIE'S DEATH-THROES

ON the morrow, which is the 3d of May 1788, an astonished Parlement sits convoked; listens speechless to the speech of D'Espréménil, unfolding the infinite misdeed. Deed of treachery, of unhallowed darkness, such as Despotism loves ! Denounce it, O Parlement of Paris, awaken France and the Universe ; roll what thunder barrels of forensic eloquence thou hast . with thee too it is verily Now or never !

¹ Weber, i. 276.

BOOK III
May 1763

The Parlement is not wanting, at such juncture. In the hour of his extreme jeopardy, the lion first incites himself by roaring, by lashing his sides . So here the Parlement of Paris. On the motion of D'Espréménil, a most patriotic Oath, of the One and all sort, is sworn, with united throat,—an excellent new idea, which, in these coming years, shall not remain un-imitated . Next comes indomitable Declaration, almost of the rights of man, at least of the rights of Parlement ; Invocation to the Friends of French Freedom, in this and in subsequent time . All which, or the essence of all which, is brought to paper ; in a tone wherein something of plaintiveness blends with, and tempers, heroic valour . And thus, having sounded the storm bell,—which Paris hears, which all France will hear ; and hurled such defiance in the teeth of Loménie and Despotism, the Parlement retires as from a tolerable first day's work.

But how Loménie felt to see his cockatrice-egg (so essential to the salvation of France) broken in this premature manner, let readers fancy ! Indignant he clutches at his thunderbolts (de Cachet, of the Seal) ; and launches two of them : a bolt for D'Espréménil ; a bolt for that husy Goeslard, whose service in the Second Twentieth and 'strict valuation' is not forgotten . Such bolts clutched promptly overnight, and launched with the early new morning, shall strike agitated Paris if not into requiescence, yet into wholesome astonishment.

Ministerial thunderbolts may be launched ; but if they do not hit ? D'Espréménil and Goeslard, warned, both of them, as is thought, by the singing of some friendly bird, elude the Loménie Tipstaves, escape disguised through slywindows, over roofs, to their own Palais de Justice . the thunderbolts have missed. Paris (for the buzz flies abroad) is struck into astonishment not wholesome . The two Martyrs of Liberty doff their disguises, don their long gowns : behold, in the space of an hour, by aid of ushers and swift runners, the Parlement, with its Counsellors, Presidents, even Peers, sits anew assembled . The assembled Parlement declares that these its two Martyrs cannot be given up, to any sublunary authority , moreover

moreover that the 'session is permanent,' admitting of no adjournment, till pursuit of them has been relinquished.

CHAP. VIII
May 1788

And so, with forensic eloquence, denunciation and protest, with couriers going and returning, the Parlement, in this state of continual explosion that shall cease neither night nor day, waits the issue. Awakened Paris once more inundates those outer courts; boils, in floods wilder than ever, through all avenues. Dissonant hubbub there is; jargon as of Babel, in the hour when they were first smitten (as here) with mutual unintelligibility, and the people had not yet dispersed!

Paris City goes through its diurnal epochs, of working and slumbering; and now, for the second time, most European and African mortals are asleep. But here, in this Whirlpool of Words, sleep falls not; the Night spreads her coverlid of Darkness over it in vain. Within is the sound of mere martyr invincibility; tempered with the due tone of plaintiveness. Without is the infinite expectant hum,—growing drowsier a little. So has it lasted for six-and-thirty hours.

But hark, through the dead of midnight, what tramp is this? Tramp as of armed men, foot and horse; Gardes Françaises, Gardes Suisses: marching hither; in silent regularity; in the flare of torchlight! There are Sappers too, with axes and crowbars: apparently, if the doors open not, they will be forced!—It is Captain D'Agoust, missioned from Versailles. D'Agoust, a man of known firmness;—who once forced Prince Condé himself, by mere incessant looking at him, to give satisfaction and fight:¹ he now, with axes and torches, is advancing on the very sanctuary of Justice. Sacrilegious; yet what help? The man is a soldier; looks merely at his orders; impassive, moves forward like an inanimate engine.

The doors open on summons, there need no axes; door after door. And now the innermost door opens; discloses the long-gowned Senators of France: a hundred and sixty-seven by tale, seventeen of them Peers; sitting there, majestic 'in permanent session.' Were not the man military, and of cast-iron, this sight, this silence re-echoing the clank of his own boots, might stagger him! For the hundred and sixty-seven receive him in perfect silence; which some liken to that of the Roman Senate overfallen by Brennus; some to that of a nest of coiners surprised by officers of the Police.² Messieurs,

¹ Weber, i. 283.

² Besenval, iii. 355.

said

BOOK III
May-July
1783

said D'Agoust, De par le Roi! Express order has charged D'Agoust with the sad duty of arresting two individuals M Duval d'Espréménil and M Goeslard de Monsabert. Which respectable individuals, as he has not the honour of knowing them, are hereby invited, in the King's name, to surrender themselves—Profound silence! Buzz, which grows a murmur 'We are all D'Espréménils!' ventures a voice, which other voices repeat. The President inquires, Whether he will employ violence? Captain D'Agoust, honoured with his Majesty's commission, has to execute his Majesty's order, would so gladly do it without violence, will in any case do it, grants an august Senate space to deliberate which method they prefer. And thereupon D'Agoust, with grave military courtesy, has withdrawn for the moment.

What boots it, august Senators? All avenues are closed with fixed bayonets. Your Courier gallops to Versailles, through the dewy night, but also gallops back again, with tidings that the order is authentic, that it is irrevocable. The outer courts simmer with idle population, but D'Agoust's grenadier ranks stand there as immovable floodgates: there will be no revolting to deliver you. 'Messieurs!' thus spoke D'Espréménil, 'when the victorious Gauls entered Rome, which they had carried by assault the Roman Senators clothed in their purple, sat there, in their curule chairs with a proud and tranquil countenance, awaiting slavery or death. Such too is the lofty spectacle, which you, in this hour, offer to the universe (à l'univers), after having generously'—with much more of the like, as can still be read.¹

In vain, O D'Espréménil! Here is this cast iron Captain D'Agoust, with his cast iron military air, come back. Despotism, constraint, destruction sit waving in his plumes. D'Espréménil must fall silent, heroically give himself up, lest worst befall. Hum Goeslard heroically imitates. With spoken and speechless emotion they fling themselves into the arms of their Parliamentary brethren, for a last embrace and so amid plaudits and plaints, from a hundred and sixty five throats, amid wavings, sobbings, a whole forest sigh of Parliamentary pathos—they are led through winding passages, to the rear gate, where, in the gray of the morning, two Coaches with Exempts stand waiting. There must the victims mount, bayonets menacing behind. D'Espréménil's stern question to the populace, 'Whether they have courage?' is answered by silence. They mount, and roll; and neither the rising of the May sun (it is the 6th morning), nor its setting shall lighten their heart: but they fare forward continually; D'Espréménil towards the utmost Isles of Sainte-Marguerite, or Hières (supposed by some, if that is any comfort, to be Calypso's Island); Goeslard towards the land-fortress of Pierre-en-Cize, extant then, near the City of Lyons.

¹ Tuckergrou, L. A. p. 20.

CHAP. VIII
May-July
1788

Captain D'Agoust may now therefore look forward to Majorship, to Commandantship of the Tuileries; ¹—and withal vanish from History; where nevertheless he has been fated to do a notable thing. For not only are D'Espréménil and Goeslard safe whirling southward, but the Parlement itself has straightway to march out: to that also his inexorable order reaches. Gathering up their long skirts, they file out, the whole Hundred and Sixty-five of them, through two rows of unsympathetic grenadiers: a spectacle to gods and men. The people revolt not; they only wonder and grumble: also, we remark, these unsympathetic grenadiers are Gardes Françaises,—who, one day, will sympathise! In a word, the Palais de Justice is swept clear, the doors of it are locked; and D'Agoust returns to Versailles with the key in his pocket,—having, as was said, merited preferment.

As for this Parlement of Paris, now turned out to the street, we will without reluctance leave it there. The Beds of Justice it had to undergo, in the coming fortnight, at Versailles, in registering, or rather refusing to register, those new-hatched Edicts; and how it assembled in taverns and tap-rooms there, for the purpose of Protesting; ² or hovered disconsolate, with outspread skirts, not knowing where to assemble; and was reduced to lodge Protest 'with a Notary'; and in the end, to sit still (in a state of forced 'vacation'), and do nothing: all this, natural now, as the burying of the dead after battle, shall not concern us. The Parlement of Paris has as good as performed its part; doing and misdoing, so far, but hardly further, could it stir the world.

Loménie has removed the evil, then? Not at all: not so much as the symptom of the evil; scarcely the twelfth part of

¹ Montgaillard, i. 404.

² Weber, i. 299-303.

BOOK III
 May-July
 1789

the symptom, and exasperated the other eleven! The Intendants of Provinces, the Military Commandants are at their posts, on the appointed 8th of May: but in no Parlement, if not in the single one of Douai, can these new Edicts get registered. Not peaceable signing with ink; but browbeating, bloodshedding, appeal to primary club-law! Against these Baillages, against this Plenary Court, exasperated Themis everywhere shows face of battle; the Provincial Noblesse are of her party, and whoever hates Lomenie and the evil time, with her Attorneys and Tipstaves, she enlists and operates down even to the populace. At Rennes in Brittany, where the historical Bertrand de Moleville is Intendant, it has passed from fatal continual duelling, between the military and gentry, to street fighting; to stone-voileys and musket shot. and still the Edicts remain unregistered. The afflicted Bretons send remonstrance to Lomenie, by a Deputation of Twelve; whom, however, Lomenie, having heard them, shuts up in the Bastille. A second larger Deputation he meets, by his scouts, on the road, and persuades or frightens back. But now a third largest Deputation is indignantly sent by many roads: refused audience on arriving, it meets to take counsel; invites Lafayette and all Patriot Bretons in Paris to assist; agitates itself; becomes the Breton Club, first germ of—the Jacobins' Society!

So many as eight Parlements get exiled. others might need that remedy, but it is one not always easy of appliance. At Grenoble, for instance, where a Mounier, a Barnave have not been idle, the Parlement had due order (by Lettres-de-Cachet) to depart, and exile itself. but on the morrow, instead of coaches getting yoked, the alarm bell bursts forth, ominous; and peals and booms all day. crowds of mountaineers rush down, with axes, even with firelocks,—whom (most ominous of all!) the soldiery shows no eagerness to deal with. 'Axe over head,' the poor General has to sign capitulation; to engage that the Lettres-de-Cachet shall remain unexecuted, and a beloved Parlement stay where it is. Besançon, Dijon, Rouen, Bordeaux, are not what they should be! At Pau in Bearn, where the old Commandant had failed, the new one (a Grammont, native to them) is met by a Procession of townsmen with the Cradle of Henri Quatre, the Palladium of their Town; is conjured as he venerates this old Tortoise-shell, in which the great Henri was rocked, not to trample on Bearnese liberty; is informed, withal, that his Majesty's cannon are all safe—in the keeping of his Majesty's faithful Burghers of Pau, and do now lie pointed on the walls there; ready for action! ¹

¹ A. F. de Bertrand-Moleville, Moniteur (Paris, 1816, t. ch. 1. Moniteur, Moniteur, 17 77

² Moniteur, 1. 308.

At this rate, your Grand Bailliages are like to have a stormy infancy. As for the Plenary Court, it has literally expired in the birth. The very Courtiers looked shy at it; old Marshal Broglie declined the honour of sitting therein. Assaulted by a universal storm of mingled ridicule and execration,² this poor Plenary Court met once, and never any second time. Distracted country! Contention hisses up, with forked hydra-tongues, where-soever poor Loménie sets his foot. 'Let a Commandant, a Commissioner of the King,' says Weber, 'enter one of these Parlements to have an Edict registered, the whole Tribunal will disappear, and leave the Commandant alone with the Clerk and First President. The Edict registered and the Commandant gone, the whole Tribunal hastens back, to declare such registration null. The highways are covered with Grand Deputations of Parlements, proceeding to Versailles, to have their registers expunged by the King's hand; or returning home, to

PRINCE VICTOR DE BROGLIE.

¹ Besenval, iii. 348.

² La Cour Plénière, héroï-tragi-comédie en trois actes et en prose; jouée le 14 Juillet 1788, par une société d'amateurs dans un Château aux environs de Versailles; par M. l'Abbé de Vermond, Lecteur de la Reine: A Bâville (Lamoignon's Country-house), et se trouve à Paris, chez la Veuve Liberté, à l'enseigne de la Révolution, 1788.—La Passion, la Mort et la Résurrection du Peuple: Imprimé à Jerusalem, etc. etc.—See Montgaillard, i. 407.

BOOK III cover a new page with a new resolution still more
Aug 1788 audacious.¹

Such is the France of this year 1788 Not now a Golden or Paper Age of Hope, with its horse racings, balloon flyings, and finer sensibilities of the heart ah, gone is that, its golden effulgence paled, bedarkened in this singular manner—brewing towards preternatural weather! For, as in that wreck storm of Paul et Virginie and Saint Pierre,—‘One huge motionless cloud’ (say, of Sorrow and Indignation) ‘girdles our whole horizon, streams up, bairy, copper edged, over a sky of the colour of lead’ Motionless itself, but ‘small clouds’ (as exiled Parlements and suchlike), ‘parting from it, fly over the zenith, with the velocity of birds’—till at last, with one loud howl, the whole Four Winds be dashed together, and all the world exclaim, There is the tornado! Tout le monde s’écria, Voilà l’ouragan!

For the rest, in such circumstances, the Successive Loan, very naturally, remains unfilled, neither, indeed, can that impost of the Second Twentieth, at least not on ‘strict valuation,’ be levied to good purpose ‘Lenders,’ says Weber, in his bysterical vehement manner, ‘are afraid of ruin, tax gatherers of hanging’ The very Clergy turn away their face convoked in Extraordinary Assembly, they afford no gratuitous gift (don gratuit),—if it be not that of advice, here too instead of cash is clamour for States General²

O Loménie Brienne, with thy poor flimsy mind all bewildered, and now ‘three actual cauteries’ on thy worn out body, who art like to die of inflammation, provocation, milk diet, dartres vives and maladie—(best untranslated),³ and presidest over a France with innumerable actual cauteries, which also is dying of inflammation and the rest! Was it wise to quit the bosky verdures of Brienne, and thy new ashlar Chateau there, and what it held, for this? Soft were those shades and lawns, sweet the hymns of Poetasters, the blandishments of high-roused Graces ‘and always this and the other Philosophe Morellet (nothing deeming himself or thee a questionable Sham Priest) could be so happy in making happy—and also (hadst thou known it) in the Military School hard by, there

¹ Weber, l. 275

² Mon gaillard : 424

³ Lameth Attend! Con! (Introd.) p. 87

⁴ See Mémoires de Morellet

sat, studying mathematics, a dusky-complexioned taciturn Boy, CILAP. VIII under the name of : NAPOLEON BONAPARTE !—With fifty years Aug. 1788 of effort, and one final dead-lift struggle, thou hast made an exchange ! Thou hast got thy robe of office,—as Hercules had his Nessus'-shirt.

On the 13th of July of this 1788, there fell, on the very edge of harvest, the most frightful hailstorm ; scattering into wild waste the Fruits of the Year ; which had otherwise suffered grievously by drought. For sixty leagues round Paris especially, the ruin was almost total.¹ To so many other evils, then, there is to be added, that of dearth, perhaps of famine.

Some days before this hailstorm, on the 5th of July ; and still more decisively some days after it, on the 8th of August,—Loménie announces that the States-General are actually to meet in the following month of May. Till after which period, this of the Plenary Court, and the rest, shall remain postponed. Further, as in Loménie there is no plan of forming or holding these most desirable States-General, 'thinkers are invited' to furnish him with one,—through the medium of discussion by the public press !

What could a poor Minister do ? There are still ten months of respite reserved : a sinking pilot will fling out all things, his very biscuit-bags, lead, log, compass and quadrant, before flinging out himself. It is on this principle, of sinking, and the incipient delirium of despair, that we explain likewise the almost miraculous 'invitation to thinkers.' Invitation to Chaos to be so kind as build, out of its tumultuous drift-wood, an Ark of Escape for him ! In these cases, not invitation but command has usually proved serviceable.—The Queen stood, that evening, pensive, in a window, with her face turned towards the Garden. The Chef de Gobelet had followed her with an obsequious cup of coffee ; and then retired till it were sipped. Her Majesty beckoned Dame Campan to approach : 'Grand Dieu !' murmured she, with the cup in her hand, 'what a piece of news will be made public today ! The King grants States-General.' Then raising her eyes to Heaven (if Campan were not mistaken), she added : 'Tis a first beat of the drum, of ill-omen for France. This Noblesse will ruin us.'²

During all that hatching of the Plenary Court, while Lamignon looked so mysterious, Besenval had kept asking him one

¹ Marmontel, iv. 30.

² Campan, iii. 104, 111.

BOOK III
Aug 1783

indeed, for the last months, peacefully drinking the waters of Contrexéville. Returning now, in the end of August, towards Moulins, and 'knowing nothing,' he arrives one evening at Langres; finds the whole Town in a state of uproar (grande rumeur). Doubtless some sedition; a thing too common in these days! He alights nevertheless; inquires of a 'man tolerably dressed,' what the matter is?—'How?' answers the man, 'you have not heard the news? The Archbishop is thrown out, and M. Necker is recalled; and all is going to go well!'¹

Such rumeur and vociferous acclaim has risen round M. Necker, ever from 'that day when he issued from the Queen's Apartments,' a nominated Minister. It was on the 24th of August: 'the galleries of the Chateau, the courts, the streets of Versailles; in few hours, the Capital; and, as the news flew, all France, resounded with the cry of Vive le Roi! Vive M. Necker!'² In Paris indeed it unfortunately got the length of 'turbulence.' Petards, rockets go off, in the Place Dauphine, more than enough. A 'wicker figure (Mannequin d'osier),' in Archbishop's stole, made emblematically, three-fifths of it satin, two-fifths of it paper, is promenaded, not in silence, to the popular judgment bar; is doomed; shriven by a mock Abbé de Vermond; then solemnly consumed by fire, at the foot of Henri's Statue on the Pont Neuf;—with such petarding and huzzaing that Chevalier Dubois and his City watch see good finally to make a charge (more or less ineffectual); and there wanted not burning of sentry boxes, forcing of guard houses, and also 'dead bodies thrown into the Seine over-night,' to avoid new effervescence.³

Parlements therefore shall return from exile: Plenary Court, Payment two-fifths in Paper have vanished; gone off in smoke, at the foot of Henri's Statue. States-General (with a Political Millennium) are now certain; nay, it shall be announced, in our fond haste, for January next: and all, as the Langres man said, is 'going to go.'

To the prophetic glance of Besenval, one other thing is too apparent: that Friend Lamoignon cannot keep his Keeper-ship. Neither he nor War-minister Comte de Brienne ! Already old Foulon, with an eye to be war-minister himself, is making underground movements. This is that same Foulon named âme damnée du Parlement ; a man grown gray in treachery, in griping, projecting, intriguing and iniquity : who once when it was objected, to some finance-scheme of his, ‘What will the people do ?’—made answer, in the fire of discussion, ‘The people may eat grass’ : hasty words, which fly abroad irrevocable,—and will send back tidings !

¹ Besenval, iii. 360.² Weber, i. 542.³ Histoire Parlementaire de la Révolution Française, ou Journal des Assemblées Nationales depuis 1789 (Paris, 1833 et seqq.), i. 253. Lamoignon, Assemblée Constituante, i. (Introd.) p. 89.

Foulon, to the relief of the world, fails on this occasion ; and will always fail. Nevertheless it steads not M. de Lamoignon. It steads not the doomed man that he have interviews with the King ; and be ‘seen to return radieux,’ emitting rays. Lamoignon is the hated of Parlements : Comte de Brienne is Brother to the Cardinal Archbishop. The 24th of August has been ; and the 14th September is not yet, when they two, as their great Principal had done, descend,—made to fall soft, like him.

And now, as if the last burden had been rolled from its heart, and assurance were at length perfect, Paris bursts forth anew into extreme jubilee. The Basoche rejoices aloud, that the foe of Parlements is fallen ; Nobility, Gentry, Commonalty have rejoiced ; and rejoice. Nay now, with new emphasis, Rascality itself, starting suddenly from its dim depths, will arise and do it,—for down even thither the new Political Evangel, in some rude version or other, has penetrated. It is Monday, the 14th of September 1788 : Rascality assembles anew, in great force, in the Place Dauphine ; lets off petards, fires blunderbusses, to an incredible extent, without interval, for eighteen hours. There is again a wicker figure, ‘Mannequin of osier’ : the centre of endless howlings. Also Necker’s Portrait snatched, or purchased, from some Printshop, is borne processionally, aloft on a perch, with huzzas ;—an example to be remembered.

But chiefly on the Pont Neuf, where the Great Henri, in bronze, rides sublime ; there do the crowds gather. All passengers must stop, till they have bowed to the People’s King, and said audibly : ‘Vive Henri Quatre ; au diable Lamoignon !’ No carriage but must stop ; not even that of his Highness d’Orléans. Your coach-doors are opened : Monsieur will

CHAP. IX
Sept. 14-16
1788

BOOK FOURTH

STATES-GENERAL

CHAPTER I

THE NOTABLES AGAIN

THE universal prayer, therefore, is to be fulfilled ! Always in days of national perplexity, when wrong abounded and help was not, this remedy of States General was called for, by a Malesherbes, nay by a Fénelon,¹ even Parlements calling for it were 'escorted with blessings' And now behold it is vouchsafed us, States General shall verily be !

To say, let States General be, was easy, to say in what manner they shall be, is not so easy Since the year 1614, there have no States General met in France, all trace of them has vanished from the living habits of men Their structure, powers, methods of procedure, which were never in any measure fixed, have now become wholly a vague possibility Clay which the potter may shape, this way or that—say rather, the twenty five millions of potters, for so many have now, more or less, a vote in it ! How to shape the States General ? There is a problem Each Body corporate, each privileged, each organised Class has secret hopes of its own in that matter, and also secret misgivings of its own,—for, behold, this monstrous twenty million Class, hitherto the dumb sheep which these others had to agree about the manner of shearing, is now also arising with hopes ! It has ceased or is ceasing to be dumb, it speaks through Pamphlets, or at least brays and growls behind them, in unison,—increasing wonder fully their volume of sound

As for the Parlement of Paris, it has at once declared for

¹ Montgaillard t. 461

CHAP. I
Sept.-Oct.
1788

the 'old form of 1614.' Which form had this advantage, that the Tiers État, Third Estate, or Commons, figured there as a show mainly: whereby the Noblesse and Clergy had but to avoid quarrel between themselves, and decide unobstructed what they thought best. Such was the clearly declared opinion of the Paris Parlement. But, being met by a storm of mere hooting and howling from all men, such opinion was blown straightway to the winds; and the popularity of the Parlement along with it,—never to return. The Parlement's part, we said above, was as good as played. Concerning which, however, there is this further to be noted: the proximity of dates. It was on the 22d of September that the Parlement returned from 'vacation' or 'exile in its estates'; to be re-installed amid boundless jubilee from all Paris. Precisely next day it was, that this same Parlement came to its 'clearly declared opinion': and then on the morrow after that, you behold it 'covered with outrages'; its outer court, one vast sibilation, and the glory departed from it for evermore.¹ A popularity of twenty-four hours was, in those times, no uncommon allowance.

On the other hand, how superfluous was that invitation of Loménie's: the invitation to thinkers! Thinkers and unthinkers, by the million, are spontaneously at their post, doing what is in them. Clubs labour: Société Publique; Breton Club; Enraged Club, Club des Enragés. Likewise Dinner-parties in the Palais Royal; your Mirabeaus, Talleyrands dining there, in company with Chamforts, Morellets, with Duponts and hot Parlementeers, not without object! For a certain Neckerean Lion's-provider, whom one could name, assembles them there;² —or even their own private determination to have dinner does it. And then as to Pamphlets—in figurative language, 'it is a sheer snowing of pamphlets; like to snow-up the Government thoroughfares!' Now is the time for Friends of Freedom; sane, and even insane.

Count, or self-styled Count, d'Aintrigues, 'the young Languedocian gentleman,' with perhaps Chamfort the Cynic to help him, rises into furor almost Pythic; highest, where many are high.³ Foolish young Languedocian gentleman; who himself so soon, 'emigrating among the foremost,' has to fly indig-

¹ Weber, i. 347.

² Ibid. i. 306.

³ Mémoire sur les États-Généraux. See Montgaillard, i. 457-9.

BOOK IV
Sept. Oct
1788

nant over the marches, with the Contrat Social in his pocket,—towards outer darkness, thankless intriguings, ignis fatuus hoverings, and death by the stiletto! Abbé Sieyès has left Chartres Cathedral, and canonry and bookshelves there, has let his tonsure grow, and come to Paris with a secular head, of the most irrefragable sort to ask three questions, and answer them What is the Third Estate? All—What has it hitherto been in our form of government? Nothing—What does it want? To become Something

D Orléans,—for be sure he, on his way to Chaos, is in the thick of this,—promulgates his Deliberations,¹ fathered by him, written by Laclos of the Liaisons Dangereuses. The result of which comes out simply 'The Third Estate is the Nation'. On the other hand, Monseigneur d'Artois, with other Princes of the Blood, publishes, in solemn Memorial to the King, that if such things be listened to, Privilege, Nobility, Monarchy, Church, State and Strongbox are in danger.² In danger truly and yet if you do not listen, are they out of danger? It is the voice of all France, this sound that rises Immeasurable, manifold, as the sound of outbreking waters wise were he who knew what to do in it,—if not to fly to the mountains, and hide himself?

How an ideal, all seeing Versailles Government, sitting there on such principles in such an environment, would have determined to demean itself at this new juncture, may even yet be a question. Such a Government would have felt too well that its long task was now drawing to a close, that, under the guise of these States General, at length inevitable, a new omnipotent Unknown of Democracy was coming into being, in presence of which no Versailles Government either could or should, except in a provisory character, continue extant. To enact which provisory character, so unspeakably important, might its whole faculties but have sufficed, and so a peaceable, gradual, well conducted Abdication and Domine dimittas have been the issue!

This for our ideal, all seeing Versailles Government. But for the actual irrational Versailles Government? Alas, that is a Government existing there only for its own behoof: without right, except possession; and now also without might. It foresees nothing, sees nothing; has not so much as a purpose, but has only purposes,—and the instinct whereby all that exists will struggle to keep existing. Wholly a vortex; in which vain counsels, hallucinations, falsehoods, intrigues, and imbecilities whirl; like withered rubbish in the meeting of winds! The Œil-de-Bœuf has its irrational hopes, if also its fears. Since hitherto all States-General have done as good as nothing, why should these do more? The Commons, indeed, look dangerous; but on the whole is not revolt, unknown now for five generations, an impossibility? The Three Estates can, by management, be set against each other; the Third will, as heretofore, join with the King; will, out of mere spite and self-interest, be eager to tax and vex the other two. The other two are thus delivered bound into our hands, that we may fleecy them likewise. Whereupon, money being got, and the Three Estates all in quarrel, dismiss them, and let the future go as it can! As good Archbishop Loménie was wont to say: 'There are so many accidents; and it needs but one to save us.'—Yes; and how many to destroy us?

¹ Délibérations à prendre pour les Assemblées des Bailliages

² Mémoire présenté au Roi par Monseigneur Comte d'Artois, M. le Prince de Condé, M. le Duc de Bourbon, M. le Duc d'Enghien et M. le Prince de Conti. (Gren in Hist. Parl. 1, 256)

Poor Necker in the midst of such an anarchy does what is possible for him. He looks into it with obstinately hopeful face; lauds the known rectitude of the kingly mind; listens indulgentlike to the known perverseness of the queenly and courtly;—emits if any proclamation or regulation, one favouring the Tiers État; but settling nothing; hovering afar off rather, and advising all things to settle themselves. The grand questions, for the present, have got reduced to two: the Double Representation, and the Vote by Head. Shall the Commons have a 'double representation,' that is to say, have as many members as the Noblesse and Clergy united? Shall the States-General, when once assembled, vote and deliberate, in one body, or in three separate bodies; 'vote by head, or vote by class,'—ordre as they call it? These are the moot-points now filling all France with jargon, logic and eleutheromania. To terminate which, Necker bethinks him, Might not a second Convocation of the Notables be fittest? Such second Convocation is resolved on.

On the 6th of November of this year 1788, these Notables accordingly

BOOK IV
Nov Dec.
1788

accordingly have reassembled, after an interval of some eighteen months. They are Calonne's old Notables, the same Hundred and Forty four,—to show one's impartiality, like wise to save time. They sit there once again, in their Seven Bureaus, in the hard winter weather. It is the hardest winter seen since 1709, thermometer below zero of Fahrenheit, Seine River frozen over.¹ Cold, scarcity and eleutheromania clamour—a changed world since these Notables were 'organised out,' in May gone a year! They shall see now whether, under their Seven Princes of the Blood, in their Seven Bureaus, they can settle the moot points.

To the surprise of Patriotism, these Notables, once so patriotic, seem to incline the wrong way, towards the anti-patriotic side. They stagger at the Double Representation, at the Vote by Head—there is not affirmative decision, there is mere debating, and that not with the best aspects. For, indeed, were not these Notables themselves mostly of the Privileged Classes? They clamoured once, now they have their misgivings, make their dolorous representations. Let them vanish, ineffectual, and return no more! They vanish, after a month's session, on this 12th of December, year 1788—the last terrestrial Notables, not to reappear any other time, in the History of the World.

And so, the clamour still continuing, and the Pamphlets, and nothing but patriotic Addresses, louder and louder, pouring in on us from all corners of France,—Necker himself some fortnight after, before the year is yet done, has to present his Report,² recommending at his own risk that same Double Representation, nay almost enjoining it, so loud is the jargon and eleutheromania. What dubitating, what circumambulating! These whole six noisy months (for it began with Brienne in July), has not Report followed Report, and one Proclamation flown in the teeth of the other?³

However, that first moot point, as we see, is now settled. As for the second, that of voting by Head or by Order, it unfortunately is still left hanging. It hangs there, we may say, between the Privileged Orders and the Unprivileged, as a ready-made battle prize, and necessity of war, from the very

¹ Marmontel Mémoires (London 1805) iv 33. Hist. Parl. etc.

² Rapport fait au Roi dans son Conseil le 27 Décembre 1788.

³ 5th July 8th August 23d September etc. etc.

BOOK IV
Nov Dec
1788

accordingly have reassembled, after an interval of some eighteen months. They are Calonne's old Notables, the same Hundred and Forty four,—to show one's impartiality, likewise to save time. They sit there once again, in their Seven Bureaus, in the hard winter weather: it is the hardest winter seen since 1709, thermometer below zero of Fahrenheit, Seine River frozen over.¹ Cold, scarcity and eleutheromania: clamour: a changed world since these Notables were 'organised out,' in May gone a year! They shall see now whether, under their Seven Princes of the Blood, in their Seven Bureaus they can settle the moot points.

To the surprise of Patriotism, these Notables, once so patriotic, seem to incline the wrong way, towards the anti-patriotic side. They stagger at the Double Representation, at the Vote by Head: there is not affirmative decision, there is mere debating, and that not with the best aspects. For, indeed, were not these Notables themselves mostly of the Privileged Classes? They clamoured once, now they have their misgivings, make their dolorous representations. Let them vanish ineffectual, and return no more! They vanish, after a month's session, on this 12th of December, year 1788: the last terrestrial Notables, not to reappear any other time, in the History of the World.

And so, the clamour still continuing, and the Pamphlets, and nothing but patriotic Addresses, louder and louder, pouring in on us from all corners of France,—Necker himself some fortnight after, before the year is yet done, has to present his Report,² recommending at his own risk that same Double Representation, nay almost enjoining it: so loud is the jargon and eleutheromania. What dubitating, what circumambulating! These whole six noisy months (for it began with Brienne in July), has not Report followed Report, and one Proclamation flown in the teeth of the other?³

However, that first moot point, as we see, is now settled. As for the second, that of voting by Head or by Order, it unfortunately is still left hanging. It hangs there, we may say, between the Privileged Orders and the Unprivileged, as a ready-made battle-prize, and necessity of war, from the very first; which battle-prize whosoever seizes it—may thenceforth bear as battle-flag, with the best omens!

¹ Marmontel Mémoires (London 1805) iv 33. His t. Parl. etc.

² Rapport fait au Roi dans son Conseil le 27 Décembre 1788

³ 5th July 8th August 23d September etc. etc.

But so, at least, by Royal Édict of the 24th of January,¹ does it finally, to impatient expectant France, become not only indubitable that National Deputies are to meet, but possible (so far and hardly farther has the royal Regulation gone) to begin electing them.

CHAP. I
Jan. 1789

CHAPTER II

THE ELECTION

Up, then, and be doing! The royal signal-word flies through France, as through vast forests the rushing of a mighty wind. At Parish Churches, in Townhalls, and every House of Convocation; by Baillages, by Seneschalsies, in whatsoever form men convene; there, with confusion enough, are Primary Assemblies forming. To elect your Electors; such is the form prescribed: then to draw up your 'Writ of Complaints and Grievances (Cahier de plaintes et doléances),' of which latter there is no lack.

With such virtue works this Royal January Édict; as it rolls rapidly, in its leathern mails, along these frostbound highways, towards all the four winds. Like some fial, or magic spell-word;—which such things do resemble! For always, as it sounds out 'at the market-cross,' accompanied with trumpet-blast; presided by Bailli, Seneschal, or other minor Functionary, with beef-eaters; or, in country churches, is droned forth after sermon, 'au prône des messes paroissiales'; and is registered, posted and let fly over all the world,—you behold how this multitudinous French People, so long sinniering and buzzing in eager expectancy, begins heaping and shaping itself into organic groups. Which organic groups, again, hold smaller organic grouplets: the inarticulate buzzing becomes articulate speaking and acting. By Primary Assembly, and then by Secondary; by 'successive elections,' and infinite elaboration and scrutiny, according to prescribed process,—shall the genuine 'Complaints and Grievances' be at length got to

¹ Règlement du Roi pour la Convocation des États-Généraux à Versailles. (Reprinted, wrong dated, in Histoire Parlementaire, i. 262.)

BOOK IV paper; shall the fit National Representative be at length laid Jan 1789 hold of

How the whole People shakes itself, as if it had one life; and, in thousand voiced rumour, announces that it is awake, suddenly out of long death sleep, and will thenceforth sleep no more! The long looked for has come at last; wondrous news, of Victory, Deliverance, Enfranchisement, sounds magical through every heart. To the proud strong man it has come, whose strong hands shall no more be gyved; to whom boundless unconquered continents he disclosed. The weary day-drudge has heard of it, the beggar with his crust moistened in tears. What! To us also has hope reached; down even to us? Hunger and hardship are not to be eternal? The bread we extorted from the rugged glebe, and, with the toil of our sinews, reaped and ground, and kneaded into loaves, was not wholly for another, then, but we also shall eat of it, and be filled? Glorious news (answer the prudent elders), but all-too unlikely!—Thus, at any rate, may the lower people, who pay no money taxes and have no right to vote,¹ assiduously crowd round those that do, and most Halls of Assembly, within doors and without, seem animated enough.

Paris, alone of Towns, is to have Representatives, the number of them twenty. Paris is divided into Sixty Districts; each of which (assembled in some church, or the like) is choosing two Electors. Official deputations pass from District to District, for all is inexperience as yet, and there is endless consulting. The streets swarm strangely with busy crowds, pacific yet restless and loquacious, at intervals, is seen the gleam of military muskets; especially about the Palais, where the Parliament, once more on duty, sits querulous, almost tremulous.

Busy is the French world! In those great days, what poorest speculative craftsman but will leave his workshop; if not to vote, yet to assist in voting? On all highways is a rustling and bustling. Over the wide surface of France, ever and anon, through the spring months, as the Sower casts his corn abroad upon the furrows, sounds of congregating and dispersing; of crowds in deliberation, acclamation, voting by ballot and by voice,—rise discrepant towards the ear of Heaven. To which political phenomena add this economical one, that Trade is stagnant, and also Bread getting dear; for before the rigorous winter there was, as we said, a rigorous summer, with drought, and on the 13th of July with destructive hail. What a fearful day! all cried while that tempest fell. Alas, the next anniversary of it will be a worse.¹ Under such aspects is France electing National Representatives.

¹ Règlement du Roi (in Histoire Parlementaire, as above, i, 267 307)

The incidents and specialties of these Elections belong not to Universal, but to Local or Parish History: for which reason let not the new troubles of Grenoble or Besançon; the bloodshed on the streets of Rennes, and consequent march thither of the Breton 'Young Men' with Manifesto by their 'Mothers, Sisters, and Sweethearts';² nor suchlike, detain us here. It is the same sad history everywhere; with superficial variations. A reinstated Parlement (as at Besançon), which stands astonished at this Behemoth of a States-General it had itself evoked, starts forward, with more or less audacity, to fix a thorn in its nose; and, alas, is instantaneously struck down, and hurled quite out,—for the new popular force can use not only arguments but brickbats! Or else, and perhaps combined with this, it is an order of Noblesse (as in Brittany), which will beforehand tie up the Third Estate, that it harm not the old privileges. In which act of tying up, never so skilfully set about, there is likewise no possibility of prospering; but the Behemoth-Briarcus snaps your cords like green rushes. Tie up? Alas, Messieurs! And then, as for your chivalry rapiers, valour and wager-of-battle, think one moment, how can that answer? The plebeian heart too has red life in it, which changes not to paleness at glance even of you; and 'the six hundred Breton gentlemen assembled in arms, for seventy-two hours, in the Cordeliers' Cloister, at Rennes,'—have to come out again, wiser than they entered. For the Nantes Youth, the Angers Youth, all Brittany was astir; 'mothers, sisters, and sweethearts' shrieking after them, March! The Breton Noblesse must even let the mad world have its way.³

In other Provinces, the Noblesse, with equal goodwill, finds

¹ Bailly, Mémoires, i. 336.

² Protestation et Arrêt des Jeunes Gens de la Ville de Nantes, du 28 janvier 1789, avant leur départ pour Rennes. Arrêt des Jeunes Gens de la Ville d'Angers, du 4 Février 1789. Arrêt des Mères, Sœurs, Épouses et Amantes des Jeunes Citoyens d'Angers, du 6 Février 1789. (Reprinted in Histoire Parlementaire, i. 290-3.)

³ Hist. Parl. i. 287. Deux Amis de la Liberté, i. 105-28.

BOOK IV
Jan Feb
1789

it better to stick to Protests, to well redacted 'Cahiers of grievances,' and satirical writings and speeches. Such is partially their course in Provence, whither indeed Gahriel Honore Riquetti Comte de Mirabeau has rushed down from Paris, to speak a word in season. In Provence, the Privileged, backed by their Aix Parlement, discover that such novelties, enjoined though they be by Royal Edict, tend to National detriment, and what is still more indisputable, 'to impair the dignity of the Noblesse.' Whereupon Mirabeau protesting aloud, this same Noblesse, amid huge tumult within doors and without, flatly determines to expel him from their Assembly. No other method, not even that of successive duels, would answer with him, the obstreperous fierce glaring man. Expelled he accordingly is.

'In all countries, in all times,' exclaims he departing, 'the Aristocrats have implacably pursued every friend of the People, and with tenfold implacability, if such a one were himself born of the Aristocracy.' It was thus that the last of the Gracchi perished, by the hands of the Patricians. But he, being struck with the mortal stab, flung dust towards heaven, and called on the Avenging Deities, and from this dust there was born Marius—Marius not so illustrious for exterminating the Cimbri, as for overturning in Rome the tyranny of the Nobles.¹ Casting up which new curious handful of dust (through the Printing press) to breed what it can and may, Mirabeau stalks forth into the Third Estate.

That he now, to ingratiate himself with this Third Estate, 'opened a cloth shop in Marseilles,' and for moments became a furnishing tailor, or even the fable that he did so, is to us always among the pleasant memorabilities of this era. Stranger Clothier never wielded the ell wand, and rent webs for men, or fractional parts of men. The Fils Adoptif is indignant at such disparaging fable,²—which nevertheless was widely believed in those days.³ But indeed, if Achilles, in the heroic ages, killed mutton, why should not Mirabeau, in the unheroic ones, measure broadcloth?

More authentic are his triumph progresses through that disturbed district, with mob jubilee, flaming torches, 'windows hired for two lous,' and voluntary guard of a hundred men

¹ Fils Adoptif v. 256.

² Mémoires de Mirabeau, v. 307.

³ Marat Ami du Peuple Newspaper (in Histoire Parlementaire ii. 103) etc.

He is Deputy Elect, both of Aix and of Marseilles; but will prefer Aix. He has opened his far-sounding voice, the depths of his far-sounding soul; he can quell (such virtue is in a spoken word) the pride-tumults of the rich, the hunger-tumults of the poor; and wild multitudes move under him, as under the moon do billows of the sea: he has become a world-compeller, and ruler over men.

One other incident and specially we note; with how different an interest! It is of the Parlement of Paris; which starts forward, like the others (only with less audacity, seeing better how it lay), to nosc-ring that Behemoth of a States-General. Worthy Doctor Guillotin, respectable practitioner in Paris, has drawn up his little 'Plan of a Cahier of doléances';—as had he not, having the wish and gift, the clearest liberty to do? He is getting the people to sign it; whereupon the surly Parlement summons him to give account of himself. He goes; but with all Paris at his heels; which floods the outer courts, and copiously signs the Cahier even there, while the Doctor is giving account of himself within! The Parlement cannot too soon dismiss Guillotin, with compliments; to be borne home shoulder-high.¹ This respectable Guillotin we hope to behold once more, and perhaps only once; the Parlement not even once, but let it be engulfed unseen by us.

JOSEPH GUILLOTIN.

Meanwhile such things, cheering as they are, tend little to cheer the national creditor, or indeed the creditor of any kind. In the midst of universal portentous doubt, what certainty can seem so certain as money in the purse, and the wisdom of

¹ Deux Amis de la Liberté, i. 141.

BOOK IV 'immense Magazines of velvet paper' has aught befallen?
 April 1789 Alas, yes! Alas, it is no Montgolfier rising there today; but Drudgery, Rascality, and the Suburb that is rising! Was the Sieur Réveillon, himself once a journeyman, heard to say that 'a journeyman might live handsomely on fifteen sous a day'? Some sevenpence halfpenny 'tis a slender sum! Or was he only thought, and believed, to be heard saying it? By this long chafing and friction, it would appear, the National temper has got electric.

Down in those dark dens, in those dark heads and hungry hearts, who knows in what strange figure the new Political Evangel may have shaped itself; what miraculous 'Communion of Drudges' may be getting formed! Enough · grum individuals, soon waxing to grum multitudes, and other multitudes crowding to see, hebet that Paper Warehouse, demonstrate, in loud ungrammatical language (addressed to the passions too), the insufficiency of sevenpence halfpenny a day. The City-watch cannot dissipate them; hroils arise and hellowings · Réveillon, at lus wits' end, entreats the Populace, entreats the Authorities · Besenval, now in active command, Commandant of Paris, docs, towards evening, to Réveillon's earnest prayer, send some thirty Gardes Françaises These clear the street, happily without firing; and take post there for the night, in hope that it may be all over!

Not so: on the morrow it is far worse. Saint-Antoine has arisen nnew, grimmer than ever,—reinforced by the unknown Tatterdemalion Figures, with their enthusiast complexion and large sticks The City, through nil streets, is flowing thitherward to see. 'two cartloads of paving stones, that happened to pass that way,' have been seized as n visible godsend. Another detachment of Gardes Françaises must be sent; Besenval and the Colonel taking earnest counsel. Then still another; they hardly, with bayonets and menace of bullets, penetrate to the spot What a sight! A street choked up, with lumber, tumult and the endless press of men. A Paper Warehouse eviscerated by axe and fire. mad din of Revolt, musket-volleys responded to by yells, hy miscellaneous missives, hy tiles raining from roof and window,—tiles, execrations, and slain men!

The Gardes Françaises like it not, hut have to persevere.

CHAP. III
April 28,
1789

All day it continues, slackening and rallying; the sun is sinking, and Saint-Antoine has not yielded. The City flies hither and thither: alas, the sound of that musket-volleying booms into the far dining-rooms of the Chaussée d'Antin; alters the tone of the dinner-gossip there. Captain Dampmartin leaves his wine; goes out with a friend or two, to see the fighting. Unwashed men growl on him, with murmurs of 'A bas les Aristocrates (Down with the Aristocrats)'; and insult the cross of St. Louis! They elbow him, and hustle him; but do not pick his pocket;—as indeed at Réveillon's too there was not the slightest stealing.¹

At fall of night, as the thing will not end, Besenval takes his resolution: orders out the Gardes Suisses with two pieces of artillery. The Swiss Guards shall proceed thither; summon that rabble to depart, in the King's name. If disobeyed, they shall load their artillery with grape-shot, visibly to the general eye; shall again summon; if again disobeyed, fire,—and keep firing 'till the last man' be in this manner blasted off, and the street clear. With which spirited resolution, as might have been hoped, the business is got ended. At sight of the lit matches, of the foreign red-coated Switzers, Saint-Antoine dissipates; hastily, in the shades of dusk. There is an encumbered street; there are 'from four to five hundred' dead men. Unfortunate Réveillon has found shelter in the Bastille; does therefrom, safe behind stone bulwarks, issue plaint, protestation, explanation, for the next month. Bold Besenval has thanks from all the respectable Parisian classes; but finds no special notice taken of him at Versailles,—a thing the man of true worth is used to.²

But how it originated, this fierce electric sputter and explosion? From D'Orléans! cries the Court-party: he, with his gold, enlisted these Brigands,—surely in some surprising manner, without sound of drum: he raked them in hither, from all corners; to ferment and take fire; evil is his good. From the Court! cries enlightened Patriotism: it is the cursed gold and wiles of Aristocrats that enlisted them; set them upon ruining an innocent Sicur Réveillon; to frighten the faint, and disgust men with the career of Freedom.

¹ Evénemens qui se sont passés sous mes yeux pendant la Révolution Française, par A. H. Dampmartin (Berlin, 1799), i. 25-7.

² Besenval, iii. 389.

BOOK IV
May 1789

Besenal with reluctance, concludes that it came from 'the English our natural enemies' Or, alas, might not one rather attribute it to Diana in the shape of Hunger? To some twin Dioscuri, OPPRESSION and REVENGE, so often seen in the battles of men? Poor Lackalls, all befoiled, besoiled encrusted into dim defacement,—into whom nevertheless the breath of the Almighty has breathed a living soul! To them it is clear only that eleutheromaniae Philosophism has yet baked no bread, that Patriot Committee men will level down to their own level, and no lower Brigands or whatever they might be it was bitter earnest with them They bury their dead with the title of Défenseurs de la Patrie, Martyrs of the good Cause

Or shall we say Insurrection has now served its Apprenticeship, and this was its proof stroke, and no inconclusive one? Its next will be a master stroke, announcing indisputable Mastership to a whole astonished world. Let that rock fortress, Tyranny's stronghold, which they name Bastille, or Building, as if there were no other building—look to its guns!

But, in such wise, with primary and secondary Assemblies, and Cahiers of Grievances, with motions, congregations of all kinds, with much thunder of froth-eloquence, and at last with thunder of platoon musquetry,—does agitated France accomplish its Elections With confused winnowing and sifting in this rather tumultuous manner, it has now (all except some remnants of Paris) sifted out the true wheat grains of National Deputies, Twelve Hundred and Fourteen in number; and will forthwith open its States General

CHAPTER IV

THE PROCESSION

ON the first Saturday of May, it is gala at Versailles, and Monday, fourth of the month is to be a still greater day The Deputies have mostly got thither, and sought out lodgings, and are now successively, in long well ushered files, kissing the hand of Majesty in the Château Supreme Usher de Brézé

THE WALLS OF JERICHO.

(The Fall of the Bastille.)

Brézé does not give the highest satisfaction : we cannot but observe that in ushering Noblesse or Clergy into the anointed Presence, he liberally opens both his folding-doors ; and on the other hand, for members of the Third Estate opens only one ! However, there is room to enter ; Majesty has smiles for all.

CHAP. IV
May 4, 1789

The good Louis welcomes his Honourable Members, with smiles of hope. He has prepared for them the Hall of Menus, the largest near him ; and often surveyed the workmen as they went on. A spacious Hall : with raised Platform for Throne, Court and Blood-royal ; space for six hundred Commons Deputies in front ; for half as many Clergy on this hand, and half as many Noblesse on that. It has lofty galleries ; wherefrom dames of honour, splendid in gaze d'or ; foreign Diplomacies, and other gilt-edged white-frilled individuals, to the number of two thousand,—may sit and look. Broad passages flow through it ; and, outside the inner wall, all round it. There are committee-rooms, guard-rooms, robing-rooms : really a noble Hall ; where upholstery, aided by the subject fine-arts, has done its best ; and crimson tasselled cloths, and emblematic fleurs-de-llys are not wanting.

The Hall is ready : the very costume, as we said, has been settled ; and the Commons are not to wear that hated slouch-hat (chapeau clabaud), but one not quite so slouched (chapeau rabattu). As for their manner of working, when all dressed ; for their 'voting by head or by order' and the rest,—this, which it were perhaps still time to settle, and in few hours will be no longer time, remains unsettled ; hangs dubious in the breast of Twelve Hundred men.

But now finally the Sun, on Monday the 4th of May, has risen ;—unconcerned, as if it were no special day. And yet, as his first rays could strike music from the Memnon's Statue on the Nile, what tones were these, so thrilling, tremulous, of preparation and foreboding, which he awoke in every bosom at Versailles ! Huge Paris, in all conceivable and inconceivable vehicles, is pouring itself forth ; from each Town and Village come subsidiary rills ; Versailles is a very sea of men. But above all, from the Church of St. Louis to the Church of Notre-Dame : one vast suspended-billow of Life,—with spray scattered even to the chimney-tops ! For on chimney-tops too, as over the roofs, and up thitherwards on every lamp-iron, sign-post, breakneck

BOOK IV
May 4, 1789

breakneck coign of vantage sits patriotic Courage, and every window bursts with patriotic Beauty for the Deputies are gathering at St Louis Church, to march in procession to Notre Dame, and hear sermon

Yes, friends, ye may sit and look bodily or in thought, all France, and all Europe may sit and look, for it is a day like few others Oh one might weep like Xerxes —So many serried rows sit perched there, like winged creatures, alighted out of Heaven all these, and so many more that follow them shall have wholly fled aloft again, vanishing into the blue Deep, and the memory of this day still be fresh It is the baptism day of Democracy, sick Time has given it birth, the numbered months being run The extreme unction day of Feudalism! A superannuated System of Society, decrepit with toils (for has it not done much, produced you, and what ye have and know?)—and with thefts and hawls, named glorious victories, and with profligacies, sensualities, and on the whole with dotage and senility,—is now to die and so with death throes and birth throes a new one is to be born What a work, O Earth and Heavens, what a work! Battles and bloodshed, September Massacres Bridges of Lodi, retreats of Moscow, Waterloos, Peterloos, Tenpound Franchises, Tarbarrels and Guillotines,—and from this present date, if one might prophesy, some two centuries of it still to fight! Two centuries, hardly less, before Democracy go through its due, most baleful, stages of Quackocracy, and a pestilential World be burnt up and have begun to grow green and young again

Rejoice nevertheless ye Versailles multitudes, to you from whom all this is bid, the glorious end of it is visible This day, sentence of death is pronounced on Shams, judgment of resuscitation, were it but afar off, is pronounced on Realities This day, it is declared aloud as with a Doom trumpet, that a Lie is unbelievable Believe that, stand by that, if more there be not, and let what thing or things soever will follow it follow 'Ye can no other, God be your help!' So spake a greater than any of you, opening his Chapter of World History

Behold, however! The doors of St Louis Church flung wide, and the Procession of Processions advancing towards Notre Dame! Shouts rend the air, one shout, at which Grecian birds might drop dead It is indeed a stately, solemn sight sight. The Elected of France, and then the Court of France ; they are marshalled and march there, all in prescribed place and costume. Our Commons 'in plain black mantle and white cravat' ; Noblesse, in gold-worked, bright-dyed cloaks of velvet, resplendent, rustling with laces, waving with plumes ; the Clergy in rochet, alb, or other best pontificalibus : lastly comes the King himself, and King's Household, also in their brightest blaze of pomp,—their brightest and final one. Some Fourteen Hundred Men blown together from all winds, on the deepest errand.

CHAP. IV
May 4, 1789

Yes, in that silent marching mass there lies Futurity enough. No symbolic Ark, like the old Hebrews, do these men bear : yet with them too is a Covenant ; they too preside at a new Era in the History of Men. The whole Future is there, and Destiny dim-brooding over it ; in the hearts and unshaped thoughts of these men, it lies illegible, inevitable. Singular to think : they have it in them ; yet not they, not mortal, only the Eye above can read it,—as it shall unfold itself, in fire and thunder, of siege, and field-artillery ; in the rustling of battle-banners, the tramp of hosts, in the glow of burning cities, the shriek of strangled nations ! Such things lie hidden, safe-wrapped in this Fourth day of May ;—say rather, had lain in some other unknown day, of which this latter is the public fruit and outcome. As indeed what wonders lie in every Day,—had we the sight, as happily we have not, to decipher it : for is not every meanest Day 'the conflux of two Eternities' !

Meanwhile, suppose we too, good Reader, should, as now without miracle Muse Clio enables us,—take our station also on some coign of vantage ; and glance momentarily over this Procession, and this Life-sea ; with far other eyes than the rest do, namely with prophetic ? We can mount, and stand there, without fear of falling.

As for the Life-sea, or onlooking unnumbered Multitude, it is unfortunately all-too dim. Yet as we gaze fixedly, do not nameless Figures not a few, which shall not always be nameless, disclose themselves ; visible or presumable there ! Young Baroness de Staël—she evidently looks from a window ; among older honourable women.¹ Her father is Minister, and one

¹ Madame de Staël, Considerations sur la Révolution Française (London, 1818), i. 114-91.

BOOK IV of the gala personages ; to his own eyes the chief one. Young May 4, 1789 spiritual Amazon, thy rest is not there ; nor thy loved Father's :

THÉROIGNE DE MERICOURT.

' as Malebranche saw all things in God, so M. Necker sees all things in Necker,'—a theorem that will not hold.

But where is the brown-locked, light-behaved, fire-hearted Demoiselle Théroigne ? Brown eloquent Beauty ; who, with thy winged words and glances, shalt thrill rough bosoms, whole steel battalions, and persuade an Austrian Kaiser,— pike

pike and helm lie provided for thee in due season; and, alas, also strait-waistcoat and long lodging in the Salpêtrière! Better hadst thou staid in native Luxemburg, and been the mother of some brave man's children: but it was not thy task, it was not thy lot.

CHAP. IV

May 4, 1789

Of the rougher sex how, without tongue, or hundred tongues, of iron, enumerate the notabilities! Has not Marquis Valadi hastily quitted his Quaker broadbrim; his Pythagorean Greek in Wapping, and the city of Glasgow? ¹ De Morande from his Courrier de l'Europe; Linguct from his Annales, they looked eager through the London fog, and became Ex-Editors,—that they might feed the guillotine, and have their due. Does Louvet (of Faublas) stand a-tiptoe? And Brissot, hight De Warville, friend of the Blacks? He, with Marquis Condorcet, and Clavière the Genevese 'have created the Moniteur Newspaper,' or are about creating it. Able Editors must give account of such a day.

Or seest thou with any distinctness, low down probably, not in places of honour, a Stanislas Maillard, riding-tipstaff (huissier à cheval) of the Châtelet; one of the shiftiest of men? A Captain Hulin of Geneva, Captain Elie of the Queen's Regiment; both with an air of half-pay? Jourdan, with tile-coloured whiskers, not yet with tile-beard; an unjust dealer in mules? He shall be, in few months, Jourdan the Headsman, and have other work.

Surely also, in some place not of honour, stands or sprawls up querulous, that he too, though short, may see,—one squalidest bleared mortal, redolent of soot and horse-drugs: Jean Paul Marat of Neuchâtel! O Marat, Renovator of Human Science, Lecturer on Optics; O thou remarkablest Horseleech, once in D'Artois' Stables,—as thy bleared soul looks forth, through thy bleared, dull-acrid, wo-stricken face, what sees it in all this? Any faintest light of hope; like dayspring after Nova-Zembla night? Or is it but blue sulphur-light, and spectres; wo, suspicion, revenge without end?

Of Draper Lecointre, how he shut his cloth-shop hard by, and stepped forth, one need hardly speak: Nor of Santerre, the sonorous Brewer from the Faubourg St. Antoine. Two other Figures, and only two, we signalise there. The huge, brawny Figure; through whose black brows, and rude flat-

¹ Founders of the French Republic (London, 1798), § Valadi.

BOOK IV may be the meanest? Shall we say, that anxious, slight,
 May 4, 1789 ineffectual looking man, under thirty, in spectacles, his eyes (were the glasses off) troubled, careful, with upturned face, snuffing dimly the uncertain future time, complexion of a multiplex atrabiliar colour, the final shade of which may be the pale sea green¹ That greenish coloured (verdâtre) individual is an Advocate of Arras, his name is Maximilien Robespierre The son of an Advocate, his father founded mason lodges under Charles Edward, the English Prince or Pretender Maximilien the first born was thriftily educated, he had brisk Camille Desmoulins for schoolmate in the College of Louis le

ROBESPIERRE

Grand, at Paris But he begged our famed Necklace-Cardinal, Rohan the patron, to let him depart thence, and resign in favour of a younger brother
 The strict minded Max departed, home to paternal Arras, and even had a Law case there and pleaded not unsuccessfully, 'in favour of the first Franklin thunder rod'
 With a strict painful mind, an understanding small but clear and ready, he grew in favour with official persons, who could foresee in him an excellent man of business, happily quite free from genius

 The Bishop, therefore, taking counsel, appoints him Judge of his diocese, and he faithfully does justice to the people till behold, one day, a culprit comes whose crime merits hanging, and the strict minded Max must abdicate, for his conscience will not permit the dooming of any son of Adam to die A strict minded, strait laced man! A man unfit for Revolutions? Whose small soul, transparent wholesome-looking as small ale, could by no chance ferment into virulent

¹ See De Staël, Considerations (ii. 142); Barboux, Almanac etc.

alegar,—the mother of ever new alegar; till all France were grown acetous virulent? We shall see.

CHAP. IV
May 4, 1789

Between which two extremes of grandest and meanest, so many grand and mean roll on, towards their several destinies, in that Procession! There is Cazalès, the learned young soldier; who shall become the eloquent orator of Royalism, and earn the shadow of a name. Experienced Mounier, experienced Malouet; whose Presidential Parliamentary experience the stream of things shall soon leave stranded. A Pétion has left his gown and briefs at Chartres for a stormier sort of pleading; has not forgotten his violin, being fond of music. His hair is grizzled, though he is still young: convictions, beliefs placid-unalterable are in that man; not hindmost of them, belief in himself. A Protestant-clerical Rabaut - St. - Etienne, a slender young eloquent and vehement Barnave, will help to regenerate France. There are so many of them young. Till thirty the Spartans did not suffer a man to marry: but how many men here under thirty; coming to produce not one sufficient citizen, but a nation and a world of such! The old to heal up rents; the young to remove rubbish:—which latter, is it not, indeed, the task here?

CAZALÈS.

Dim, formless from this distance, yet authentically there, thou noticest the Deputies from Nantes? To us mere clothes-screens, with slouch-hat and cloak, but bearing in their pocket a Cahier of doléances with this singular clause, and more such, in it: 'That the master wigmakers of Nantes be not troubled with new guild-brethren, the actually existing number of ninety-two being more than sufficient'¹ The Rennes people have

¹ Histoire Parlementaire, i. 335.

BOOK IV question put in a voice of thunder What are you doing in May 4, 1789 God's fair Earth and Task garden, where whosoever is not working is begging or stealing? Wo wo to themselves and to all if they can only answer Collecting tithes Preserving game!—Remark meanwhile how D Orleans affects to step before his own Order and mingle with the Commons For him are rivals few for the rest though all wave in plumed 'hats of a feudal cut,' and have sword on thigh, though among them is D Antraigues the young Languedocian gentleman — and indeed many a Peer more or less noteworthy

DE LA ROCHEFOUCAULT D'AUVILLE

There are Liancourt and La Rochefoucault, the liberal Anglomaniac Dukes There is a filially pious Lally, a couple of liberal Lameths Above all there is a Lafayette, whose name shall be Cromwell Grandison and fill the world Many a 'formula' has this Lafayette too made away with, yet not all formulas

formulas. He sticks by the Washington-formula ; and by that he will stick ;—and hang by it, as by sure bower-anchor hangs and swings the tight war-ship, which, after all changes of wildest weather and water, is found still hanging. Happy for him ; be it glorious or not ! Alone of all Frenchmen he has a theory of the world, and right mind to conform thereto ; he can become a hero and perfect character, were it but the hero of one idea. Note further our old Parliamentary friend, Crispin-Catiline d'Espréménil. He is returned from the Mediterranean Islands, a red-hot royalist, repentant to the finger-ends ;—unsettled-looking ; whose light, dusky-glowing at best, now flickers foul in the socket ; whom the National Assembly will by and by, to save time, 'regard as in a state of distraction.' Note lastly that globular Younger Mirabeau ; indignant that his elder Brother is among the Commons : it is Viscomte Mirabeau ; named oftener Mirabeau Tonneau (Barrel Mirabeau), on account of his rotundity, and the quantities of strong liquor he contains.

CHAP. IV
May 4, 1789

There then walks our French Noblesse. All in the old pomp of chivalry : and yet, alas, how changed from the old position ; drifted far down from their native latitude, like Arctic icebergs got into the Equatorial sea, and fast thawing there ! Once these Chivalry Duces (Dukes, as they are still named) did actually lead the world,—were it only towards battle-spoil, where lay the world's best wages then : moreover, being the ablest Leaders going, they had their Lion's share, those Duces ; which none could grudge them. But now, when so many Looms, improved Ploughshares, Steam-Engines, and Bills of Exchange have been invented ; and, for battle-brawling itself, men hire Drill-Sergeants at eighteenpence a-day,—what mean these goldmantled Chivalry Figures, walking there 'in black-velvet cloaks,' in high-plumed 'hats of a feudal cut' ? Reeds shaken in the wind !

The Clergy have got up ; with Cahiers for abolishing pluralities, enforcing residence of bishops, better payment of tithes.¹ The Dignitaries, we can observe, walk stately, apart from the numerous Undignified,—who indeed are properly little other than Commons disguised in Curate-frocks. Here, however, though by strange ways, shall the Precept be fulfilled, and

¹ Hist. Parl. i. 322-7.

BOOK IV
May 4-5,
1789

Men, if we consider well, that ever met together on our Planet on such an errand. So thousandfold complex a Society, ready to burst up from its infinite depths; and these men, its rulers and healers, without life-rule for themselves,—other life-rule than a Gospel according to Jean Jacques! To the wisest of them, what we must call the wisest, man is properly an Accident under the sky. Man is without duty round him; except it be 'to make the Constitution.' He is without Heaven above him, or Hell beneath him; he has no God in the world.

What further or better belief can be said to exist in these Twelve Hundred? Belief in high plumed hats of a feudal cut; in heraldic scutcheons; in the divine right of Kings, in the divine right of Game-destroyers. Belief, or what is still worse, canting half belief; or worst of all, mere Machiavellic pretence-of belief,—in consecrated dough wafers, and the godhood of a poor old Italian Man! Nevertheless in that immeasurable Confusion and Corruption, which struggles there so blindly to become less confused and corrupt, there is, as we said, this one salient point of a New Life discernible: the deep fixed Determination to have done with Shams. A determination which, consciously or unconsciously, is fixed; which waxes ever more fixed, into very madness and fixed idea; which in such embodiment as lies provided there, shall now unfold itself rapidly: monstrous, stupendous, unspeakable, new for long thousands of years!—How has the Heaven's light, oftentimes in this Earth, to clothe itself in thunder and electric murkiness; and descend as molten lightning, blasting, if purifying! Nay is it not rather the very murkiness, and atmospheric suffocation, that brings the lightning and the light? The new Evangel, as the old had been, was it to be born in the Destruction of a World?

But how the Deputies assisted at High Mass, and heard sermon, and applauded the preacher, church as it was, when he preached politics; how, next day, with sustained pomp, they are, for the first time, installed in their Salle des Menus (Hall no longer of Amusements) and become a States General,—readers can fancy for themselves. The King from his estrade, gorgeous as Solomon in all his glory, runs his eye over that majestic Hall; many plumed, many glancing, bright tinted as rainbow, in the galleries and near side-spaces, where Beauty sits raining bright influence. Satisfaction, as of one that after

after long voyaging had got to port, plays over his broad simple face : the innocent King ! He rises and speaks, with sonorous tone, a conceivable speech. With which, still more with the succeeding one-hour and two-hours speeches of Garde-des-Sceaux and M. Necker, full of nothing but patriotism, hope, faith, and deficiency of the revenue,—no reader of these pages shall be tried.

We remark only that, as his Majesty, on finishing the speech, put on his plumed hat, and the Noblesse according to custom imitated him, our Tiers-État Deputies did mostly, not without a shade of fierceness, in like manner clap-on, and even crush-on their slouched hats ; and stand there awaiting the issue.¹ Thick buzz among them, between majority and minority of Couvrez-vous, Découvrez-vous (Hats off, Hats on) ! To which his Majesty puts end, by taking off his own royal hat again.

The session terminates without further accident or omen than this ; with which, significantly enough, France has opened her States-General.

¹ Histoire Parlementaire (i. 356). Mercier, Nouveau Paris, etc.

BOOK FIFTH

THE THIRD ESTATE

CHAPTER I

INERTIA

THAT exasperated France, in this same National Assembly of hers, has got something, nay something great, momentous, indispensable, cannot be doubted, yet still the question were Specially what? A question hard to solve, even for calm onlookers at this distance, wholly insoluble to actors in the middle of it. The States General, created and conflated by the passionate effort of the whole Nation, is there as a thing high and lifted up. Hope, jubulating cries aloud that it will prove a miraculous Brazen Serpent in the Wilderness, whereon whosoever looks, with faith and obedience, shall be healed of all woes and serpent bites.

We may answer, it will at least prove a symbolic Banner, round which the exasperated complaining Twenty five Millions, otherwise isolated and without power, may rally, and work—what it is in them to work. If battle must be the work, as one cannot help expecting, then shall it be a battle banner (say, an Italian Gonfalon, in its old Republican Carroccio), and shall tower up, ear borne, shining in the wind and with iron tongue peal forth many a signal. A thing of prime necessity, which whether in the van or in the centre, whether leading or led and driven, must do the fighting multitude incalculable services. For a season while it floats in the very front, nay as it were stands solitary there, waiting whether force will gather round it, this same National Carroccio, and the signal peals it rings, are a main object with us.

The omen of the 'slouch hats clapt on' shows the Commons Deputies

CHAP. I
May 6-15,
1789

Deputies to have made up their minds on one thing: that neither Noblesse nor Clergy shall have precedence of them; hardly even Majesty itself. To such length has the Contrat Social, and force of public opinion, carried us. For what is Majesty but the Delegate of the Nation; delegated, and bargained with (even rather tightly),—in some very singular posture of affairs, which Jean Jacques has not fixed the date of?

Coming therefore into their Hall, on the morrow, an inorganic mass of Six Hundred individuals, these Commons Deputies perceive, without terror, that they have it all to themselves. Their Hall is also the Grand or general Hall for all the Three Orders. But the Noblesse and Clergy, it would seem, have retired to their two separate Apartments, or Halls; and are there 'verifying their powers,' not in a conjoint but in a separate capacity. They are to constitute two separate, perhaps separately-voting Orders, then? It is as if both Noblesse and Clergy had silently taken for granted that they already were such! Two Orders against one; and so the Third Order to be left in a perpetual minority?

Much may remain unfixed; but the negative of that is a thing fixed: in the Slouch-hatted heads, in the French Nation's head. Double representation, and all else hitherto gained, were otherwise futile, null. Doubtless, the 'powers must be verified'; —doubtless, the Commission, the electoral Documents of your Deputy must be inspected by his brother Deputies, and found valid: it is the preliminary of all. Neither is this question, of doing it separately or doing it conjointly, a vital one: but if it lead to such? It must be resisted; wise was that maxim, Resist the beginnings! Nay were resistance unadvisable, even dangerous, yet surely pause is very natural: pause, with Twenty-five Millions behind you, may become resistance enough.—The inorganic mass of Commons Deputies will restrict itself to a 'system of inertia,' and for the present remain inorganic.

Such method, recommendable alike to sagacity and to timidity, do the Commons Deputies adopt; and, not without adroitness, and with ever more tenacity, they persist in it, day after day, week after week. For six weeks their history is of the kind named barren; which indeed, as Philosophy knows,

BOOK V
May 6-15
1789

knows, is often the fruitfulest of all These were their still creation days, wherein they sat incubating! In fact, what they did was to do nothing, in a judicious manner Daily the inorganic body reassembles, regrets that they cannot get organisation, 'verification of powers in common' and begin regenerating France Headlong motions may be made, but let such be repressed, inertia alone is at once unpunishable and unconquerable

Cunning must be met by cunning, proud pretension by inertia, by a low tone of patriotic sorrow, low, but incurable unalterable Wise as serpents, harmless as doves what a spectacle for France! Six Hundred inorganic individuals, essential for its regeneration and salvation, sit there, on their elliptic benches longing passionately towards life, in painful durance, like souls waiting to be born Speeches are spoken, eloquent, audible within doors and without Mind agitates itself against mind, the Nation looks on with ever deeper interest Thus do the Commons Deputies sit incubating

There are private conclaves, supper parties, consultations, Breton Club, Club of Viroflay, germs of many Clubs Wholly an element of confused noise, dimness, angry heat,—wherein, however, the Eros egg kept at the fit temperature, may hover safe, unbroken till it be hatched In your Mouniers Malouets Lechapeliers is science sufficient for that, fervour in your Barnaves, Rabauts At times shall come an inspiration from royal Mirabeau he is nowise yet recognised as royal, nay he was 'groaned at,' when his name was first mentioned hut he is struggling towards recognition

In the course of the week, the Commons having called their Eldest to the chair, and furnished him with young stronger lunged assistants,—can speak articulately, and, in audible lamentable words, declare, as we said, that they are an inorganic body, longing to become organic Letters arrive, hut an inorganic body cannot open letters, they lie on the table unopened The Eldest may at most procure for himself some kind of List or Muster roll, to take the votes by, and wait what will betide Noblesse and Clergy are all elsewhere however, an eager public crowds all galleries and vacancies, which is some comfort With effort, it is determined, not that a Deputation shall be sent,—for how can an inorganic body send deputntions?—but that certain individual Com mons

mons Members shall, in an accidental way, stroll into the Clergy Chamber, and then into the Noblesse one; and mention there, as a thing they have happened to observe, that the Commons seem to be sitting waiting for them, in order to verify their powers. That is the wiser method!

The Clergy, among whom are such a multitude of Undignified, of mere Commons in Curates' frocks, depute instant respectful answer that they are, and will now more than ever be, in deepest study as to that very matter. Contrariwise the Noblesse, in cavalier attitude, reply, after four days, that they, for their part, are all verified and constituted; which, they had trusted, the Commons also were; such separate verification being clearly the proper constitutional wisdom-of-ancestors method;—as they the Noblesse will have much pleasure in demonstrating by a Commission of their number, if the Commons will meet them, Commission against Commission! Directly in the rear of which comes a deputation of Clergy, reiterating, in their insidious conciliatory way, the same proposal. Here, then, is a complexity: what will wise Commons say to this?

Warily, inertly, the wise Commons, considering that they are, if not a French Third Estate, at least an Aggregate of individuals pretending to some title of that kind, determine, after talking on it five days, to name such a Commission,—though, as it were, with proviso not to be convinced: a sixth day is taken up in naming it; a seventh and an eighth day in getting the forms of meeting, place, hour and the like, settled: so that it is not till the evening of the 23d of May that Noblesse Commission first meets Commons Commission, Clergy acting as Conciliators; and begins the impossible task of convincing it. One other meeting, on the 25th, will suffice: the Commons are inconvincible, the Noblesse and Clergy irrefragably convincing; the Commissioners retire; each Order persisting in its first pretensions.¹

Thus have three weeks passed. For three weeks, the Third-Estate Carroccio, with far-seen Gonfalon, has stood stockstill, flouting the wind; waiting what force would gather round it.

Fancy can conceive the feeling of the Court; and how counsel met counsel, and loud-sounding inanity whirled in that distracted vortex, where wisdom could not dwell. Your cunningly devised

CHAP. I
May 6-15,
1789

¹ Reported Debates, 6th May to 1st June 1789 (in Histoire Parlementaire, i. 379-422).
Taxing-

BOOK V
May 16 26,
1789

Taxing Machine has been got together; set up with incredible labour, and stands there, its three pieces in contact; its two fly wheels of Noblesse and Clergy, its huge working wheel of Tiers État. The two fly wheels whirl in the softest manner, but, prodigious to look upon, the huge working wheel hangs motionless, refuses to stir! The cunningest engineers are at fault. How will it work, when it does begin? Fearfully, my Friends; and to many purposes, but to gather taxes, or grind court meal, one may apprehend, never. Could we but have continued gathering taxes by hand! Messigneurs d'Artois, Conti, Condé (named Court Trumvirate), they of the anti-democratic Mémoire au Roi, has not their foreboding proved true? They may wave reproachfully their high beads; they may heat their poor brains, but the cunningest engineers can do nothing. Necker himself, were he even listened to, begins to look blue. The only thing one sees advisable is to bring up soldiers. New regiments, two, and a battalion of a third, have already reached Paris, others shall get in march. Good were it, in all circumstances, to have troops within reach; good that the command were in sure hands. Let Broglie be appointed, old Marshal Duke de Broglie; veteran disciplinarian, of a firm drill sergent morality, such as may be depended on.

For, alas, neither are the Clergy, or the very Noblesse what they should be, and might be, when so menaced from without: entire, undivided within. The Noblesse, indeed, have their Catiline or Crispin D'Espréménail, dusky glowing, all in rene-gade heat; their boisterous Barrel Mirabeau; but also they have their Lafayettes, Liancourts, Lameths, above all, their D'Orléans, now cut for ever from his Court moorings, and musing drowsily of high and highest sea prizes (for is not he too a son of Henri Quatre, and partial potential Her Apparent?)—on his voyage towards Chaos. From the Clergy again, so numerous are the Curés, actual deserters have run over: two small parties; in the second party Curé Grégoire. Nay there is a talk of a whole Hundred and Forty nine of them about to desert in mass, and only restrained by an Archbishop of Paris. It seems a losing game.

But judge if France, if Paris sat idle, all this while! Addresses from far and near flow in: for our Commons have now grown organic enough to open fetters. Or indeed to cavil at them!

Thus

Thus poor Marquis de Brézé, Supreme Usher, Master of Ceremonies, or whatever his title was, writing about this time on some ceremonial matter, sees no harm in winding up with a 'Monsieur, yours with sincere attachment.'—'To whom does it address itself, this sincere attachment?' inquires Mirabeau. 'To the Dean of the Tiers-État.'—'There is no man in France entitled to write that,' rejoins he; whereat the Galleries and the World will not be kept from applauding.¹ Poor De Brézé! These Commons have a still older grudge at him; nor has he yet done with them.

In another way, Mirabeau has had to protest against the quick suppression of his Newspaper, Journal of the States-General;—and to continue it under a new name. In which act of valour, the Paris Electors, still busy redacting their Cahier, could not but support him, by Address to his Majesty: they claim utmost 'provisory freedom of the press'; they have spoken even about demolishing the Bastille, and erecting a Bronze Patriot King on the site!—These are the rich Burghers: but now consider how it went, for example, with such loose miscellany, now all grown eleutheromaniae, of Loungers, Prowlers, social Nondescripts (and the distilled Raseality of our Planet), as whirls for ever in the Palais-Royal;—or what low infinite groan, fast changing into a growl, comes from Saint-Antoine, and the Twenty-five Millions in danger of starvation!

There is the indisputablest scarcity of corn;—be it Aristocrat-plot, D'Orléans-plot, of this year; or drought and hail of last year: in city and province, the poor man looks desolately towards a nameless lot. And this States-General, that could make us an age of gold, is forced to stand motionless; cannot get its powers verified! All industry necessarily languishes, if it be not that of making motions.

In the Palais Royal there has been erected, apparently by subscription, a kind of Wooden Tent (en planches de bois);²—most convenient; where select Patriotism can now redact resolutions, deliver harangues, with comfort, let the weather be as it will. Lively is that Satan-at-Home! On his table, on his chair, in every café, stands a patriotic orator; a crowd round him within; a crowd listening from without, open-mouthed, through open door and window; with 'thunders

CHAP.
May 16-26
1789

¹ Moniteur (in Histoire Parlementaire, i. 405).

² Histoire Parlementaire, i. 429.
of

BOOK V
May 16-26,
1789

of applause for every sentiment of more than common hardness' In Monsieur Dessein's Pamphlet shop, close by, you cannot without strong elbowing get to the counter every hour produces its pamphlet, or litter of pamphlets; 'there were thirteen today, sixteen yesterday, ninety two last week' Think of Tyranny and Scarcity; Fervid eloquence, Rumour, Pamphleteering, Société Publicole, Breton Club, Enraged Club,—and whether every tap room, coffee room, social reunion, accidental street group, over wide France, was not an Enraged Club!

To all which the Commons Deputies can only listen with a sublime inertia of sorrow, reduced to hush themselves 'with their internal police' Surer position no Deputies ever occupied, if they keep it with skill Let not the temperature rise too high, break not the Eros egg till it be hatched, till it break itself! An eager public crowds all Galleries and vacancies, 'cannot be restrained from applauding' The two Privileged Orders, the Noblesse all verified and constituted, may look on with what face they will, not without a secret tremor of heart The Clergy, always acting the part of conciliators, make a cluteb at the Galleries, and the popularity there, and miss it Deputation of them arrives, with dolorous message about the 'dearth of grams,' and the necessity there is of casting aside vain formalities, and deliberating on this An insidious proposal; which, however, the Commons (moved thereto by sea green Robespierre) dexterously accept as a sort of hint, or even pledge, that the Clergy will forthwith come over to them, constitute the States General, and so cheapen grains!—Finally, on the 27th day of May, Mirabeau, judging the time now nearly come, proposes that 'the inertia cease', that, leaving the Noblesse to their own stiff ways, the Clergy be summoned, 'in the name of the God of Peace,' to join the Commons, and begin² To which summons if they turn a deaf ear,—we shall see! Are not one Hundred and Forty-nine of them ready to desert?

O Triumvirate of Princes, new Garde des Sceaux Barentin, thou Home Secretary Breteuil, Duchess Polignac, and Queen eager to listen,—what is now to be done? This Third Estate will get in motion, with the force of all France in it, Clergy-machinery with Noblesse-machinery, which were to serve as beautiful counterbalances and drags, will be shamefully dragged after it,—and take fire along with it. What is to be done? The Œil-de-Bœuf waxes more confused than ever. Whisper and counter-whisper; a very tempest of whispers! Leading men from all the Three Orders are nightly spirited thither; conjurors many of them; but can they conjure this? Neeker himself were now welcome, could he interfere to purpose.

¹ Arthur Young Travels, L. 104

² Histoire Parlementaire L. 413

³ Bally Allmo res 1 114

CHAP. I
May 27-June
17, 1789

Let Neeker interfere, then; and in the King's name! Happily that incendiary 'God-of-Peace' message is not yet answered. The Three Orders shall again have conferences; under this Patriot Minister of theirs, somewhat may be healed, clouted up;—we meanwhile getting forward Swiss Regiments, and a 'hundred pieces of field-artillery.' This is what the Œil-de-Bœuf, for its part, resolves on.

But as for Neeker—Alas, poor Neeker, thy obstinate Third Estate has one first-last word, verification in common, as the pledge of voting and deliberating in common! Half-way proposals, from such a tried friend, they answer with a stare. The tardy conferences speedily break up: The Third Estate, now ready and resolute, the whole world backing it, returns to its Hall of the Three Orders; and Neeker to the Œil-de-Bœuf, with the character of a disconjured conjuror there,—fit only for dismissal.¹

And so the Commons Deputies are at last on their own strength getting under way? Instead of Chairman, or Dean, they have now got a President: Astronomer Bailly. Under way, with a vengeance! With endless vociferous and temperate eloquence, borne on Newspaper wings to all lands, they have now, on this 17th day of June, determined that their name is not Third Estate, but—National Assembly! They, then, are the Nation? Triumvirate of Princes, Queen, refractory Noblesse and Clergy, what, then, are you? A most deep question;—scarcely answerable in living political dialects.

All regardless of which, our new National Assembly proceeds to appoint a 'committee of subsistences'; dear to France, though it can find little or no grain. Next, as if our National Assembly stood quite firm on its legs,—to appoint 'four other standing committees'; then to settle the security of the National Debt; then that of the Annual Taxation: all within ¹ Debates, 1st to 17th June 1789 (in Histoire Parlementaire, i. 422-78).

BOOK V
May 27-June
17, 1789

eight and forty hours At such rate of velocity it is going the conjurors of the Œil de-Bœuf may well ask themselves, Whither?

CHAPTER II

MERCURY DE BREZE

Now surely were the time for a 'god from the machine', there is a nodus worthy of one The only question is, Which god? Shall it be Mars de Broghe, with his hundred pieces of cannon?—Not yet, answers prudence, so soft, irresolute is King Louis Let it be Messenger Mercury, our Supreme Usher de Brezé!

On the morrow, which is the 20th of June, these Hundred and Forty nine false Curates, no longer restrainable by his Grace of Paris, will desert in a body Let De Brezé intervene, and produce—closed doors! Not only shall there be Royal Session, in that Salle des Menus, but no meeting nor working (except by carpenters), till then Your Third Estate, self styled 'National Assembly,' shall suddenly see itself extruded from its Hall, by carpenters, in this dexterous way, and reduced to do nothing, not even to meet, or articulately lament,—till Majesty, with Stance Royale and new miracles, be ready! In this manner shall De Brezé, as Mercury ex machina, intervene, and, if the Œil de-Bœuf mistake not, work deliverance from the nodus.

Of poor De Brezé we can remark that he has yet prospered in none of his dealings with these Commons Five weeks ago, when they kissed the hand of Majesty, the mode he took got nothing but censure, and then his 'sincere attachment,' how was it scornfully whiffed aside! Before supper, this night, he writes to President Bailly, a new Letter, to be delivered shortly after dawn tomorrow, in the King's name Which Letter, however, Bailly, in the pride of office, will merely crush together into his pocket, like a bill he does not mean to pay.

Accordingly on Saturday morning the 20th of June, shrill sounding heralds proclaim, through the streets of Versailles, that there is to be Stance Royale next Monday, and no meeting of the States General till then And yet, we observe,
President

THE SWORD OF DAMOCLES.
(Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette.)

President Bailly, in sound of this, and with De Brézé's Letter in his pocket, is proceeding, with National Assembly at his heels, to the accustomed Salle des Menus; as if De Brézé and heralds were mere wind. It is shut, this Salle; occupied by Gardes Françaises. 'Where is your Captain?' The Captain shows his royal order: workmen, he is grieved to say, are all busy setting up the platform for his Majesty's Séance; most unfortunately, no admission; admission, at furthest, for President and Secretaries to bring away papers, which the joiners might destroy!—President Bailly enters with Secretaries; and returns bearing papers; alas, within doors, instead of patriotic eloquence, there is now no noise but hammering, sawing, and operative screeching and rumbling! A profanation without parallel.

The Deputies stand grouped on the Paris Road, on this umbrageous Avenue de Versailles; complaining aloud of the indignity done them. Courtiers, it is supposed, look from their windows, and giggle. The morning is none of the comfortablest: raw; it is even drizzling a little.¹ But all travellers pause; patriot gallery-men, miscellaneous spectators increase the groups. Wild counsels alternate. Some desperate Deputies propose to go and hold session on the great outer Staircase at Marly, under the King's windows; for his Majesty, it seems, has driven over thither. Others talk of making the Château Forcecourt, what they call Place d'Armes, a Runnymede and new Champ de Mai of free Frenchmen: nay of awakening, to sounds of indignant Patriotism, the echoes of the Œil-de-Bœuf itself.—Notice is given that President Bailly, aided by judicious Guillotin and others, has found place in the Tennis-Court of the Rue St. François. Thither, in long-drawn files, hoarse-jingling, like cranes on wing, the Commons Deputies angrily wend.

Strange sight was this in the Rue St. François, Vieux Versailles! A naked Tennis-Court, as the pictures of that time still give it: four walls; naked, except aloft some poor wooden penthouse, or roofed spectators'-gallery, hanging round them:—on the floor not now an idle teeheeing, a snapping of balls and rackets; but the bellowing din of an indignant National Representation, scandalously exiled hither! However, a cloud of witnesses looks down on them, from wooden penthouse, from

¹ Bailly, Mémoires, i. 185-206.

BOOK V
June 20,
1789

wall top, from adjoining roof and chimney, rolls towards them from all quarters, with passionate spoken blessings. Some table can be procured to write on, some chair, if not to sit on, then to stand on. The Secretaries undo their tapes; Bailly has constituted the Assembly.

Experienced Mounier, not wholly new to such things, in Parliamentary revolts, which he has seen or heard of, thinks that it were well, in these lamentable threatening circumstances, to unite themselves by an Oath—Universal acclamation, as from smouldering bosoms getting vent! The Oath is redacted; pronounced aloud by President Bailly,—and indeed in such a sonorous tone, that the cloud of witnesses, even outdoors, hear it, and bellow response to it. Six hundred right hands rise with President Bailly's, to take God above to witness that they will not separate for man below, but will meet in all places, under all circumstances, wheresoever two or three can get together, till they have made the Constitution. Made the Constitution, Friends! That is a long task. Six hundred hands, meanwhile, will sign as they have sworn. Six hundred save one, one Loyalist Abdiel, still visible by this sole light point, and namable, poor 'M Martin d'Auch, from Castelnaudary, in Languedoc.' Him they permit to sign or signify refusal, they even save him from the cloud of witnesses, by declaring 'his head deranged.' At four o'clock, the signatures are all appended, new meeting is fixed for Monday morning, earlier than the hour of the Royal Session, that our Hundred and Forty nine Clerical deserters be not balked. We will meet 'at the Recollets Church or elsewhere,' in hope that our Hundred and Forty nine will join us,—and now it is time to go to dinner.

This, then, is the Session of the Tennis Court, famed Stance du Jeu de Paume, the fame of which has gone forth to all lands. This is Mercurius de Brézé's appearance as Deus ex machina, this is the fruit it brings! The giggle of Courtiers in the Versailles Avenue has already died into gaunt silence. Did the distracted Court, with Garde-des-Scaux Barentin, Triumvirate and Company, imagine that they could scatter six hundred National Deputies, big with a National Constitution, like as much barndoor poultry, big with next to nothing,—by the white or black rod of a Supreme Usher? Barndoor poultry fly cackling but National Deputies turn round, lion-faced; faced ; and, with uplifted right-hand, swear an Oath that makes the four corners of France tremble.

President Bailly has covered himself with honour ; which shall become rewards. The National Assembly is now doubly and trebly the Nation's Assembly ; not militant, martyred only, but triumphant ; insulted, and which could not be insulted. Paris disembogues itself once more, to witness, 'with grim looks,' the Séance Royale :¹ which, by a new felicity, is postponed till Tuesday. The Hundred and Forty-nine, and even with Bishops among them, all in processional mass, have had free leisure to march off, and solemnly join the Commons sitting waiting in their Church. The Commons welcomed them with shouts, with embracings, nay with tears ;² for it is growing a life-and-death matter now.

As for the Séance itself, the Carpenters seem to have accomplished their platform ; but all else remains unaccomplished. Futile, we may say fatal, was the whole matter. King Louis enters, through seas of people, all grim-silent, angry with many things,—for it is a bitter rain too. Enters, to a Third Estate, likewise grim-silent ; which has been wetted waiting under mean porches, at back-doors, while Court and Privileged were entering by the front. King and Garde-des-Sceaux (there is no Necker visible) make known, not without longwindedness, the determination of the royal breast. The Three Orders shall vote separately. On the other hand, France may look for considerable constitutional blessings ; as specified in these Five-and-thirty Articles,³ which Garde-des-Sceaux is waxing hoarse with reading. Which Five-and-thirty Articles, adds his Majesty again rising, if the Three Orders most unfortunately cannot agree together to effect them, I myself will effect : 'seul je ferai le bien de mes peuples,'—which being interpreted may signify, You, contentious Deputies of the States-General, have probably not long to be here ! But, in fine, all shall now withdraw for this day ; and meet again, each Order in its separate place, tomorrow morning, for despatch of business. This is the determination of the royal breast : pithy and clear. And herewith King, retinue, Noblesse, majority of Clergy file out, as if the whole matter were satisfactorily completed.

These file out ; through grim-silent seas of people. Only

¹ See Arthur Young (Travels, i. 115-8) ; A. Lameth, etc.

² Dumont, Souvenirs sur Mirabeau, c. 4.

³ Histoire Parlementaire, i. 13.

BOOK V
June 1789

remaining Clergy, and likewise some Forty eight Noblesse, D Orléans among them, have now forthwith gone over to the victorious Commons,—by whom as is natural they are received 'with acclamation'

The Third Estate triumphs, Versailles Town shouting round it ten thousand whirling all day in the Palais Royal, and all France standing a tiptoe not unlike whirling! Let the Ceil de Bœuf look to it As for King Louis he will swallow his injuries, will temporise, keep silence will at all costs have present peace It was Tuesday the 23d of June, when he spoke that peremptory royal mandate, and the week is not done till he has written to the remaining obstinate Noblesse, that they also must oblige him and give in D Espréménil rages his last, Barrel Mirabeau 'breaks his sword' making a vow,—which he might as well have kept The 'Triple Family' is now therefore complete, the third erring brother, the Noblesse having joined it,—erring but pardonable, soothed, so far as possible, by sweet eloquence from President Bailly

So triumphs the Third Estate, and States General are become National Assembly, and all France may sing Te Deum By wise inertia and wise cessation of inertia great victory has been gained It is the last night of June all night you meet nothing on the streets of Versailles but 'men running with torches,' with shouts and jubilation From the 2d of May when they kissed the hand of Majesty, to this 30th of June when men run with torches we count eight weeks and three days For eight weeks the National Carroccio has stood far seen ringing many a signal, and so much having now gathered round it, may hope to stand

CHAPTER III

BROCLIF THE WAR GOD

THE Court feels malignant that it is conquered, but what then? Another time it will do better Mercury descended in vain, now has the time come for Mars—The gods of the Ceil de Bœuf have withdrawn into the darkness of their cloudy Ida, and sit there, shaping and forging what may be needful be

be it 'billets of a new National Bank,' munitions of war, or things for ever inscrutable to men.

Accordingly, what means this 'apparatus of troops'? The National Assembly can get no furtherance for its Committee of Subsistences; can hear only that, at Paris, the Bakers' shops are besieged; that, in the Provinces, people are 'living on meal-husks and boiled grass.' But on all highways there hover dust-clouds, with the march of regiments, with the trailing of cannon: foreign Pandours, of fierce aspect; Salis-Samade, Esterhazy, Royal-Allemand; so many of them foreign; to the number of thirty thousand,—which fear can magnify to fifty: all wending towards Paris and Versailles! Already, on the heights of Montmartre, is a digging and delving; too like a scarping and trenching. The effluence of Paris is arrested Versailles-ward by a barrier of cannon at Sèvres Bridge. From the Queen's Mews, cannon stand pointed on the National-Assembly Hall itself. The National Assembly has its very slumbers broken by the tramp of soldiery, swarming and defiling, endless, or seemingly endless, all round those spaces, at dead of night, 'without drum-music, without audible word of command.'¹ What means it?

Shall eight, or even shall twelve Deputies, our Mirabeaus, Barnaves at the head of them, be whirled suddenly to the Castle of Ham; the rest ignominiously dispersed to the winds? No National Assembly can make the Constitution with cannon levelled on it from the Queen's Mews! What means this reticence of the Œil-de-Bœuf, broken only by nods and shrugs? In the mystery of that cloudy Ida, what is it that they forge and shape?—Such questions must distracted Patriotism keep asking, and receive no answer but an echo.

Questions and echo bad enough in themselves:—and now, above all, while the hungry food-year, which runs from August to August, is getting older; becoming more and more a famine-year! With 'meal-husks and boiled grass,' Brigands may actually collect; and, in crowds, at farm and mansion, howl angrily, Food! Food! It is in vain to send soldiers against them: at sight of soldiers they disperse, they vanish as under ground; then directly reassemble elsewhere for new tumult and plunder. Frightful enough to look upon; but what to hear of, reverberated through Twenty-five Millions of sus-

¹ A. Lameth, Assemblée Constituante, i. 41.

BOOK V
July 1 11, 1789

picious minds! Brigands and Broglie, open Conflagration, preternatural Rumour are driving mad most hearts in France What will the issue of these things be?

At Marseilles, many weeks ago, the Townsmen have taken arms, for 'suppressing of Brigands,' and other purposes the military Commandant may make of it what he will Elsewhere, everywhere, could not the like be done? Dubious on the distracted Patriot Imagination, wavers, as a last deliverance, some foreshadow of a National Guard But conceive, above all, the Wooden Tent in the Palais Royal! A universal hubbub there, as of dissolving worlds there loudest bellows the mad, mad making voice of Rumour, there sharpest gazes Suspicion into the pale dim World Whirlpool, discerning shapes and phantasms imminent bloodthirsty Regiments camped on the Champ de Mars, dispersed National Assembly, red-hot cannon balls (to burn Paris) —the mad War god and Bellona's sounding thongs To the calmest man it is becoming too plain that battle is inevitable

Inevitable, silently nod Messieurs and Broglie Inevitable and brief! Your National Assembly, stopped short in its Constitutional labours, may fatigue the royal ear with addresses and remonstrances those cannon of ours stand duly levelled, those troops are here The King's Declaration, with its Thirty five too generous Articles, was spoken, was not listened to, but remains yet unrevoked he himself shall effect it, seul il fera!

As for Broglie, he has his headquarters at Versailles, all as in a seat of war, clerks writing, significant staff officers, inclined to taciturnity, plumed aides de camp scouts, orderlies flying or hovering He himself looks forth important, impenetrable; listens to Besenval Commandant of Paris and his warning and earnest counsels (for he has come out repeatedly on purpose) with a silent smile¹ The Parisians resist? scorn fully cry Messieurs As a meal mob may! They have sat quiet, these five generations, submitting to all Their Mercier declared, in these very years that a Parisian revolt was henceforth 'impossible'² Stand by the royal Declaration, of the Twenty third of June The Nobles of France, valorous, chivalrous as of old, will rally round us with one heart, and as for this which you call Third Estate and which we call

¹ Besenval, lil. 398

² Mercier et Tableau de Paris, lil. 22
canaille

canaille of unwashed Sansenlottes, of Pateliins, Scribblers, factious Spouters,—brave Broglie, ‘with a whiff of grapeshot (salve de canons),’ if need be, will give quick account of it. Thus reason they: on their cloudy Ida; hidden from men,—men also hidden from them.

CHAP. III
July 1-11,
1789

Good is grapeshot, Messesigneurs, on one condition: that the shooter also were made of metal! But unfortunately he is made of flesh; under his buffs and bandoleers your hired shooter has instincts, feelings, even a kind of thought. It is his kindred, bone of his bone, this same canaille that shall be whiffed; he has brothers in it, a father and mother,—living on meal-husks and boiled grass. His very doxy, not yet ‘dead i’ the spital,’ drives him into military heterodoxy; declares that if he shed Patriot blood, he shall be accursed among men. The soldier, who has seen his pay stolen by rapacious Foulons, his blood wasted by Soubises, Pompadours, and the gates of promotion shut inexorably on him if he were not born noble,—is himself not without griefs against you. Your cause is not the soldier’s cause; but, as would seem, your own only, and no other god’s nor man’s.

For example, the world may have heard how, at Béthune lately, when there rose some ‘riot about grains,’ of which sort there are so many, and the soldiers stood drawn out, and the word ‘Fire!’ was given,—not a trigger stirred; only the butts of all muskets rattled angrily against the ground; and the soldiers stood glooming, with a mixed expression of countenance;—till clutched ‘each under the arm of a patriot householder,’ they were all hurried off, in this manner, to be treated and caressed, and have their pay increased by subscription!¹

Neither have the Gardes Françaises, the best regiment of the line, shown any promptitude for street-firing lately. They returned grumbling from Réveillon’s; and have not burnt a single cartridge since; nay, as we saw, not even when bid. A dangerous humour dwells in these Gardes. Notable men too, in their way! Valadi the Pythagorean was, at one time, an officer of theirs. Nay, in the ranks, under the three-cornered felt and cockade, what hard heads may there not be, and reflections going on,—unknown to the public! One head of the hardest we do now discern there: on the shoulders of a certain Sergeant Hoche. Lazare Hoche, that is the name of

¹ Histoire Parlementaire.

BOOK V
July 11,
1789

him, be used to be about the Versailles Royal Stables, nephew of a poor herbwoman, a handy lad, exceedingly addicted to reading. He is now Sergeant Hoche, and can rise no further; he lays out his pay in rushlights, and cheap editions of books.¹

On the whole, the best seems to be. Consign these Gardes Françaises to their Barracks. So Besenval thinks, and orders. Consigned to their barracks, the Gardes Françaises do but form a 'Secret Association,' an Engagement not to act against the National Assembly. Debauched by Valadi the Pythagorean; debauched by money and women! cry Besenval and innumerable others. Debauched by what you will, or in need of no debauching, behold them, long files of them, their consignment broken arrive, headed by their Sergeants, on the 26th day of June, at the Palais Royal! Welcomed with virgins, with presents, and a pledge of patriot liquor, embracing and embraced; declaring in words that the cause of France is their cause! Next day and the following days the like. What is singular too, except this patriot humour, and breaking of their consignment, they behave otherwise with 'the most rigorous accuracy'.²

LA/ARF HOCHÉ

They are growing questionable, these Gardes! Eleven ring leaders of them are put in the Abbaye Prison. It boots not in the least. The imprisoned Eleven have only, 'by the hand of an individual,' to drop, towards nightfall, a line in the Café de Foy; where Patriotism harangues loudest on its table. 'Two hundred young persons, soon waxing to four thousand,' with fit crowbars, roll towards the Abbaye; smite asunder the needful doors; and bear out their Eleven, with other military victims:—to supper in the Palais Royal Garden; to board, and lodging 'in camp-beds, in the Théâtre des Variétés'; other national Prytaneum as yet not being in readiness. Most deliberate! Nay so punctual were these young persons, that finding one military victim to have been imprisoned for real civil crime, they returned him to his cell, with protest.

¹ Dictionary of the Honorable Merchants, Londres (Paris) 1800, il. 198.

² Besenval, il. 374-6.

CHAP. III
July 1-11,
1789

Why new military force was not called out? New military force was called out. New military force did arrive, full gallop, with drawn sabre: but the people gently 'laid hold of their bridles'; the dragoons sheathed their swords; lifted their caps by way of salute, and sat like mere statues of dragoons,—except indeed that a drop of liquor being brought them, they 'drank to the King and Nation with the greatest cordiality.'¹

And now, ask in return, why Messieurs and Broglie the great god of war, on seeing these things, did not pause, and take some other course, any other course? Unhappily, as we said, they could see nothing. Pride, which goes before a fall; wrath, if not reasonable, yet pardonable, most natural, had hardened their hearts and heated their heads: so, with imbecility and violence (ill-matched pair), they rush to seek their hour. All Regiments are not Gardes Françaises, or debauched by Valadi the Pythagorean: let fresh undebauched Regiments come up; let Royal-Allemand, Salis-Samadé, Swiss Château-Vieux come up,—which can fight, but can hardly speak except in German gutturals; let soldiers march, and highways thunder with artillery-wagons: Majesty has a new Royal Session to hold,—and miracles to work there! The whiff of grapeshot can, if needful, become a blast and tempest.

In which circumstances, before the red-hot balls begin raining, may not the Hundred-and-twenty Paris Electors, though their Cahier is long since finished, see good to meet again daily, as an 'Electoral Club'? They meet first 'in a Tavern';—where 'a large wedding-party' cheerfully gives place to them.² But

¹ Histoire Parlementaire, ii. 32.

² Dusaulx. Prise de la Bastille (Collection des Mémoires, par Derville et Barrière, Paris, 1821), p. 269.

BOOK V
July 11,
1789

latterly they meet in the Hôtel de Ville, in the Townhall itself Flesselles Provost of Merchants, with his Four Echevins (Scabins, Assessors), could not prevent it, such was the force of public opinion. He, with his Echevins, and the Six and Twenty Town Councillors, all appointed from Above, may well sit silent there, in their long gowns, and consider, with awed eye, what prelude this is of convulsion coming from Below, and how they themselves shall fare in that!

CHAPTER IV

TO ARMS!

So hangs it, dubious, fateful in the sultry days of July. It is the passionate printed advice of M. Marat, to abstain, of all things, from violence¹. Nevertheless the hungry poor are already burning Town Barriers, where Tribute on eatables is levied, getting clamorous for food.

The twelfth July morning is Sunday: the streets are all placarded with an enormous sized De par le Roi, 'inviting peaceable citizens to remain within doors,' to feel no alarm, to gather in no crowd. Why so? What mean these 'placards of enormous size'? Above all, what means this clatter of military, dragoons hussars, rattling in from all points of the compass towards the Place Louis Quinze, with a staid gravity of face though saluted with mere nicknames, hootings and even missiles?² Desenval is with them. Swiss Guards of his are already in the Champs Elysées, with four pieces of artillery.

Have the destroyers descended on us, then? From the Bridge of Sèvres to utmost Vincennes, from Saint Denis to the Champ de-Mars, we are begirt! Alarm, of the vague unknown, is in every heart. The Palais Royal has become a place of awestruck interjections, silent shakings of the head. One can fancy with what dolorous stound the noon tide cannon (which the Sun fires at crossing of his meridian) went off there, bode-

¹ Advis au Peuple, ou les Mandataires d'ouïr, 1st July 1789 (in Les tomes Parlementaires 11. 37).

² Desenval, 112. 411

ful, like an inarticulate voice of doom.¹ Are these troops CHAP. IV verily come out 'against Brigands'? Where are the Brigands? July 12, 1789
 What mystery is in the wind?—Hark! a human voice reporting articulately the Job's-news: Necker, People's Minister, Saviour of France, is dismissed. Impossible; incredible! Treasonous to the public peace! Such a voice ought to be eloked in the water-works;²—had not the news-bringer quickly fled. Nevertheless, friends, make of it what you will, the news is true.
 Necker is gone. Necker hies northward incessantly, in obedient secrecy, since yesternight. We have a new Ministry: Broglie the War-god; Aristocrat Breteuil; Foulon who said the people might eat grass!

Rumour, therefore, shall arise; in the Palais Royal, and in broad France. Paleness sits on every face; confused tremor and frenesence; waxing into thunder-peals, of Fury stirred on by Fear.

But see Camille Desmoulins, from the Café de Foy, rushing out, sibylline in face; his hair streaming, in each hand a pistol! He springs to a table: the Police satellites are eyeing him; alive they shall not take him, not they alive him alive.
 This time he speaks without stammering:—Friends! shall we die like hunted hares? Like sheep hounded into their pinfold; bleating for mercy, where is no mercy, but only a whetted knife? The hour is come; the supreme hour of Frenchman and Man; when Oppressors are to try conclusions with Oppressed; and the word is, swift Death, or Deliverance for ever. Let such hour be well-come! Us, meseems, one cry only befits: To Arms! Let universal Paris, universal France, as with the throat of the whirlwind, sound only: To arms!—'To arms!' yell responsive the innumerable voices; like one great voice, as of a Demon yelling from the air: for all faces wax fire-eyed, all hearts burn up into madness. In such, or fitter words,³ does Camille evoke the Elemental Powers, in this great moment.—Friends, continues Camille, some rallying-sign! Cockades; green ones;—the colour of Hope!—As with the flight of locusts, these green tree-leaves; green ribands from the neighbouring shops; all green things are snatched,

¹ Histoire Parlementaire, il. 81.

² Ibid.

³ Vieux Cordelier, par Camille Desmoulins, No. 5 (reprinted in Collection des Mémoires, par Baudouin Frères, Paris, 1825), p. 81.

BOOK V and made cockades of. Camille descends from his table, 'stified July 12, 1789 with embraces, wetted with tears'; has a bit of green riband handed him; sticks it in his hat. And now to Curtius' Image-shop there; to the Boulevards; to the four winds; and rest not till France be on fire!

CAMILLE DESMOULINS.

France, so long shaken and wind-parched, is probably at the right inflammable point.—As for poor Curtius, who, one grieves to think, might be but imperfectly paid,—he cannot make two words about his Images. The Wax-bust of Necker, the Wax-bust of D'Orléans, helpers of France: these, covered with crape, as in funeral procession, or after the manner of suppliants suppliants appealing to Heaven, to Earth, and Tartarus itself, a mixed multitude bears off. For a sign! As indeed man, with his singular imaginative faculties, can do little or nothing without signs: thus Turks look to their Prophet's banner; also Osier Mannikins have been burnt, and Necker's Portrait has erewhile figured, aloft on its perch.

In this manner march they, a mixed, continually increasing multitude; armed with axes, staves, and miscellanea; grim, many-sounding, through the streets. Be all Theatres shut; let all dancing, on planked floor, or on the natural greensward, cease! Instead of a Christian Sabbath, and feast of guinguette tabernacles, it shall be a Sorcerer's Sabbath; and Paris, gone rabid, dance,—with the Fiend for piper!

However, Bescnval, with horse and foot, is in the Place Louis Quinze. Mortals promenading homewards, in the fall of the day, saunter by, from Chaillot or Passy, from flirtation and a little thin wine; with sadder step than usual. Will the Bust-Procession pass that way? Behold it; behold also Prince Lambesc dash forth on it, with his Royal-Allemands! Shots fall, and sabre-strokes; Busts are hewed asunder; and, alas, also heads of men. A sabred Procession has nothing for it but to explode, along what streets, alleys, Tuileries Avenues it finds; and disappear. One unarmed man lies hewed down; a Garde Française by his uniform: bear him (or bear even the report of him) dead and gory to his Barracks;—where he has comrades still alive!

But why not now, victorious Lambesc, charge through that Tuileries Garden itself, where the fugitives are vanishing? Not show the Sunday promenaders too, how steel glitters, besprent with blood; that it be told of, and men's ears tingle?—Tingle, alas, they did; but the wrong way. Victorious Lambesc, in this his second or Tuileries charge, succeeds but in overturning (call it not slashing, for he struck with the flat of his sword) one man, a poor old schoolmaster, most pacifically tottering there; and is driven out, by barricade of chairs, by flights of 'bottles and glasses,' by execrations in bass voice and treble. Most delicate is the mob-queller's vocation; wherein Too-much may be as bad as Not-enough. For each of these bass voices, and more each treble voice, borne to all parts of the City, rings now nothing but distracted indignation; will ring all night. The cry, To arms! roars tenfold; steeples with

BOOK V
July 13, 1789

CHAPTER V

GIVE US ARMS

ON Monday the huge City has awoke, not to its week-day industry to what a different one! The working man has become a fighting man, has one want only—that of arms. The industry of all crafts has paused,—except it be the smith's, fiercely hammering pikes, and, in a faint degree, the litchener's, cooking offhand victuals, for bouche va toujours. Women too are sewing cockades,—not now of green, which being D'Artois colour, the Hotel de-Ville has had to interfere in it, but of red and blue, our old Paris colours—these, once based on a ground of constitutional white, are the famed TRICOLOR,—which (if Prophecy err not) 'will go round the world'.

All shops, unless it be the Bakers' and Vintners', are shut. Paris is in the streets,—rushing, foaming like some Venice wine-glass into which you had dropped poison. The tocsin, by order, is pealing madly from all steeples. Arms, ye Elector Municipals, thou Flesselles with thy Echevins, give us arms! Flesselles gives what he can—fallacious, perhaps insidious promises of arms from Charleville; order to seek arms here, order to seek them there. The new Municipals give what they can, some three hundred and sixty indifferent firelocks, the equipment of the City Watch—'a man in wooden shoes, and without coat, directly clutches one of them, and mounts guard'. Also as hiated, an order to all Smiths to make pikes with their whole soul.

Heads of Districts are in fervent consultation, subordinate Patriotism roams distracted, ravenous for arms. Hitherto at the Hôtel de-Ville was only such modicum of indifferent firelocks as we have seen. At the so-called Arsenal, there lies nothing but rust, rubbish, and saltpetre,—overlooked too by the guns of the Bastille. His Majesty's Repository, what they call Garde Meuble, is forced and ransacked—tapestries enough, and gauderies; but of serviceable fighting gear small stock! Two silver mounted cannons there are; an ancient gift from his Majesty of Siam to Louis Fourteenth—gilt sword of the Good Henri, antique Chivalry arms and armour. These, and and such as these, a necessitous Patriotism snatches greedily, for want of better. The Siamese cannons go trundling, on an errand they were not meant for. Among the indifferent firelocks are seen tourney-lances; the princely helm and hauberk glittering amid ill-hatted heads,—as in a time when all times and their possessions are suddenly sent jumbling!

At the Maison de Saint-Lazare, Lazar-House once, now a Correction-House with Priests, there was no trace of arms; but, on the other hand, corn, plainly to a culpable extent. Out with it, to market; in this scarcity of grains!—Heavens, will ‘fifty-two carts,’ in long row, hardly carry it to the Halle aux Bleds? Well, truly, ye reverend Fathers, was your pantry filled; fat are your larders; over-gencrous your wine-bins, ye plotting exasperators of the poor; traitorous forestallers of bread!

Vain is protesting, entreaty on bare knees: the House of Saint-Lazarus has that in it which comes not out by protesting. Behold, how, from every window, it vomits: more torrents of furniture, of bellowing and hurlyburly;—the cellars also leaking wine. Till, as was natural, smoke rose,—kindled, some say, by the desperate Saint-Lazaristes themselves, desperate of other riddance; and the Establishment vanished from this world in flame. Remark nevertheless that ‘a thief’ (set on or not by Aristocrats), being detected there, is ‘instantly hanged.’

Look also at the Châtelet Prison. The Debtors’ Prison of La Force is broken from without; and they that sat in bondage to Aristocrats go free: hearing of which the Felons at the Châtelet do likewise ‘dig up their pavements,’ and stand on the offensive; with the best prospects,—had not Patriotism, passing that way, ‘fired a volley’ into the Felon world; and crushed it down again under hatches. Patriotism consorts not with thieving and felony: surely also Punishment, this day, hitches (if she still hitch) after Crime, with frightful shoes-of-swiftness! ‘Some score or two’ of wretched persons, found prostrate with drink in the cellars of that Saint-Lazare, are indignantly haled to prison; the Jailor has no room; whereupon other place of security not suggesting itself, it is written, ‘on les pendit, they hanged them.’¹ Brief is the word; not without significance, be it true or untrue!

In such circumstances, the Aristocrat, the unpatriotic rich

¹ Histoire Parlementaire, ii. 96.

BOOK V Besenval, in the Champ de-Mars, has worn out these sorrowful July 13 1789 hours Insurrection raging all round, his men melting away !
 From Versailles, to the most pressing messages, comes no answer, or once only some vague word of answer which is worse than none A Council of Officers can decide rarely that there is no decision Colonels inform him, 'weeping' that they do not think their men will fight Cruel uncertainty is here, war god Broghe sits yonder, inaccessible in his Olympus, does not descend terror-clad, does not produce his whiff of grapeshot, sends no orders

Truly, in the Château of Versailles all seems mystery in the Town of Versailles, were we there all is rumour, alarm and indignation An august National Assembly sits, to appear ance, menaced with death, endeavouring to defy death. It has resolved 'that Necker carries with him the regrets of the Nation' It has sent solemn Deputation over to the Château with entreaty to have these troops withdrawn In vain his Majesty, with a singular composure, invites us to be busy rather with our own duty, making the Constitution! Foreign Pandours and suchlike, go pricking and prancing, with a swashbuckler air, with an eye too probably to the Salle des Menus—were it not for the 'grim looking countenances' that crowd all avenues there¹ Be firm ye National Senators, the cynosure of a firm, grim looking people !

The august National Senators determine that there shall, nt least, be Permanent Session till this thing end Wherein however, consider that worthy Lafranc de Pompignan, our new President, whom we have named Bailly's successor, is an old man, wearied with many things He is the Brother of that Pompignan who meditated lamentably on the Book of Lamen tations

*Savez-vous pourquoi Jérôme Se lamentait toute sa vie ?
 C'est qu'il prévoyait Que Pompignan le traduirait !*

Poor Bishop Pompignan withdraws, having got Lafayette for helper or substitute this latter, as nocturnal Vice-President, with a thin house in disconsolate humour, sits sleepless with lights unsnuffed,—waiting what the hours will bring

¹ See Lameth ; Fernières etc.

So at Versailles. But at Paris, agitated Besenval, before CHAP. V retiring for the night, has stept over to old M. de Sombreuil, July 13, 1789 of the Hôtel des Invalides hard by. M. de Sombreuil has, what is a great secret, some eight-and-twenty thousand stand of muskets deposited in his cellars there; but no trust in the temper of his Invalides. This day, for example, he sent twenty of the fellows down to unscrew those muskets; lest Sedition might snatch at them: but scarcely, in six hours, had the twenty unscrewed twenty gun-locks, or dogsheads (chiens) of locks,—each Invalid his dogshead! If ordered to fire, they would, he imagines, turn their cannon against himself.

Unfortunate old military gentlemen, it is your hour, not of glory!
Old Marquis de Launay too, of the Bastille, has pulled up his draw-bridges long since, 'and retired into his interior'; with sentries walking on his battlements, under the midnight sky, aloft over the glare of illuminated Paris;—
whom a National Patrol, passing that way, takes the liberty of firing at:

DE LAUNAY.

'seven shots towards twelve at night,' which do not take effect.¹
This was the 13th day of July 1789; a worse day, many said, than the last 13th was, when only hail fell out of Heaven, not madness rose out of Tophet, ruining worse than crops!

In these same days, as Chronology will teach us, hot old Marquis Mirabeau lies stricken down, at Argenteuil,—not within sound of these alarm-guns; for he properly is not there, and only the body of him now lies, deaf and cold for ever. It was on Saturday night that he, drawing his last life-breaths, gave up the ghost there;—leaving a world, which would never

¹ Deux Amis de la Liberté, i. 312.

BOOK V go to his mind, now broken out, seemingly, into delirium and July 13 1789 the culbute générale What is it to him, departing elsewhere, on his long journey ? The old Château Mirabeau stands silent, far off, on its scarped rock, in that 'gorge of two windy valleys', the pale-fading spectre now of a Château this huge World riot, and France, and the World itself, fades also, like a shadow on the great still mirror-sea, and all shall be as God wills

Young Mirabeau, sad of heart, for he loved this crabbed brave old Father, sad of heart, and occupied with sad cares, —is withdrawn from Public History The great crisis transacts itself without him¹

CHAPTER VI

STORM AND VICTORY

BUT, to the living and the struggling a new, Fourteenth morning dawns Under all roofs of this distracted City is the nodus of a drama, not untragic, crowding towards solution
 The bustlings and preparings, the tremors and menaces, the tears that fell from old eyes ! This day, my sons ye shall quit you like men By the memory of your fathers' wrongs, by the hope of your children's rights ! Tyranny impends in red wrath help for you is none, if not in your own right hands
 This day ye must do or die

From earliest light, a sleepless Permanent Committee has heard the old cry, now waxing almost frantic, mutinous Arms !
 Arms ! Provost Flesselles, or what traitors there are among you, may think of those Charleville Boxes A hundred and fifty thousand of us, and but the third man furnished with so much as a pike ! Arms are the one thing needful with arms we are an unconquerable man-defying National Guard, with out arms, a rabble to be whiffed with grapeshot.

Happily the word has arisen, for no secret can be kept,— that there lie muskets at the Hôtel des Invalides Thither will we King's Procureur M Ethys de Corny, and whatsoever of authority a Permanent Committee can lend, shall go with us. Desenval's Camp is there, perhaps he will not fire on us, if he kill us we shall but die.

¹ Fils Adoptif Mirabeau vi. l. 1

Alas, poor Besenval, with his troops melting away in that CHAP. VI manner, has not the smallest humour to fire! At five o'clock July 14, 1789 this morning, as he lay dreaming, oblivious in the École Militaire, a 'figure' stood suddenly at his bedside; 'with face rather handsome; eyes inflamed, speech rapid and curt, air audacious': such a figure drew Priam's curtains! The message and monition of the figure was, that resistance would be hopeless; that if blood flowed, woe to him who shed it. Thus spoke the figure: and vanished. 'Withal there was a kind of eloquence that struck one.' Besenval admits that he should have arrested him, but did not.¹ Who this figure with inflamed eyes, with speech rapid and curt, might be? Besenval knows, but mentions not. Camille Desmoulins? Pythagorean Marquis Valadi, inflamed with 'violent motions all night at the Palais Royal'? Fame names him 'Young M. Meillar';² then shuts her lips about him for ever.

In any case, behold, about nine in the morning, our National Volunteers rolling in long wide flood south-westward to the Hôtel des Invalides; in search of the one thing needful. King's Procureur M. Ethys de Corny and officials are there; the Curé of Saint-Étienne du Mont marches unpacific at the head of his militant Parish; the Clerks of the Basoche in red coats we see marching, now Volunteers of the Basoche; the Volunteers of the Palais Royal:—National Volunteers, numerable by tens of thousands; of one heart and mind. The King's muskets are the Nation's; think, old M. de Sombreuil, how, in this extremity, thou wilt refuse them! Old M. de Sombreuil would fain hold parley, send couriers; but it skills not: the walls are sealed, no Invalide firing a shot; the gates must be flung open. Patriotism rushes in, tumultuous, from grunsel up to ridge-tile, through all rooms and passages; rummaging distractedly for arms. What cellar, or what cranny can escape it? The arms are found; all safe there; lying packed in straw.—apparently with a view to being burnt! More ravenous than famishing lions over dead prey, the multitude, with ~~clamour~~ and vociferation, pounces on them; struggling, ~~clashing~~ clutching:—to the jamming-up, to the pressure, ~~clashing~~

¹ Besenval, iii. 414.

² Tableaux de la Révolution, Prise de la Bastille (a folio Collection of Paintings and Portraits, with letter-press, not always uninteresting,—see also a Poem by Chamfort).

BOOK V
July 14 1789 probable extinction of the weaker Patriot' And so, with such protracted crash of deafening most discordant Orchestra music the Scene is changed, and eight and twenty thousand sufficient firelocks are on the shoulders of as many National Guards, lifted thereby out of darkness into fiery light.

Let Besenval look at the glitter of these muskets as they flash by! Gardes Françaises it is said have cannon levelled on him ready to open if need were from the other side of the River² Motionless sits he, 'astonished one may flatter one self 'at the proud bearing (fière contenance) of the Parisians — And now to the Bastille ye intrepid Parisians! There grape-shot still threatens thither all men's thoughts and steps are now tending

Old De Launay, as we hinted withdrew 'into his interior' soon after midnight of Sunday He remains there ever since hampered as all military gentlemen now are in the saddest conflict of uncertainties The Hôtel de-Ville 'invites' him to admit National Soldiers which is a soft name for surrendering On the other hand his Majesty's orders were precise His garrison is but eighty two old Invalides reinforced by thirty two young Swiss, his walls indeed are nine feet thick he has cannon and powder, but alas only one day's provision of victuals The city too is French the poor garrison mostly French Rigorous old De Launay think what thou wilt do!

All morning since nine there has been a cry everywhere To the Bastille! Repeated 'deputations of citizens' have been here passionate for arms whom De Launay has got dismissed by soft speeches through portholes Towards noon Elector Thuriot de la Rosière gains admittance finds De Launay indisposed for surrender, nay disposed for blowing up the place rather Thuriot mounts with him to the battlements heaps of paving stones old iron and missiles lie piled cannon all duly levelled, in every embrasure a cannon—only drawn back a little! But outwards behold O Thuriot how the multitude flows on welling through every street tocsin furiously pealing all drums beating the générale the Suburb Saint Antoine rolling hitherward wholly, as one man! Such vision (spectral yet real) thou O Thuriot as from thy Mount of Vision beholdest in this moment prophetic of what other

² Doux Am L. 302.

² Besenval l. l. 416.

Phantasmagories,

Phantasmagories, and loud-gibbering Spectral Realities, which thou yet beholdest not, but shalt! 'Que voulez-vous?' said De Launay, turning pale at the sight, with an air of reproach, almost of menace. 'Monsieur,' said Thuriot, rising into the moral-sublime, 'what mean you? Consider if I could not precipitate both of us from this height,'—say only a hundred feet, exclusive of the walled ditch! Whereupon De Launay fell silent. Thuriot shows himself from some pinnacle, to comfort the multitude becoming suspicious, fremeseent: then descends; departs with protest; with warning addressed also to the Invalides,—on whom, however, it produces but a mixed indistinct impression. The old heads are none of the clearest; besides, it is said, De Launay has been profuse of beverages (prodigua des boissons). They think, they will not fire,—if not fired on, if they can help it; but must, on the whole, be ruled considerably by circumstances.

Wo to thee, De Launay, in such an hour, if thou canst not, taking some one firm decision, rule circumstances! Soft speeches will not serve; hard grapeshot is questionable; but hovering between the two is unquestionable. Ever wilder swells the tide of men; their infinite hum waxing ever louder, into imprecations, perhaps into crackle of stray musketry,—which latter, on walls nine feet thick, cannot do execution. The Outer Drawbridge has been lowered for Thuriot; new deputation of citizens (it is the third, and noisiest of all) penetrates that way into the Outer Court: soft speeches producing no clearance of these, De Launay gives fire; pulls up his Drawbridge. A slight sputter;—which has kindled the too combustible chaos; made it a roaring fire-chaos! Bursts forth Insurrection, at sight of its own blood (for there were deaths by that sputter of fire), into endless rolling explosion of musketry, distraction, execration;—and over head, from the Fortress, let one great gun, with its grapeshot, go booming, to show what we could do. The Bastille is besieged!

On, then, all Frenchmen, that have hearts in your bodies! Roar with all your throats, of cartilage and metal, ye Sons of Liberty; stir spasmodically whatsoever of utmost faculty is in you, soul, body, or spirit; for it is the hour! Smite, thou Louis Tournay, cartwright of the Marais, old-soldier of the Regiment Dauphiné; smite at that Outer Drawbridge chain, though the fiery hail whistles round thee! Never, over nave or

CHAP. VI
July 14, 1789

BOOK V or fellow, did thy axe strike such a stroke Down with it, July 14, 1789 man, down with it to Orcus let the whole accursed Edifice sink thither, and Tyranny be swallowed up for ever! Mounted some say, on the roof of the guard room, some 'on bayonets stuck into joints of the wall,' Louis Tournay smites, brave Aubin Bonnemère (also an old soldier) seconding him the chain yields, breaks, the huge Drawbridge slams down thundering (avec fracas) Glorious and yet, alas it is still hut the outworks The Eight grim Towers with their Invalide musketry, their paving stones and cannon mouths, still soar aloft intact,—Ditch yawning impassable, stone-faced, the inner Drawbridge with its back towards us the Bastille is still to take!

To describe this Siege of the Bastille (thought to be one of the most important in History) perhaps transcends the talent of mortals Could one hut, after infinite reading get to under stand so much as the plan of the building! But there is open Esplanade at the end of the Rue Saint Antoine, there are such Forecourts, Cour Atanch, Cour de l'Orme, arched Gateway (where Louis Tournay now fights), then new drawbridges dormant bridges rampart bastions, and the grim Eight Towers a labyrinthine Mass high frowning there, of all ages from twenty years to four hundred and twenty,—beleaguered, in this its last hour, as we said, by mere Chaos come again! Ordnance of all calibres, throats of all capacities, men of all plans, every man his own engineer seldom since the war of Pygmies and Cranes was there seen so anomalous a thing Half pay Elie is home for a suit of regimentals, no one would heed him in coloured clothes half pay Huln is haranguing Gardes Françaises in the Place de Grève Frantie Patriots pick up the grapeshots, bear them, still hot (or seemingly so) to the Hôtel de Ville —Paris, you perceive, is to be burnt! Flesselles is 'pale to the very lips', for the roar of the multitude grows deep Paris wholly has got to the acme of its frenzy, whirled all ways by panic madness At every street barricade, there whirls simmering a minor whirlpool,—strengthening the barn cade, since God knows what is coming, and all minor whirl pools play distractedly into that grand Fire Maelstrom which is lashing round the Bastille

And so it lashes and it roars Cholat the wine-merchant has

ABOVE THE ABYSS.

has become an impromptu cannoneer. See Georget, of the Marine Service, fresh from Brest, ply the King of Siam's cannon. Singular (if we were not used to the like): Georget lay, last night, taking his ease at his inn; the King of Siam's cannon also lay, knowing nothing of him, for a hundred years. Yet now, at the right instant, they have got together, and discourse eloquent music. For, hearing what was toward, Georget sprang from the Brest Diligence, and ran. Gardes Françaises also will be here, with real artillery: were not the walls so thick!—Upwards from the Esplanade, horizontally from all neighbouring roofs and windows, flashes one irregular deluge of musketry, without effect. The Invalides lie flat, firing comparatively at their ease from behind stone; hardly through portholes show the tip of a nose. We fall, shot; and make no impression!

Let conflagration rage; of whatsoever is combustible! Guard-rooms are burnt, Invalides mess-rooms. A distracted 'Peruke-maker with two fiery torches' is for burning 'the saltpetres of the Arsenal';—had not a woman run screaming; had not a Patriot, with some tincture of Natural Philosophy, instantly struck the wind out of him (butt of musket on pit of stomach), overturned barrels, and stayed the devouring element. A young beautiful lady, seized escaping in these Outer Courts, and thought falsely to be De Launay's daughter, shall be burnt in De Launay's sight; she lies swooned on a paillasse: but again a Patriot, it is brave Aubin Bonnemère the old soldier, dashes in, and rescues her. Straw is burnt; three cartloads of it, hauled thither, go up in white smoke: almost to the choking of Patriotism itself; so that Elie had, with singed brows, to draw back one cart; and Réole the 'gigantic haberdasher' another. Smoke as of Tophet; confusion as of Babel; noise as of the Crack of Doom!

Blood flows; the aliment of new madness. The wounded are carried into houses of the Rue Cerisaie; the dying leave their last mandate not to yield till the accursed Stronghold fall. And yet, alas, how fall? The walls are so thick! Deputations, three in number, arrive from the Hôtel-de-Ville; Abbé Fauchet (who was of one) can say, with what almost superhuman courage of benevolence.¹ These wave their Town-flag in the arched Gateway; and stand, rolling their drum;

¹ Fauchet's Narrative (Deux Amis, i. 324).

BOOK V but to no purpose In such Crack of Doom, De Launay cannot July 14, 1789 hear them, dare not believe them: they return, with justified rage, the whew of lead still singing in their ears What to do? The Firemen are here, squirting with their fire-pumps on the Invalides cannon, to wet the touchholes; they unfortunately cannot squirt so high; but produce only clouds of spray. Individuals of classical knowledge propose catapults Santerre, the sonorous Brewer of the Suburb Saint Antoine, advises rather that the place be fired, by a 'mixture of phosphorus and oil - of - turpentine spouted up through forcing-pumps'; O Spinola Santerre, hast thou the mixture ready? Every man his own engineer! And still the fire deluge abates not, even women are firing, and Turks, at least one woman (with her sweetheart), and one Turk! Gardes Françaises have come: real cannon, real cannoneers. Usher Maillard is busy; half pay Elie, half pay Hulin rage in the midst of thousands

MAILLARD

How the great Bas tille clock ticks (in audible) in its Inner

Court there, at its ease, hour after hour, as if nothing special, for it or the world, were passing! It tolled One when the firing began; and is now pointing towards Five, and still the firing slakes not—Far down, in their vaults, the seven Prisoners hear muffled din as of earthquakes; their Turnkeys answer vaguely.

Wo to thee, De Launay, with thy poor hundred Invalides! Broglie is distant, and his ears heavy: Resenval hears, but can send no help One poor troop of Hussars has crept, reconnoitering, cautiously along the Quais, as far as the Pont Neuf. 'We are come to join you,' said the Captain; for the crowd seems shoreless. A large-headed dwarfish individual, of smoke-beared aspect, shambles forward, opening his blue lips, for there is sense in him; and croaks: 'Alight then, and give up your arms!' The Hussar-Captain is too happy to be escorted to the Barriers, and dismissed on parole. Who the squat individual was? Men answer, It is M. Marat, author of the excellent pacific Avis au Peuple! Great truly, O thou remarkable Dogleech, is this thy day of emergence and new-birth: and yet this same day come four years——! —But let the curtains of the Future hang.

¹ Deux Amis 1. 319; Desaulz, etc.

What shall De Launay do? One thing only De Launay could have done: what he said he would do. Fancy him sitting, from the first, with lighted taper, within arm's-length of the Powder-Magazine; motionless, like old Roman Senator, or Bronze Lamp-holder; coldly apprising Thuriot, and all men, by a slight motion of his eye, what his resolution was:—Harmless he sat there, while unharmed; but the King's Fortress, meanwhile, could, might, would, or should in nowise be surrendered, save to the King's Messenger: one old man's life is worthless, so it be lost with honour; but think, ye brawling canaille, how will it be when a whole Bastille springs skyward! —In such statuesque, taper-holding attitude, one fancies De Launay might have left Thuriot, the red Clerks of the Basoche, Curé of Saint-Stephen and all the tag-rag-and-bobtail of the world, to work their will.

And yet, withal, he could not do it. Hast thou considered how each man's heart is so tremulously responsive to the hearts of all men; hast thou noted how omnipotent is the very sound of many men? How their shriek of indignation palsies the strong soul; their howl of contumely withers with unfelt pangs? The Ritter Ghek confessed that the ground-tone of the noblest passage, in one of his noblest Operas, was the voice of the Populace he had heard at Vienna, crying to their Kaiser: Bread! Bread! Great is the combined voice of men; the utterance of their instincts, which are truer than their thoughts: it is the greatest a man encounters, among the sounds and shadows which make up this world of Time. He who can resist that, has his footing somewhere beyond Time. De Launay could not do it. Distracted, he hovers between two; hopes in in

CHAP. VI
July 14, 1789

BOOK V slant on reapers amid peaceful woody fields, on old women July 14 1789 spinning in cottages, on ships far out in the silent main, on Balls at the Orangerie of Versailles, where high rouged Dames of the Palace are even now dancing with double-jacketed Hussar Officers,—and also on this roaring Hell porch of a Hôtel de-Ville! Babel Tower, with the confusion of tongues, were not Bedlam added with the conflagration of thoughts, was no type of it. One forest of distracted steel bristles, endless, in front of an Electoral Committee, points itself, in horrid radii, against this and the other accused breast. It was the Titans warring with Olympus; and they, scarcely crediting it, have conquered prodigy of prodigies, delirious —as it could not but be. Denunciation, vengeance, blaze of triumph on a dark ground of terror, all outward, all inward things fallen into one general wreck of madness!

Electoral Committee? Had it a thousand throats of brass, it would not suffice. Abbé Lefèvre, in the Vaults down below, is black as Vulcan, distributing that 'five thousand weight of Powder', with what perils, these eight and forty hours! Last night, a Patriot, in liquor, insisted on sitting to smoke on the edge of one of the Powder barrels. There smoked he, independent of the world,—till the Abbé 'purchased his pipe for three francs,' and pitched it far.

Elie, in the Grand Hall, Electoral Committee looking on, sits 'with drawn sword bent in three places', with battered helm, for he was of the Queen's Regiment, Cavalry, with torn regimentals, face singed and soiled, comparable, some think, to 'an antique warrior',—judging the people, forming a list of Bastille Heroes. O Friends, stain not with blood the greenest laurels ever gained in this world: such is the burden of Elie's song: could it but be listened to. Courage, Elie! Courage, ye Municipal Electors! A declining sun, the need of victuals, and of telling news, will bring assuage-ment, dispersion: all earthly things must end.

Along the streets of Paris circulate Seven Bastille Prisoners, borne shoulder-high, seven Heads on pikes; the Keys of the Bastille, and much else. See also the Gardes Françaises, in their steadfast military way, marching home to their barracks, with the Invalides and Swiss kindly enclosed in hollow square.
 It is one year and two months since these same men stood unparticipating

unparticipating, with Brennus d'Agoust at the Palais de Justice, when Fate overtook D'Espréménil; and now they have participated; and will participate. Not Gardes Françaises henceforth, but Centre Grenadiers of the National Guard: men of iron discipline and humour,—not without a kind of thought in them!

Likewise ashlar stones of the Bastille continue thundering through the dusk; its paper archives shall fly white. Old secrets come to view; and long-buried Despair finds voice. Read this portion of an old Letter:¹ 'If for my consolation Monseigneur would grant me, for the sake of God and the Most Blessed Trinity, that I could have news of my dear wife; were it only her name on a card, to show that she is alive! It were the greatest consolation I could receive; and I should for ever bless the greatness of Monseigneur.' Poor Prisoner, who namest thyself Quéret-Démery, and hast no other history,—she is dead, that dear wife of thine, and thou art dead! 'Tis fifty years since thy breaking heart put this question; to be heard now first, and long heard, in the hearts of men.

But so does the July twilight thicken; so must Paris, as sick children, and all distracted creatures do, brawl itself finally into a kind of sleep. Municipal Electors, astonished to find their heads still uppermost, are home: only Moreau de Saint-Méry, of tropical birth and heart, of coolest judgment; he, with two others, shall sit permanent at the Town-hall. Paris sleeps; gleams upward the illuminated City: patrols go clashing, without common watchword; there go rumours; alarms of war, to the extent of 'fifteen thousand men marching through the Suburb Saint-Antoine,'—who never got it marched through. Of the day's distraction judge by this of the night: Moreau de Saint-Méry, 'before rising from his seat, gave upwards of three thousand orders.'² What a head; comparable to Friar Bacon's Brass Head! Within it lies all Paris. Prompt must the answer be, right or wrong; in Paris is no other Authority extant. Seriously, a most cool clear head;—for which also thou, O brave Saint-Méry, in many capacities, from august Senator to Merchant's-Clerk,

¹ Dated à la Bastille, 7 Octobre 1752; signed Quéret-Démery. Bastille Dévoilée; in Linguet, Mémoires sur la Bastille (Paris, 1821), p. 199.

² Dusaulx.

BOOK V From the Place Louis Quinze, where they alight, all the way to July 15, 1789 the Hôtel de-Ville, it is one sea of Tricolor cockades, of clear National muskets, one tempest of huzzangs, hand-clappings, aided by 'occasional rollings' of drum music Harangues of due fervour are delivered, especially by Lally Tollendal, pious son of the ill fated murdered Lally, on whose head, in consequence a civic crown (of oak or parsley) is forced,—which he forcibly transfers to Bailly's

But surely, for one thing the National Guard should have a General! Moreau de Saint Méry, be of the 'three thousand orders,' casts one of his significant glances on the Bust of Lafayette which has stood there ever since the American War of Liberty Whereupon, by acclamation, Lafayette is nominated Again, in room of the slain traitor or quasi traitor Flesselles, President Bailly shall be—Provost of the Merchants? No Mayor of Paris! So be it. Maire de Paris! Mayor Bailly, General Lafayette, vive Bailly vive Lafayette! The universal out of doors multitude rends the welkin in confirmation—And now, finally, let us to Notre-Dame for a Te Deum

Towards Notre-Dame Cathedral, in glad procession, these Regenerators of the Country walk, through a jubilant people, in fraternal manner, Abbé Lefèvre, still black with his gun powder services, walking arm in arm with the white-stoled Archbishop Poor Bailly comes upon the Foundling Children, seat to kneel to him, and 'weeps' Te Deum our Archbishop officiating is not only sung but shot—with blank cartridges.
 Our joy is boundless, as our wo threatened to be Paris, by her own pike and musket, and the valour of her own heart, has conquered the very war gods—to the satisfaction now of Majesty itself A courier is, this night getting under way for Necker the People's Minister, invited back by King by National Assembly, and Nation, shall traverse France amid shoutings and the sound of trumpet and tumbrel

Seeing which course of things, Messigneurs of the Court Triumvirate, Messieurs of the dead born Broglie Ministry, and others such consider that their part also is clear to mount and ride Off, ye too-royal Broglies Polignaes and Princes of the Blood, off while it is yet time! Did not the Palais Royal, in its late nocturnal 'violent motions,' set a specific price (place of payment not mentioned) on each of your heads?—With precautions, precautions, with the aid of pieces of cannon and regiments that can be depended on, Messieurs, between the 16th night and 17th morning, get to their several roads. Not without risk! Prince Condé has (or seems to have) 'men galloping at full speed'; with a view, it is thought, to fling him into the river Oise, at Pont-Sainte-Mayence.¹ The Polignacs travel disguised; friends, not servants, on their coach-box. Broglie has his own difficulties at Versailles, runs his own risks at Metz and Verdun; does nevertheless get safe to Luxemburg, and there rests.

LE PRINCE DE CONDÉ.

This is what they call the First Emigration; determined on, as appears, in full Court-conclave; his Majesty assisting;

¹ Weber, ii. 126.

BOOK V
July 17, 1789

prompt be, for his share of it, to follow any counsel whatsoever 'Three Sons of France, and four Princes of the blood of Saint Louis,' says Weber, 'could not more effectually humble the Burghers of Paris than by appearing to withdraw in fear of their life' Alas, the Burghers of Paris bear it with unexpected stoicism! The Man D'Artois indeed is gone, but has he carried, for example, the Land D'Artois with him? Not even Bagatelle the Country house (which shall be useful as a Tavern), hardly the four valet Breeches, leaving the Breeches maker!—As for old Foulon, one learns that he is dead, at least 'a sumptuous funeral' is going on, the undertakers honouring him, if no other will Intendant Berthier, his son in law, is still living, lurking he joined Desenval, on that Eumenides Sunday, appearing to treat it with levity, and is now fled no man knows whither

The Emigration is not gone many miles, Prince Condé hardly across the Oise, when his Majesty, according to arrangement, for the Emigration also thought it might do good,—undertakes a rather daring enterprise that of visiting Paris in person With a Hundred Members of Assembly, with small or no military escort, which indeed he dismissed at the Bridge of Sèvres, poor Louis sets out, leaving a desolate Palace, a Queen weeping, the Present, the Past, and the Future all so unfriendly for her

At the Barrier of Passy, Mayor Bailly, in grand gala, presents him with the keys, harangues him, in Academic style; mentions that it is a great day, that in Henri Quatre's case, the King had to make conquest of his People, but in this happier case, the People makes conquest of its King (a conquies son Roi) The King so happily conquered, drives forward, slowly, through a steel people, all silent, or shouting only Vive la Nation, is harangued at the Townhall, by Moreau of the three thousand orders, by King's Procureur M Ethys de Corny, by Lally Tollendal, and others, knows not what to think of it or say of it, learns that he is 'Restorer of French Liberty,'—as a Statue of him, to be raised on the site of the Bastille shall testify to all men Finally, he is shown at the Balcony with a Tricolor cockade in his hat, is greeted now, with vehement acclamation, from Square and Street, from all windows and roofs—and so drives home again amid glad mingled and as it were, intermarried shouts, of Vive le Roi and Vive la Nation; wearied but safe.

CHAP. VIII
July 17, 1789

It was Sunday when the red-hot balls hung over us, in mid air: it is now but Friday, and 'the Revolution is sanctioned.' An august National Assembly shall make the Constitution; and neither foreign Pandour, domestic Triumvirate, with levelled Cannon, Guy-Faux powder-plots (for that too was spoken of); nor any tyrannic Power on the Earth or under the Earth, shall say to it, What dost thou?—So jubilates the People; sure now of a Constitution. Cracked Marquis Saint-Huruge is heard under the windows of the Château; murmuring sheer speculative-treason.¹

CHAPTER IX

THE LANTERNE

THE Fall of the Bastille may be said to have shaken all France to the deepest foundations of its existence. The rumour of these wonders flies everywhere: with the natural speed of Rumour; with an effect thought to be preternatural, produced by plots. Did D'Orléans or Laeol, nay did Mirabeau (not overburdened with money at this time) send riding Couriers out from Paris; to gallop 'on all radii,' or highways, towards all points of France? It is a miracle, which no penetrating man will call in question.²

Already in most Towns, Electoral Committees were met; to regret Necker, in harangue and resolution. In many a Town, as Rennes, Caen, Lyons, an ebullient people was already regretting him in brickbats and musketry. But now, at every Town's end in France, there do arrive, in these days of terror,—'men,' as men will arrive; nay 'men on horseback,' since Rumour oftenest travels riding. These men declare, with alarmed countenance, The BRIGANDS to be coming, to be just at hand; and do then—ride on, about their further business, be what it might! Whereupon the whole population of such Town defensively flies to arms. Petition is soon thereafter forwarded

¹ Campan, ii. 46-44.

² Toulangeon, i. 95; Weber; etc. etc.

BOOK V to National Assembly, in such peril and terror of peril, leave July 22, 1789 to organise yourself cannot be withheld. the armed population becomes everywhere an enrolled National Guard Thus rides Rumour, careering along all roads, from Paris outwards, to such purpose in few days, some say in not many hours, all France to the utmost borders bristles with bayonets Singular, but undeniable,—miraculous or not!—But thus may any chemical liquid, though cooled to the freezing point, or far lower, still continue liquid, and then, on the slightest stroke or shake, it at once rushes wholly into ice Thus has France, for long months and even years, been chemically dealt with, brought below zero, and now, shaken by the Fall of a Bastille, it instantaneously congeals: into one crystallised mass, of sharp cutting steel! Guai a chi la tocca, 'Ware who touches it!

In Paris, an Electoral Committee, with a new Mayor and General, is urgent with belligerent workmen to resume their handicrafts Strong Dames of the Market (Dames de la Halle) deliver congratulatory harangues; present 'bouquets to the Shrine of Saint Geneviève' Unenrolled men deposit their arms,—not so readily as could be wished and receive 'nine francs' With Te Deums, Royal Visits and sanctioned Revolution, there is halcyon weather, weather even of preternatural brightness, the hurricane being overblown

Nevertheless, as is natural, the waves still run high hollow rocks retaining their murmur We are hut at the 22d of the month, hardly above a week since the Bastille fell when it suddenly appears that old Foulon is alive, nay, that he is here, in early morning in the streets of Paris: the extortioner, the plotter, who would make the people eat grass, and was a liar from the beginning!—It is even so The deceptive 'sumptuous funeral' (of some domestic that died), the hiding place at Vitry towards Fontainebleau, have not availed that wretched old man Some living domestic or dependant, for none loves Foulon has betrayed him to the Village Merciless boors of Vitry unearth him, pounce on him like hell hounds West ward, old Infamy, to Paris to be judged at the Hôtel-de-Ville!
 His old head, which seventy four years have bleached, is bare;
 they have tied an emblematic bundle of grass on his back, a garland of nettles and thistles is round his neck in this manner, led with ropes; goaded on with curses and menaces, must must he, with his old limbs, sprawl forward ; the pitiablist, most unpitied of all men. CHAP. IX

July 22, 1789

Sooty Saint-Antoine, and every street, musters its crowds as he passes ;—the Hall of the Hôtel-de-Ville, the Place de Grève itself, will scarcely hold his escort and him. Foulon must not only be judged righteously, but judged there where he stands, without any delay. Appoint seven judges, ye Municipals, or seventy-and-seven ; name them yourselves, or we will name them : but judge him !¹ Electoral rhetoric, eloquence of Mayor Bailly, is wasted, for hours, explaining the beauty of the Law's delay. Delay, and still delay ! Behold, O Mayor of the People, the morning has worn itself into noon : and he is still unjudged !—Lafayette, pressingly sent for, arrives ; gives voice : This Foulon, a known man, is guilty almost beyond doubt ; but may he not have accomplices ? Ought not the truth to be cunningly pumped out of him,—in the Abbaye Prison ? It is a new light ! Sansculottism claps hands ;—at which handclapping, Foulon (in his fainness, as his Destiny would have it) also claps. ' See ! they understand one another ! ' cries dark Sansculottism, blazing into fury of suspicion.—' Friends,' said ' a person in good clothes,' stepping forward, ' what is the use of judging this man ? Has not he been judged these thirty years ? ' With wild yells, Sansculottism clutches him, in its hundred hands : he is whirled across the Place de Grève, to the 'Lanterne,' Lamp-iron which there is at the corner of the Rue de la Vannerie ; pleading bitterly for life,—to the deaf winds. Only with the third rope—for two ropes broke, and the quavering voice still pleaded—can he be so much as got hanged ! His Body is dragged through the streets ; his Head goes aloft on a pike, the mouth filled with grass : amid sounds as of Tophet, from a grass-eating people.²

Surely if Revenge is a ' kind of Justice,' it is a ' wild ' kind ! O mad Sansculottism, hast thou risen, in thy mad darkness, in thy soot and rags ; unexpectedly, like an Enceladus, living-buried, from under his Trinacria ? They that would make grass be eaten do now eat grass, in this manner ? After long dumb-groaning generations, has the turn suddenly become thine ?—To such abysmal overturns, and frightful instantaneous inversions of the centre-of-gravity, are human Sole-

¹ Histoire Parlementaire, ii. 146-9.

² Deux Amis de la Liberté, ii. 60-6.
cisms

BOOK V cisms all liable, if they but knew it; the more liable, the falser July 22, 1789 (and topbeavier) they are!—

To add to the horror of Mayor Bailly and his Municipals, word comes that Berthier has also been arrested, that he is on his way hither from Compiègne Berthier, Intendant (say Tax levier) of Paris, sycophant and tyrant, forestaller of Corn, contriver of Camps against the people,—accused of many things—is he not Foulon's son in law, and, in that one point, guilty of all? In these hours, too, when Sansculottism has its blood up! The shuddering Municipals send one of their number to escort him, with mounted National Guards

At the fall of day, the wretched Berthier, still wearing a face of courage, arrives at the Barrier, in an open carriage, with the Municipal beside him, five hundred horsemen with drawn sabres, unarmed footmen enough—not without noise! Placards go brandished round him, bearing legibly his indictment, as Sansculottism, with unlegal brevity, 'in huge letters,' draws it up! Paris is come forth to meet him with hand clappings, with windows flung up, with dances, triumph songs, as of the Furies Lastly, the Head of Foulon, this also meets him on a pike Well might his 'look become glazed,' and sense fail him, at such sight!—Nevertheless, be the man's conscience what it may, his nerves are of iron At the Hôtel-de Ville he will answer nothing He says he obeyed superior orders, they have his papers, they may judge and determine—as for himself, not having closed an eye these two nights, he demands, before all things, to have sleep Leaden sleep, thou miserable Berthier! Guards rise with him, in motion towards the Abbaye At the very door of the Hôtel de Ville, they are clutched; flung asunder, as by a vortex of mad arms, Berthier whurls towards the Lanterne He snatches a musket, fells and strikes, defending himself like a mad lion he is borne down, trampled, hanged, mangled—his Head too, and even his Heart, flies over the City on a pike

Horrible, in Lands that had known equal justice! Not so

¹ 'Il a volé le Roi et la France (He robbed the King and France). He devoured the substance of the People." "He was the slave of the rich and the tyrant of the poor." "He drank the blood of the widow and orphan." "He betrayed his country" See Deux Amis li. 67-73.

unnatural in Lands that had never known it. 'Le sang qui coule, est-il donc si pur ?' asks Barnave; intimating that the Gallowes, though by irregular methods, has its own.—Thou thyself, O Reader, when thou turnest that corner of the Rue de la Vannerie, and discernest still that same grim Bracket of old Iron, wilt not want for reflections. 'Over a grocer's shop,' or otherwise; with 'a bust of Louis XIV. in the niche under it,' now no longer in the niche,—it still sticks there; still holding out an ineffectual light, of fish-oil; and has seen worlds wrecked, and says nothing.

But to the eye of enlightened Patriotism, what a thunder-cloud was this; suddenly shaping itself in the radiance of the halcyon weather! Cloud of Erebus blackness; betokening latent electricity without limit. Mayor Bailly, General Lafayette throw up their commissions, in an indignant manner;—need to be flattered back again. The cloud disappears, as thunder-clouds do. The halcyon weather returns, though of a grayer complexion; of a character more and more evidently not supernatural.

Thus, in any case, with what rubs soever, shall the Bastille be abolished from our Earth; and with it, Feudalism, Despotism; and, one hopes, Scoundrelism generally, and all hard usage of man by his brother man. Alas, the Scoundrelism and hard usage are not so easy of abolition! But as for the Bastille, it sinks day after day, and month after month; its ashlar and boulders tumbling down continually, by express orders of our Municipals. Crowds of the curious roam through its caverns; gaze on the skeletons found walled-up, on the oubliettes, iron-cages, monstrous stone-blocks with padlock chains. One day we discern Mirabeau there, along with the Genevese Dumont.¹ Workers and onlookers make reverent way for him; fling verses, flowers on his path, Bastille-papers and curiosities into his carriage, with vivats.

Able Editors compile Books from the Bastille Archives; from what of them remain unburnt. The Key of that Robber-Den shall cross the Atlantic; shall lie on Washington's hall-table. The great Clock ticks now in a private patriotic Clockmaker's apartment; no longer measuring hours of mere heaviness. Vanished is the Bastille, what we call vanished: the body, or sandstones, of it hanging, in benign metamorphosis, for centuries

¹ Dumont, Souvenirs sur Mirabeau, p. 305.

BOOK V to come, over the Seine waters as Pont Louis Seize,¹ the soul
 July 2^o, 1789 of it living, perhaps still longer, in the memories of men

So far, ye august Senators with your Tennis Court Oaths, your inertia and impetus, your sagacity and pertinacity, have ye brought us 'And yet think, Messieurs' as the Petitioners justly urged, 'you who were our saviours did yourselves need saviours,'—the brave Bastillers namely, workmen of Paris, many of them in straitened pecuniary circumstances² Subscriptions are opened, Lists are formed, more accurate than Elie's, barangues are delivered A Body of Bastille Heroes, tolerably complete, did get together,—comparable to the Argonauts, hoping to eadure like them But in little more than a year the whirlpool of things threw them asunder again and they sank So many hugest superlatives achieved by man are followed by new higher, and dwindle into comparatives and positives! The Siege of the Bastille, weighed with which, in the Historical balance, most other sieges, including that of Troy town are gossamer, cost, as we find, in killed and mortally wounded on the part of the Besiegers some Eighty three persons on the part of the Besieged, after all that straw burning, fire-pumping, and deluge of musketry, One poor solitary Invalid shot stone dead (roide mort) on the battlements!³ The Bastille Fortress, like the City of Jericho, was overturned by miraculous sound Dulaure Histoire de Paris viii. 434.

¹ Moniteur Sten & du Samedi 15 Juillet 1789 (n H to re Parl mentu re u 137).

² Dussault Pres & de la Ba t Ile p. 447 etc

BOOK SIXTH

CONSOLIDATION

CHAPTER I

MAKE THE CONSTITUTION

HERE perhaps is the place to fix, a little more precisely, what these two words, French Revolution, shall mean; for, strictly considered, they may have as many meanings as there are speakers of them. All things are in revolution; in change from moment to moment, which becomes sensible from epoch to epoch: in this Time-World of ours there is properly nothing else but revolution and mutation, and even nothing else conceivable. Revolution, you answer, means speedier change. Whereupon one has still to ask: How speedy? At what degree of speed; in what particular points of this variable course, which varies in velocity, but can never stop till Time itself stops, does revolution begin and end; cease to be ordinary mutation, and again become such? It is a thing that will depend on definition more or less arbitrary.

For ourselves, we answer that French Revolution means here the open violent Rebellion, and Victory, of disimprisoned Anarchy against corrupt worn-out Authority: how Anarchy breaks prison; bursts-up from the infinite Deep, and rages uncontrollable, immeasurable, enveloping a world; in phasis after phasis of fever-frenzy;—till the frenzy burning itself out, and what elements of new order it held (since all Force holds such) developing themselves, the Uncontrollable be got, if not reimprisoned, yet harnessed, and its mad forces made to work towards their object as sane regulated ones. For as Hierarchies and Dynasties of all kinds, Theocracies, Aristocracies, Autocracies, Strumpetocracies, have ruled over the world; so it was appointed, in the decrees of Providence, that this same Victorious

BOOK VI
July Aug
1789

it History of the French Revolution, contentedly publish the same To do the like, to almost any extent, with so many Filed Newspapers, Choix des Rapports, Histories Parlementaires as there are, amounting to many horseloads, were easy for us Easy but unprofitable The National Assembly, named now Constituent Assembly, goes its course, making the Constitution, but the French Revolution also goes its course

In general, may we not say that the French Revolution lies in the heart and head of every violent speaking, of every violent thinking French Man? How the Twenty five Millions of such, in their perplexed combination, acting and counter acting, may give birth to events; which event successively is the cardinal one, and from what point of vision it may best be surveyed this is a problem Which problem the best insight, seeking light from all possible sources shifting its point of vision whithersoever vision or glimpse of vision can be had, may employ itself in solving, and be well content to solve in some tolerably approximate way

As to the National Assembly, in so far as it still towers eminent over France, after the manner of a ear horn Carroccio, though now no longer in the van; and rings signals for retreat or for advance,—it is and continues a reality among other realities But in so far as it sits making the Constitution on the other hand, it is a fatuity and chimera mainly Alas in the never so heroic building of Montesquieu Mably card castles, though shouted over by the world what interest is there? Occupied in that way, an august National Assembly becomes for us little other than a Sanhedrim of Pedants, not of the gerund grinding, yet of no fruitfuler sort, and its loud debates and recriminations about Rights of Man, Rights of Peace and War, Veto suspensif, Veto absolu, what are they but so many Pedant's-curses 'May God confound you for your Theory of Irregular Verbs!'

A Constitution can be budt, Constitutions enough à la Sicily's but the frightful difficulty is, that of getting men to come and live in them! Could Sieyès have drawn thunder and lightning out of Heaven to sanction his Constitution, it had been well but without any thunder? Nay, strictly considered, is it not still true that without some such celestial sanction given visibly in thunder or invisibly otherwise no Constitution can in in the longrun be worth much more than the waste-paper it is written on ? The Constitution, the set of Laws, or prescribed Habits of Acting, that men will live under, is the one which images their Convictions,—their Faith as to this wondrous Universe, and what rights, duties, capabilities they have there : which stands sanctioned, therefore, by Necessity itself ; if not by a seen Deity, then by an unseen one. Other Laws, whereof there are always enough ready-made, are usurpations ; which men do not obey, but rebel against, and abolish at their earliest convenience.

CHAP. I
July-Aug.
1789

The question of questions accordingly were, Who is it that, especially for rebellers and abolishers, can make a Constitution ? He that can image-forth the general Belief when there is one ; that can impart one when, as here, there is none. A most rare man ; ever, as of old, a god-missioned man ! Here, however, in defect of such transcendent supreme man, Time with its infinite succession of merely superior men, each yielding his little contribution, does much. Force likewise (for, as Antiquarian Philosophers teach, the royal Sceptre was from the first something of a Hammer, to crack such heads as could not be convinced) will all along find somewhat to do. And thus in perpetual abolition and reparation, rending and mending, with struggle and strife, with present evil, and the hope and effort towards future good, must the Constitution, as all human things do, build itself forward ; or unbuild itself, and sink, as it can and may. O Sieyès, and ye other Committeemen, and Twelve Hundred miscellaneous individuals from all parts of France ! what is the Belief of France, and yours, if ye knew it ? Properly that there shall be no Belief ; that all formulas be swallowed. The Constitution which will suit that ? Alas, too clearly, a No-Constitution, an Anarchy ;—which also, in due season, shall be vouchsafed you.

But, after all, what can an unfortunate National Assembly do ? Consider only this, that there are Twelve Hundred miscellaneous individuals ; not a unit of whom but has his own thinking-apparatus, his own speaking-apparatus ! In every unit of them is some belief and wish, different for each, both that France should be regenerated, and also that he individually should do it. Twelve Hundred separate Forces, yoked miscellaneously to any object, miscellaneously to all sides of it ; and bidden pull for life !

Or

BOOK VI by the sackful, mostly in King Cambyzes' vein also to July Aug 4, Petitions and complaints from all mortals, so that every 1789 mortal's complaint, if it cannot get redressed, may at least hear itself complain. For the rest, an august National Assembly can produce Parliamentary Eloquence, and appoint Committees Committees of the Constitution, of Reports, of Researches, and of much else which again yield mountains of Printed Paper, the theme of new Parliamentary Eloquence in bursts or in plenteous smooth flowing floods. And so, from the waste vortex whereon all things go whirling and grinding, Organic Laws, or the similitude of such, slowly emerge.

With endless debating, we get the Rights of Man written down and promulgated true paper basis of all paper Constitutions. Neglecting cry the opponents, to declare the Duties of Man! Forgetting, answer we, to ascertain the Rights of Man,—one of the fatalest omissions!—Nay sometimes, as on the Fourth of August, our National Assembly, fired suddenly by an almost preternatural enthusiasm, will get through whole masses of work in one night. A memorable night, this Fourth of August. Dignitaries temporal and spiritual, Peers, Archbishops, Parlement Presidents, each outdoing the other in patriotic devotedness, come successively to throw their now untenable possessions on the 'altar of the fatherland'. With louder and louder vivats,—for indeed it is 'after dinner' too
 —they abolish Tithes, Seignorial Dues, Gabelle, excessive Preservation of Game, nay Privilege, Immunity, Feudalism root and branch, then appoint a Te Deum for it, and so, finally, disperse about three in the morning, striking the stars with their sublime heads. Such night, unforeseen but for ever memorable, was this of the Fourth of August 1789. Miraculous, or semi-miraculous some seem to think it. A new Night of Pentecost, shall we say, shaped according to the new Time, and new Church of Jean Jacques Rousseau? It had its causes, also its effects.

In such manner labour the National Deputies, perfecting their Theory of Irregular Verbs, governing France, and being governed by it, with toil and noise,—cutting asunder ancient intolerable bonds, and for new ones, assiduously spinning ropes of sand. Were their labours a nothing or a something yet the eyes of all France being reverently fixed on them History can never very long leave them altogether out of sight

For the present, if we glance into that Assembly-Hall of theirs, it will be found, as is natural, 'most irregular.' As many as 'a hundred members are on their feet at once'; no rule in making motions, or only commencements of a rule; Spectators' Gallery allowed to applaud, and even to hiss;¹ President, appointed once a fortnight, raising many times no serene head above the waves. Nevertheless, as in all human Assemblages, like does begin arranging itself to like; the perennial rule, Ubi homines sunt modi sunt, proves valid. Rudiments of Methods disclose themselves; rudiments of Parties.

There is a Right Side (Côté Droit), a Left Side (Côté Gauche); sitting on M. le President's right hand, or on his left: the Côté Droit conservative; the Côté Gauche destructive. Intermediate is Anglo-maniac Constitutionalism, or Two-Chamber Royalism; with its Mouniers, its Lallys,—fast verging towards nonentity. Pre-eminent, on the Right Side, pleads and perorates Cazalès the Dragoon-captain, eloquent, mildly fervent; earning for himself the shadow of a name. There also blusters Barrel-Mirabeau, the Younger Mirabeau, not without wit: dusky D'Espréménil does nothing but sniff and ejaculate; might, it is fondly thought, lay prostrate the Elder Mirabeau himself, would he but try,² —which he does not. Last and greatest, see, for one moment the Abbé Maury; with his jesuitic eyes, his impassive brass face, 'image of all the cardinal sins.' Indomitable, unquenchable, he fights jesuitico-rhetorically; with toughest lungs and heart; for Throne, especially for Altar and Tithes. So that a shrill voice exclaims once, from the Gallery:

ADRIEN DUPONT.

¹ Arthur Young, i. 111.² Biographie Universelle, § D'Espréménil (by Beaulieu).

BOOK VI
July Aug
1789

'Messieurs of the Clergy, you have to be shaved, if you wriggle too much you will get cut.'¹

The Left side is also called the D Orléans side, and sometimes derisively, the Palais Royal. And yet, so confused real imaginary seems everything 'it is doubtful' as Mirabeau said 'whether D Orléans himself belong to that same D Orléans party' What can be known and seen is that his moon visage does beam forth from that point of space. There likewise sits seagreen Robespierre, throwing in his light weight, with decision not yet with effect. A thin lean Puritan and Precisian he would make nway with formulas, yet lives moves and has his being wholly in formulas of another sort 'Peuple,' such, according to Robespierre ought to be the Royal method of promulgating Laws 'Peuple, this is the Law I have framed for thee, dost thou accept it?'—answered, from Right side, from Centre and Left, by inextinguishable laughter.² Yet men of insight discern that the Seagreen may by chance go far. 'This man' observes Mirabeau 'will do somewhat, he believes every word he says'

Abbé Sieyès is busy with mere Constitutional work, wherein, unluckily, fellow workmen are less pliable than with one who has completed the Science of Polity, they ought to be Courage Sieyès nevertheless! Some twenty months of heroic travail, of contmdition from the stupid and the Constitution shall be built, the top stone of it brought out with shouting—say rather, the top paper for it is all Paper, and thou hast done in it what the Earth or the Heaven could require thy utmost. Note likewise this Trio, memorable for several things, memorable were it only that their history is written in an epigram 'Whatsoever these Three have in hand' it is said 'Duport thinks it, Barnave speaks it, Lameth does it'³

But royal Mirabeau? Conspicuous among all parties raised above and beyond them all this man rises more and more. As we often say, he has an eye he is a reality, while others are formulas and eye glasses. In the Transient he will detect the Perennial, find some firm footing even among Paper vortexes. His fame is gone forth to all lands, it gladdened the heart of the crabbed old Friend of Men himself before he died. The very Postilions of inns have heard of Mirabeau

¹ Discours de Mirabeau li. 519.

² Mém. No. 67 (à H. et P.).

³ See Toulougeon l. c. 3.
when

when an impatient Traveller complains that the team is insufficient, his Postilion answers, 'Yes, Monsieur, the wheelers are weak; but my mirabeau (main horse), you see, is a right one, mais mon mirabeau est excellent.'¹

CHAP. II
July-Aug.
1789

And now, Reader, thou shalt quit this noisy Discrepancy of a National Assembly; not (if thou be of humane mind) without pity. Twelve hundred brother men are there, in the centre of Twenty-five Millions; fighting so fiercely with Fate and with one another; struggling their lives out, as most sons of Adam do, for that which profiteth not. Nay, on the whole, it is admitted further to be very dull. 'Dull as this day's Assembly,' said some one. 'Why date, Pourquoi dater?' answered Mirabeau.

ALEXANDRE DE LAMETH.

Consider that they are Twelve Hundred; that they not only speak, but read their speeches; and even borrow and steal speeches to read! With Twelve Hundred fluent speakers, and their Noah's Deluge of vociferous commonplace, silence unattainable may well seem the one blessing of Life. But figure Twelve Hundred pamphleteers; droning forth perpetual pamphlets: and no man to gag them! Neither, as in the American Congress, do the arrangements seem perfect. A Senator has not his own Desk and Newspaper here; of Tobacco (much less of Pipes) there is not the slightest provision. Conversation itself has to be transacted in a low tone, with continual interruption: only 'Pencil-notes' circulate freely, 'in incredible numbers, to the foot of the very tribune.'² Such work is it, regenerating a Nation; perfecting one's Theory of Irregular Verbs!

¹ Dumont, Souvenirs sur Mirabeau, p. 255.

² See Dumont (pp. 159-67); Arthur Young, etc.

BOOK VI
July Aug
1789

CHAPTER III

THE GENERAL OVERTURE

Of the King's Court for the present, there is almost nothing whatever to be said. Silent, deserted are these halls, Royalty languishes forsaken of its war god and all its hopes till once the Ceil de-Bœuf rally again. The sceptre is departed from King Louis, is gone over to the Salle des Menus, to the Paris Town hall, or one knows not whither. In the July days, while all ears were yet deafened by the crash of the Bastille, and Ministers and Princes were scattered to the four winds, it seemed as if the very Valets had grown heavy of hearing. Besenval, also in flight towards Infinite Space, but hovering a little at Versailles, was addressing his Majesty personally for an Order about post horses, when, lo, 'the Valet in waiting places himself familiarly between his Majesty and me,' stretching out his rascal neck to learn what it was! His Majesty, in sudden choler, whirled round, made a clutch at the tongs. 'I gently prevented him, he grasped my hand in thankfulness, and I noticed tears in his eyes.'¹

Poor King, for French Kings also are men! Louis Fourteenth himself once clutched the tongs and even smote with them, but then it was at Louvois, and Dame Maintenon ran up—The Queen sits weeping in her inner apartments surrounded by weak women she is 'at the height of unpopularity', universally regarded as the evil genius of France. Her friends and familiar counsellors have all fled, and fled, surely, on the foolishhest errand. The Chateau Polignac still frowns aloft, on its 'bold and enormous cubical rock,' amid the blooming champaigns, amid the blue girdling mountains of Auvergne,² but no Duke and Duchess Polignac look forth from it, they have fled they have 'met Necker at Bâle', they shall not return. That France should see her Nobles resist the Irresistible, Inevitable with the face of angry men was unhappy, not unexpected, but with the face and sense of pettish children? This was her peculiarity. They understood nothing, would understand nothing. Does not, at this hour, a new Polignac, first-born of these Two, sit reflective in the Castle of Ham; ¹ in an astonishment he will never recover from; the most confused of existing mortals?

¹ Besenval, ill. 419.

² Arthur Young, L. 165.

LE ROI FAIBLET.

CHAP. III
July-Aug.
1789

King Louis has his new Ministry: mere Popularities; Old-President Pompidou; Necker, coming back in triumph; and other such.² But what will it avail him? As was said, the sceptre, all but the wooden gilt sceptre, has departed elsewhere. Volition, determination is not in this man; only innocence, indolence; dependence on all persons but himself, on all circumstances but the circumstances he were lord of. So troublous internally is our Versailles and its work. Beautiful, if seen from afar, resplendent like a Sun; seen near at hand, a mere Sun's-Atmosphere, hiding darkness, confused ferment of ruin!

But over France, there goes on the indisputablest 'destruction of formulas'; transaction of realities that follow therefrom. So many millions of persons, all gyved, and nigh strangled, with formulas; whose Life nevertheless, at least the digestion and hunger of it, was real enough! Heaven has at length sent an abundant harvest: but what profits it the poor man, when Earth with her formulas interposes? Industry, in these times of insurrection, must needs lie dormant; capital, as usual, not circulating, but stagnating timorously in nooks. The poor man is short of work, is therefore short of money; nay even had he money, bread is not to be bought for it. Were it plotting of Aristocrats, plotting of D'Orléans; were it Brigands, preternatural terror, and the claug of Phœbus Apollo's silver bow,—enough, the markets are scarce of grain, plentiful only in tumult. Farmers seem lazy to thresh;—being either 'bribed'; or needing no bribe, with prices ever rising, with perhaps rent itself no longer so pressing. Neither, what is singular, do municipal enactments, 'That along with so many measures of wheat you shall sell so many of rye,' and other the like, much mend the matter. Dragoons with drawn swords stand ranked among the corn-sacks, often more dragoons than sacks.³ Meal-mobs abound; growing into mobs of a still darker quality.

Starvation has been known among the French Commonalty before this; known and familiar. Did not we see them,

¹ A.D. 1835.

² Arthur Young, i. 129, etc.

³ Montgaillard, ii. 108.

BOOK VI
July Aug
1789

in the year 1775, presenting, in sallow faces, in wretchedness and raggedness, their Petition of Grievances, and, for answer, getting a brand new Gallows forty feet high? Hunger and Darkness, through long years! For look back on that earlier Paris Riot, when a Great Personage, worn out by debauchery, was believed to be in want of Blood baths, and Mothers, in worn raiment, yet with living hearts under it, 'filled the public places' with their wild Rachel cries,—stilled also by the Gallows. Twenty years ago, the Friend of Men (preaching to the deaf) described the Limousin Peasants as wearing a 'pain stricken (souffre douleur) look,' a look past complaint, 'as if the oppression of the great were like the hail and the thunder, a thing irremediable, the ordinance of Nature' ¹ And now it, in some great hour, the shock of a falling Bastille should awaken you, and it were found to be the ordinance of Art merely, and remediable, reversible!

Or has the Reader forgotten that 'flood of savages,' which, in sight of the same Friend of Men, descended from the mountains at Mont d'Or? Lank haired haggard faces, shapes raw boned, in high sabots, in woollen jupes, with leather girdles studded with copper nails! They rocked from foot to foot, and beat time with their elbows too, as the quarrel and battle, which was not long in beginning, went on, shouting fiercely, the lank faces distorted into the similitude of a cruel laugh. For they were darkened and barded—long had they been the prey of exchequer men and tax men, of 'clerks with the cold spurt of their pen' It was the fixed prophecy of our old Marquis which no man would listen to, that 'such Government by Blind man's buff, stumbling along too far, would end by the General Overturn, the Culbute Générale'!

No man would listen, each went his thoughtless way,—and Time and Destiny also travelled on. The Government by Blind man's buff, stumbling along, has reached the precipice inevitable for it. Dull Drudgery, driven on, by clerks with the cold dastard spurt of their pen, has been driven—into a Commun of Drudges! For now, moreover, there have come the strangest confused tidings, by Paris Journals with their paper wings, or still more portentous where no Journals are, by rumour and conjecture. Oppression not inevitable, a Bastille prostrate, and the Constitution fast getting ready! Which Constitution, if it be something and not nothing, what can it be but bread to eat?

¹ Fils Adoptif Mémoires de Mirabeau, l. 364-94

² See Arthur Young l. 137, 150 etc.

CHAP. III
July-Aug.
1789

The Traveller, 'walking uphill, bridle in hand,' overtakes 'a poor woman'; the image, as such commonly are, of drudgery and scarcity; 'looking sixty years of age, though she is not yet twenty-eight.' They have seven children, her poor drudge and she; a farm, with one cow, which helps to make the children soup; also one little horse, or garron. They have rents and quit-rents. Hens to pay to this Seigneur, Out-sacks to that; King's taxes, Statute-labour, Church-taxes, taxes enough;—and think the times inexpressible. She has heard that somewhere, in some manner, something is to be done for the poor: 'God send it soon; for the dues and taxes crush us down (nous écrasent)!'¹

Fair prophecies are spoken, but they are not fulfilled. There have been Notables, Assemblages, turnings-out and comings-in. Intriguing and manœuvring; Parliamentary eloquence and arguing, Greek meeting Greek in high places, has long gone on; yet still bread comes not. The harvest is reaped and garnered; yet still we have no bread. Urged by despair and by hope, what can Drudgery do, but rise, as predicted, and produce the General Overturn?

Fancy, then, some Five full-grown Millions of such gaunt figures, with their haggard faces (figures hâves); in woollen jupes, with copper-studded leather girths, and high sabots, starting up to ask, as in forest-roarings, their washed Upper-Classes, after long unreviewed centuries, virtually this question: How have ye treated us; how have ye taught us, fed us and led us, while we toiled for you? The answer can be read in flames, over the nightly summer-sky. This is the feeding and leading we have had of you: EMPTINESS,—of pocket, of stomach, of head and of heart. Behold there is nothing in us; nothing but what Nature gives her wild children of the desert: Ferocity and Appetite; Strength grounded on hunger. Did ye mark among your Rights of Man, that man was not to die of starvation, while there was bread reaped by him? It is among the Rights of Man.

Seventy-two Châtenus have flamed aloft in the Mâconnais and Beaujolais alone: this seems the centre of the conflagra-

¹ See Arthur Young, i. 131.

BOOK VI
July Aug
1789

tion, but it has spread over Dauphiné, Alsace, the Lyonnais, the whole South East is in a blaze. All over the North, from Rouen to Metz, disorder is abroad. smugglers of salt go openly in armed bands. the barriers of towns are burnt, toll gatherers, tax gatherers, official persons put to flight. 'It was thought,' says Young, 'the people, from hunger, would revolt', and we see they have done it. Desperate Lackalls, long prowling aimless, now finding hope in desperation itself, everywhere form a nucleus. They ring the Church bell by way of tocsin. and the Parish turns out to the work.¹ Ferocity, atrocity, hunger and revenge. such work as we can imagine!

Ill stands it now with the Seigneur, who, for example, 'has walled up the only Fountain of the Township', who has ridden high on his chartier and parchments, who has preserved Game not wisely but too well. Churches also, and Canonries, are sacked, without mercy, which have shorn the flock too close, forgetting to feed it. Wo to the land over which Sans culottism, in its day of vengeance, tramps roughshod—shod in sabots! Highbred Seigneurs, with their delicate women and little ones, had to 'fly half naked,' under cloud of night glad to escape the flames and even worse. You meet them at the tables d'hôte of inns, making wise reflections or foolish, that 'rank is destroyed', uncertain whither they shall now wend.² The métayer will find it convenient to be slack in paying rent. As for the Tax gatherer, he, long hunting as a biped of prey, may now find himself hunted as one; his Majesty's Exchequer will not 'fill up the Deficit' this season. it is the notion of many, that a Patriot Majesty, being the restorer of French Liberty, has abolished most taxes, though, for their private ends, some men make a secret of it.

Where this will end? In the Abyss one may prophesy; whither all Delusions are, at all moments, travelling; where this Delusion has now arrived. For if there be a Faith, from of old, it is this, as we often repeat, that no Lie can live for ever. The very Truth has to change its vesture, from time to time, and be born again. But all Lies have sentence of death written down against them, in Heaven's Chancery itself; and, slowly or fast, advance incessantly towards their hour. 'The sign of a Grand Seigneur being landlord,' says the vehement plain spoken Arthur Young, 'are wastes, landes,

¹ See II. st. Part. II. 243-4.

² See Young l. 149 etc
deserts,

deserts, ling : go to his residence, you will find it in the middle of a forest, peopled with deer, wild boars and wolves. The fields are scenes of pitiable management, as the houses are of misery. To see so many millions of hands, that would be industrious, all idle and starving : O, if I were a legislator of France for one day, I would make these great lords skip again !¹ O Arthur, thou now actually beholdest them skip ;—wilt thou grow to grumble at that too ?

For long years and generations it lasted ; but the time came. Featherbrain, whom no reasoning and no pleading could touch, the glare of the firebrand had to illuminate : there remained but that method. Consider it, look at it ! The widow is gathering nettles for her children's dinner ; a perfumed Seigneur, delicately lounging in the Chil-de-Bœuf, has an alchemy whereby he will extract from her the third nettle, and name it Rent and Law : such an arrangement must end. Ought it not ? But, O most fearful is such an ending ! Let those, to whom God, in his great mercy, has granted time and space, prepare another and milder one.

To some it is a matter of wonder that the Seigneurs did not do something to help themselves ; say, combine and arm : for there were a ' hundred and fifty thousand of them,' all valiant enough. Unhappily, a hundred and fifty thousand, scattered over wide Provinces, divided by mutual ill-will, cannot combine. The highest Seigneurs, as we have seen, had already emigrated,—with a view of putting France to the blush. Neither are arms now the peculiar property of Seigneurs ; but of every mortal who has ten shillings wherewith to buy a second-hand firelock.

Besides, those starving Peasants, after all, have not four feet and claws, that you could keep them down permanently in that manner. They are not even of black colour : they are mere Unwashed Seigneurs ; and a Seigneur too has human bowels !—The Seigneurs did what they could ; enrolled in National Guards ; fled, with shrieks, complaining to Heaven and Earth. One Seigneur, famed Menmay of Quincey, near Vesoul, invited all the rustics of his neighbourhood to a banquet ; blew-up his Château and them with gunpowder ; and instantaneously vanished, no man yet knows whither.²—

¹ See Young, i. 12, 48, 84, etc.

² Hist. Parl. ii. 161.

BOOK VI
Aug 1789

be the first served,—were the shop once open! This waiting in tail, not seen since the early days of July, again makes its appearance in August. In time, we shall see it perfected by practice to the rank almost of an art, and the art, or quasi-art, of standing in tail become one of the characteristics of the Parisian People, distinguishing them from all other Peoples whatsoever.

But consider, while work itself is so scarce, how a man must not only realise money, but stand waiting (if his wife is too weak to wait and struggle) for half days in the Tail, till he get it changed for dear bad bread! Controversies, to the length sometimes of blood and battery, must arise in these exasperated Queues. Or if no controversy, then it is but one accordant Pange Lingua of complaint against the Powers that be. France has begun her long Curriculum of Hungering, instructive and productive beyond Academic Curriculums; which extends over some seven most strenuous years. As Jean Poul says of his own Life, 'to a great height shall the business of Hungering go.'

Or consider, in strange contrast, the jubilee Ceremonies, for, in general, the aspect of Paris presents these two features: jubilee ceremonies and scarcity of victual. Processions enough walk in jubilee, of Young Women, decked and dizen'd, their ribands all tricolor; moving with song and tabor, to the Shrine of Saint Geneviève, to thank her that the Bastille is down. The Strong Men of the Market, and the Strong Women, fail not with their bouquets and speeches. Abbé Fouchet, famed in such work (for Abbé Lefèvre could only distribute powder) blesses tricolor cloth for the National Guard; and makes it a National Tricolor Flag, victorious, or to be victorious, in the cause of civil and religious liberty all over the world. Fauchet, we say, is the man for Te Deums, and public Consecrations,—to which, as in this instance of the Flag, our Notional Guard will 'reply with volleys of musketry,' Church and Cathedral though it be, 'filling Notre Dame with such noisiest fuliginous Amen, significant of several things.

On the whole, we will say our new Mayor Bailly, our new Commander Lafayette named also 'Scipio-Americanus,' have bought their preferment dear. Bailly rides in gilt state-coach, with beef-eaters and sumptuosity; Camille Desmoulins, and others, sniffing at him for it: Scipio bestrides the 'white

¹ See Ist. Parl. vol. 20; Mercet, Nouveau Paris etc.

BOOK SEVENTH

THE INSURRECTION OF WOMEN

CHAPTER I

PATRIOTISM

No, Friends, this Revolution is not of the consolidating kind. Do not fires, fevers, sown seeds, chemical mixtures, men, events,—all embodiments of Force that work in this miraculous Complex of Forces named Universe,—go on growing through their natural phases and developments each according to its kind; reach their height, reach their visible decline, finally sink under, vanishing, and what we call die? They all grow; there is nothing but what grows, and shoots forth into its special expansion,—once give it leave to spring. Observe too that each grows with a rapidity proportioned, in general, to the madness and unhealthiness there is in it; slow regular growth, though this also ends in death, is what we name health and sanity.

A Sansculottism which has prostrated Bastilles, which has got pike and musket, and now goes burning Châteaux, passing resolutions and haranguing under roof and sky, may be said to have sprung, and, by law of Nature, must grow. To judge by the madness and diseasedness both of itself, and of the soil and element it is in, one might expect the rapidity and monstrosity would be extreme.

Many things, too, especially all diseased things, grow by shoots and fits. The first grand fit and shooting forth of Sansculottism was that of Paris conquering its King; for Bailly's figure of rhetoric was all too sad a reality. The King is conquered; going at large on his parole, on condition, say, of absolutely good behaviour,—which in these circumstances, will unhappily mean no behaviour whatever. A quite untenable able position, that of Majesty put on its good behaviour ! Alas, is it not natural that whatever lives try to keep itself living ? Whereupon his Majesty's behaviour will soon become exceptionable ; and so the Second grand Fit of Sansculottism, that of putting him in durance, cannot be distant.

CHAP. I
Aug.-Sept
1789

Necker, in the National Assembly, is making moan, as usual, about his Deficit : Barriers and Customhouses burnt ; the Tax-gatherer hunted, not hunting ; his Majesty's Exchequer all but empty. The remedy is a Loan of thirty millions ; then, on still more enticing terms, a Loan of eighty millions : neither of which Loans, unhappily, will the Stockjobbers venture to lend. The Stockjobber has no country, except his own black pool of Agio.

And yet, in those days, for men that have a country, what a glow of patriotism burns in many a heart ; penetrating inwards to the very purse ! So early as the 7th of August, a Don Patriotique, 'Patriotic Gift of jewels to a considerable extent,' has been solemnly made by certain Parisian women ; and solemnly accepted with honourable mention. Whom forthwith all the world takes to imitating and emulating. Patriotic Gifts, always with some heroic eloquence, which the President must answer and the Assembly listen to, flow in from far and near : in such number that the honourable mention can only be performed in 'lists published at stated epochs.' Each gives what he can : the very cordwainers have behaved munificently ; one landed proprietor gives a forest ; fashionable society gives its shoebuckles, takes cheerfully to shoeties. 'Unfortunate-females give what they 'have amassed in loving.'¹ The smell of all cash, as Vespasian thought, is good.

Beautiful, and yet inadequate ! The Clergy must be 'invited' to melt their superfluous Church-plate,—in the Royal Mint. Nay finally, a Patriotic Contribution, of the forcible sort, has to be determined on, though unwillingly : let the fourth part of your declared yearly revenue, for this once only, be paid down ; so shall a National Assembly make the Constitution, undistracted at least by insolvency. Their own wages, as settled on the 17th of August, are but Eighteen Francs a day, each man ; but the Public Service must have sinews, must have money. To appease the Deficit ; not to 'combler, or

¹ Histoire Parlementaire, ii. 427.

BOOK VII choke, the Deficit,' if you or mortal could! For withal, as Aug-Sept-1789 Mirabeau was heard saying, 'it is the Deficit that saves us.'

Towards the end of August, our National Assembly in its constitutional labours has got so far as the question of Veto: shall Majesty have a Veto on the National Enactments; or not have a Veto? What speeches were spoken, within doors and without; clear, and also passionate logic; imprecations, comminations; gone happily, for most part, to Limbo! Through the cracked brain and uncracked lungs of Saint-

MIRABEAU.

Huruge, the Palais Royal rebellows with Veto. Journalism is busy, France rings with Veto. 'I never shall forget,' says Dumont, 'my going to Paris, one of those days, with Mirabeau; and the crowd of people we found waiting for his carriage about Le Jay the Bookseller's shop. They flung themselves before him; conjuring him, with tears in their eyes, not to suffer the Veto Absolu. They were in a frenzy:

"Monsieur le Comte, you are the People's father, you must save us; you must defend us against those villains who are bringing back Despotism. If the King get this Veto, what is the use of National Assembly? We are slaves; all is done."¹ Friends, if the sky fall, there will be catching of larks! Mirabeau, adds Dumont, was eminent on such occasions: he answered vaguely, with a Patrician imperturbability, and bound himself to nothing.

Deputations go to the Hôtel-de-Ville; anonymous Letters to Aristocrats in the National Assembly, threatening that fifteen thousand, or sometimes that sixty thousand, 'will march

¹ Sketches of Mirabeau, p. 156.

CHAP. I
Aug.-Sept.
1789

to illuminate you.' The Paris Districts are astir; Petitions signing: Saint-Huruge sets forth from the Palais Royal with an escort of fifteen hundred individuals, to petition in person. Resolute, or seemingly so, is the tall shaggy Marquis, is the Café de Foy: but resolute also is Commandant-General-Lafayette. The streets are all beset by Patrols: Saint-Huruge is stopped at the Barrière des Bons Hommes; he may bellow like the bulls of Bashan, but absolutely must return. The brethren of the Palais Royal 'circulate all night,' and make motions, under the open canopy; all Coffeehouses being shut. Nevertheless Lafayette and the Townhall do prevail; Saint-Huruge is thrown into Prison; Veto Absolu adjusts itself into Suspensive Veto, prohibition not for ever, but for a term of time; and this doom's-clamour will grow silent, as the others have done.

So far has Consolidation prospered, though with difficulty; repressing the Nether Sansculottic world; and the Constitution shall be made. With difficulty: amid jubilee and scarcity; Patriotic Gifts, Bakers'-queues; Abbé-Fauchet Harangues, with their Amen of platoon-musketry! Scipio-Americanus has deserved thanks from the National Assembly and France. They offer him stipends and emoluments to a handsome extent; all which stipends and emoluments he, covetous of far other blessedness than mere money, does, in his chivalrous way, without scruple, refuse.

To the Parisian common man, meanwhile, one thing remains inconceivable: that now when the Bastille is down, and French Liberty restored, grain should continue so dear. Our Rights of Man are voted, Feudalism and all Tyranny abolished; yet behold we stand in queue! Is it Aristocrat forestallers; a Court still bent on intrigues? Something is rotten somewhere.

And yet, alas, what to do? Lafayette, with his Patrols, prohibits everything, even complaint. Saint-Huruge and other heroes of the Veto lie in durance. People's-Friend Marat was seized; Printers of Patriotic Journals are fettered and forbidden; the very Hawkers cannot cry, till they get licence and leaden badges. Blue National Guards ruthlessly dissipate all groups; scour, with levelled bayonets, the Palais Royal itself. Pass, on your affairs, along the Rue Taranne, the Patrol,

BOOK VII
Aug. Sept.
1793

Patrol presenting his bayonet, cries To the left! Turn into the Rue Saint Benoît he cries, To the right! A judicious Patriot (like Camille Desmoulins, in this instance) is driven, for quietness' sake, to take the gutter

O much suffering People, our glorious Revolution is evaporating in tricolor ceremonies and complimentary harangues! Of which latter, as Lousstalot acridly calculates, 'upwards of two thousand have been delivered within the last month at the Townhall alone'¹ And our mouths unfilled with bread, are to be shut, under penalties? The Caricaturist promulgates his emblematic Tablature Le Patrouillotisme chassant le Patriotisme, Patriotism driven out by Patrollotism Ruthless Patrols, long superfine harangues, and scanty ill baked loaves, more like baked Bath bricks,—which produce an effect on the intestines! Where will this end? In consolidation?

CHAPTER II

O RICHARD, O MY KING

For, alas, neither is the Townhall itself without misgivings The Nether Sansculottic world has been suppressed hitherto—but then the Upper Court world! Symptoms there are that the Ceil de-Bœuf is rallying

More than once in the Townhall Sanhedrim, often enough from those outspoken Bakers' queues, has the wish uttered itself O that our Restorer of French Liberty were here, that he could see with his own eyes not with the false eyes of Queens and Cabals and his really good heart be enlightened! For falsehood still environs him, intriguing Dukes de Guiche, with Bodyguards, scouts of Bouillé, a new flight of intriguers, now that the old is flown What else means this advent of the Régiment de Flandre, entering Versailles, as we hear, on the 23d of September, with two pieces of cannon? Did not the Versailles National Guard do duty at the Château? Had they not Swiss, Hundred Swiss, Gardes du Corps Bodyguards so-called? Nay, it would seem the number of Bodyguards on duty has by a manœuvre been doubled the new relieving

¹ Révolution de Paris New paper (see ed in Histoire Parlementaire li. 357).

Battalion of them arrived at its time ; but the old relieved one does not depart !

CHAP II
Oct. 1, 178

Actually, there runs a whisper through the best-informed Upper-Circles, or a nod still more portentous than whispering, of his Majesty's flying to Metz ; of a Bond (to stand by him therein), which has been signed by Noblesse and Clergy, to the incredible amount of thirty, or even of sixty thousand. Lafayette coldly whispers it, and coldly asseverates it, to Count d'Estaing at the Dinner-table ; and D'Estaing, one of the bravest men, quakes to the core lest some lackey overhear it ; and tumbles thoughtful, without sleep, all night.¹ Regiment de Flandre, as we said, is clearly arrived. His Majesty, they say,

COMTE D'ESTAING.

¹ Brouillon de Lettre de M. d'Estaing à la Reine (in Histoire Parlementaire, iii. 24).

BOOK VII
Oct. 1, 1789

say, hesitates about sanctioning the Fourth of August, makes observations, of chilling tenor, on the very Rights of Man! Likewise may not all persons the Bakers'-queues themselves discern on the streets of Paris the most astonishing number of Officers on furlough Crosses of St Louis and suchlike? Some reckon 'from a thousand to twelve hundred' Officers of all uniforms, nay one uniform never before seen by eye green faced with red! The tricolor cockade is not always visible but what, in the name of Heaven may these black cockades which some wear, foreshadow?

Hunger whets everything especially Suspicion and Indignation Realities themselves in this Paris have grown unreal, preternatural Phantasms once more stalk through the hram of hungry France O ye laggards and dastards, cry shrill voices from the Queues if ye had the hearts of men ye would take your pikes and secondhand firelocks and look into it, not leave your wives and daughters to be starved murdered and worse!—Peace women! The heart of man is bitter and heavy, Patriotism, driven out by Patrollotism, knows not what to resolve on

The truth is, the Ceil de Bœuf has rallied, to a certain unknown extent A changed Ceil de Bœuf, with Versailles National Guards in their tricolor cockades, doing duty there, a Court all flaring with tricolor! Yet even to a tricolor Court men will rally Ye loyal hearts hurnt out Seigneurs rally round your Queen! With wishes, which will produce hopes, which will produce attempts!

For indeed self preservation being such a law of Nature, what can a rallied Court do but attempt and endeavour or call it plot—with such wisdom and unwisdom as it has? They will fly, escorted, to Metz where brave Bouillé commands they will raise the Royal Standard the Bond signatures shall become armed men Were not the King so languid! Their Bond, if at all signed must be signed without his privity—Unhappy King he has but one resolution not to have a civil war For the rest, he still hunts having ceased lockmaking, he still dozes and digests, is clay in the hands of the potter Ill will it fare with him in a world where all is helping itself, where as has been written 'whosoever is not hammer must be stithy', and 'the very hyssop on the wall grows there

BOOK VII 'M Tassin,' at the Tuileries parade on Sunday morning, forgets all National military rule, starts from the ranks, wrenches down one black cockade which is swathing ominous there, and tramples it fiercely into the soil of France. Patrollotism itself is not without suppressed fury. Also the Districts begin to stir, the voice of President Danton reverberates in the Cordeliers. People's Friend Marat has flown to Versailles and back again,—swart bird, not of the halcyon kind.¹

And so Patriot meets promenading Patriot, this Sunday; and sees his own grim care reflected on the face of another. Groups, in spite of Patrollotism, which is not so alert as usual, fluctuate deliberative, groups on the Bridges, on the Quais, at the patriotic Cafés. And ever as any black cockade may emerge, rises the many voiced growl and bark. A bas, Down! All black cockades are ruthlessly plucked off. one individual picks his up again, kisses it, attempts to refix it, but a 'hundred eanes start into the air,' and he desists. Still worse went it with another individual, doomed, by extempore Plebiscitum, to the Lanterne, saved, with difficulty, by some active Corps de Garde—Lafayette sees signs of an effervescence, which he doubles his Patrols, doubles his diligence, to prevent. So passes Sunday the 4th of October 1789.

Sullen is the male heart, repressed by Patrollotism, vehement is the female, irrepressible. The public speaking woman at the Palais Royal was not the only speaking one—Men know not what the pantry is, when it grows empty; only house-mothers know. O women, wives of men that will only calculate and not act! Patrollotism is strong; but Death, by starvation and military onfall, is stronger. Patrollotism represses male Patriotism. but female Patriotism? Will Guards named National thrust their bayonets into the bosoms of women? Such thought, or rather such dim unshaped raw material of a thought, ferments universally under the female nightcap; and, by earliest daybreak, on slight hint, will explode.

¹ Camille's newspaper, Révolution de Paris et de Brabant (a Histoire Parlementaire 1865)

CHAPTER IV

THE MENADS

IF Voltaire once, in splenetic humour, asked his countrymen: 'But you, Gualches, what have you invented?' they can now answer: The Art of Insurrection. It was an art needed in these last singular times: an art for which the French nature, so full of vehemence, so free from depth, was perhaps of all others the fittest.

Accordingly, to what a height, one may well say of perfection, has this branch of human industry been carried by France, within the last half-century! Insurrection, which Lafayette thought might be 'the most sacred of duties,' ranks now, for the French people, among the duties which they can perform. Other mobs are dull masses; which roll onwards with a dull fierce heat, but emit no light-flashes of genius as they go. The French mob, again, is among the liveliest phenomena of our world. So rapid, audacious; so clear-sighted, inventive, prompt to seize the moment; instinct with life to its finger-ends! That talent, were there no other, of spontaneously standing in queue, distinguishes, as we said, the French People from all Peoples, ancient and modern.

Let the Reader confess too that, taking one thing with another, perhaps few terrestrial Appearances are better worth considering than mobs. Your mob is a genuine outburst of Nature; issuing from, or communicating with, the deepest deep of Nature. When so much goes grinning and grimacing as a lifeless Formality, and under the stiff buckram no heart can be felt beating, here once more, if nowhere else, is a Sincerity and Reality. Shudder at it; or even shriek over it, if thou must; nevertheless consider it. Such a Complex of human Forces and Individualities hurled forth, in their transcendental mood, to act and react, on circumstances and on one another; to work out what it is in them to work. The thing they will do is known to no man; least of all to themselves. It is the inflammablest immeasurable Firework, generating, consuming itself. With what phases, to what extent, with

BOOK VII with what results it will burn off, Philosophy and Perspicacity
 Oct. 5, 1789 conjecture in vain

'Man,' as has been written, 'is for ever interesting to man; nay properly there is nothing else interesting' In which light also may we not discern why most Battles have become so wearisome? Battles, in these ages, are transacted by mechanism, with the slightest possible development of human individuality or spontaneity men now even die, and kill one another, in an artificial manner Battles ever since Homer's time, when they were Fighting Mobs, have mostly ceased to be worth looking at, worth reading of or remembering How many wearisome bloody Battles does History strive to represent; or even, in a busky way, to sing—and she would omit or carelessly slur over this one Insurrection of Women?

A thought, or dam raw maternal of a thought, was fermenting all night, universally in the female head and might explode In squalid garret, on Monday morning, Maternity awakes, to hear children weeping for bread Maternity must forth to the streets, to the herb markets and Bakers' queues, meets there with hunger stricken Maternity, sympathetic, exasperative O we unhappy women! But, instead of Bakers' queues why not to Aristocrats' palaces, the root of the matter? Allons! Let us assemble To the Hôtel de Ville, to Versailles, to the Lanterne!

In one of the Guardhouses of the Quartier Saint Eustache 'a young woman' seizes a drum—for how shall National Guards give fire on women, on a young woman? The young woman seizes the drum, sets forth beating it, 'uttering cries relative to the dearth of grains' Descend, O mothers, descend, ye Judiths, to food and revenge!—All women gather and go, crowds storm all stairs, force out all women the female Insurrectionary Force, according to Camille, resembles the English Naval one, there is a universal 'Press of women' Robust Dames of the Halle, slim Mantua makers, assiduous, risen with the dawn, ancient Virginity tripping to matins, the Housemaid, with early broom, all must go Rouse ye, O women, the laggard men will not act, they say, we ourselves may act!

And so, like snowbreak from the mountains, for every staircase is a melted brook, it storms, tumultuous, wild shrilling towards

THE FALLING SPLENDOUR
(THE TENNIS-COURT OATH).
(Opus finis coronæ.)

towards the Hôtel-de-Ville. Tumultuous; with or without drum-music: for the Faubourg Saint-Antoine also has tucked-up its gown; and with besom-staves, fire-irons, and even rusty pistols (void of ammunition), is flowing on. Sound of it flies, with a velocity of sound, to the utmost Barriers. By seven o'clock, on this raw October morning, fifth of the month, the Townhall will see wonders. Nay, as chance would have it, a male party are already there; clustering tumultuously round some National Patrol, and a Baker who has been seized with short weights. They are there; and have even lowered the rope of the Lanterne. So that the official persons have to smuggle forth the short-weighting Baker by back-doors, and even send 'to all the Districts' for more force.

Grand it was, says Camille, to see so many Judiths, from eight to ten thousand of them in all, rushing out to search into the root of the matter! Not unfrightful it must have been; ludicro-terrisse, and most unmanageable. At such hour the overwatched Three Hundred are not yet stirring: none but some Clerks, a company of National Guards; and M. de Gouvion, the Major-general. Gouvion has fought in America for the cause of civil Liberty; a man of no inconsiderable heart, but deficient in head. He is, for the moment, in his back apartment; assuaging Usher Maillard, the Bastille-sergeant, who has come, as too many do, with 'representations.' The assuagement is still incomplete when our Judiths arrive.

The National Guards form on the outer stairs with levelled bayonets; the ten thousand Judiths press up, resistless; with obtestations, with outspread hands,—merely to speak to the Mayor. The rear forces them; nay from male hands in the rear, stones already fly: the National Guard must do one of two things; sweep the Place de Grève with cannon, or else open to right and left. They open; the living deluge rushes in. Through all rooms and cabinets, upwards to the topmost belfry: ravenous; seeking arms, seeking Mayors, seeking justice;—while, again, the better-dressed speak kindly to the Clerks; point out the misery of these poor women; also their ailments, some even of an interesting sort.¹

Poor M. de Gouvion is shiftless in this extremity;—a man shiftless, perturbed: who will one day commit suicide. How happy for him that Usher Maillard the shifty was there, at

¹ Deux Amis, iii. 141-66.

BOOK VII the moment, though making representations! Fly back, Oct. 5 1789 thou shifty Maillard seek the Bastille Company, and O return fast with it, above all, with thy own shifty head For, behold, the Judiths can find no Mayor or Municipal, scarcely, in the topmost belfry, can they find poor Abbé Lefèvre the Powder distributor Him for want of a better, they suspend there in the pale morning light, over the top of all Paris, which swims in one's failing eyes—a horrible end?
 Nay the rope broke, as French ropes often did, or else an Amazon cut it Abbé Lefèvre falls, some twenty feet, rattling among the leads, and lives long years after, though always with 'a tremblement in the limbs'¹

And now doors fly under hatchets, the Judiths have broken the Armory, have seized guns and cannons, three money-bags, paper heaps, torches flare in few minutes, our brave Hôtel-de Ville, which dates from the Fourth Henry, will, with all that it holds, be in flames!

CHAPTER V

USHER MAILLARD

In flames, truly,—were it not that Usher Maillard, swift of foot, shifty of head, has returned!

Maillard, of his own motion,—for Gouyon or the rest would not even sanction him,—snatches a drum, descends the Porch stairs, ran tan, beating sharp, with loud rolls, his Rogues'- march To Versailles! Allons, à Versailles! As men beat on kettle or warming pan, when angry she hees, or say, flying desperate wasps, are to be hived, and the desperate insects hear it, and cluster round it,—simply as round a guidance, where there was none so now these Menads round shifty Maillard, Riding Usher of the Châtelet The axe pauses uplifted, Abbé Lefèvre is left half hanged from the belfry downwards all vomits itself What a ruh a duh is that?
 Stanislas Maillard Bastille hero, will lead us to Versailles?
 Joy to thee, Maillard, blessed art thou above Riding Ushers!
 Away, then, away!

¹ Dussault Prise de la Bastille note p. 231

The seized cannon are yoked with seized cart-horses : brownlocked Demoiselle Théroigne, with pike and helmet, sits there as gunneress, 'with haughty eye and serene fair countenance'; comparable, some think, to the Maid of Orléans, or even recalling 'the idea of Pallas Athene.'¹ Maillard (for his drum still rolls) is, by heaven-rending acclamation, admitted General. Maillard hastens the languid march. Maillard, beating rhythmic, with sharp ran-tan, all along the Quais, leads forward, with difficulty, his Menadic host. Such a host—marched not in silence! The bargeman pauses on the River; all wagoners and coach-drivers fly; men peer from windows,—not women, lest they be pressed. Sight of sights: Bacchantes, in these ultimate Formalised Ages! Bronze Henri looks on, from his Pont-Neuf; the Monarchie Louvre, Medicæan Tuileries see a day like none heretofore seen.

And now Maillard has his Menads in the Champs Élysées (Fields Tartarean rather); and the Hôtel-de-Ville has suffered comparatively nothing. Broken doors; an Abbé Lefèvre, who shall never more distribute powder; three sacks of money, most part of which (for Sanseulottism, though famishing, is not without honour) shall be returned:² this is all the damage. Great Maillard! A small nucleus of Order is round his drum; but his outskirts fluctuate like the mad Ocean: for Rascality male and female is flowing in on him, from the four winds: guidance there is none but in his single head and two drum-sticks.

O Maillard, when, since War first was, had General of Force such a task before him as thou this day? Walter the Penniless still touches the feeling heart: but then Walter had sanction; had space to turn in; and also his Crusaders were of the male sex. Thou, this day, disowned of Heaven and Earth, art General of Menads. Their inarticulate frenzy thou must, on the spur of the instant, render into articulate words, into actions that are not frantic. Fail in it, this way or that! Pragmatical Officiality, with its penalties and law-books, waits before thee; Menads storm behind. If such hewed off the melodious head of Orpheus, and hurled it into the Peneus waters, what may they not make of thee,—thee rhythmic merely, with no music but a sheepskin drum!—Maillard did not fail. Remarkable Maillard, if fame were not an accident,

¹ Deux Amis, iii. 157.² Hist. Parl. iii. 310.

BOOK VII and History a distillation of Rumour, how remarkable wert
Oct. 5, 1789 thou!

On the Elysian Fields there is pause and fluctuation, but, for Maillard, no return. He persuades his Menads, clamorous for arms and the Arsenal, that no arms are in the Arsenal, that an unarmed attitude, and petition to a National Assembly, will be the best: he hastily nominates or sanctions generalless captains of tens and fifties,—and so, in loosest flowing order to the 'rhythm of some 'eight drums' (having laid aside his own), with the Bastille Volunteers bringing up his rear, once more takes the road.

Chaillot, which will promptly yield baked loaves, is not plundered, nor are the Sèvres Potteries broken. The old arches of Sèvres Bridge echo under Menadic feet, Seine River gushes on with its perpetual murmur; and Paris flings after us the boom of tocsin and alarm drum,—inaudible, for the present, amid shrill sounding hosts, and the splash of rainy weather. To Meudon, to Saint Cloud, on both hands, the report of them is gone abroad, and hearths, this evening will have a topic. The press of women still continues, for it is the cause of all Eve's Daughters, mothers that are, or that ought to be. No carriage lady, were it with never such hysterics, but must dismount, in the mud roads, in her silk shoes, and walk.¹ In this manner, amid wild October weather, they, a wild unwinged, stork flight, through the astonished country wend their way. Travellers of all sorts they stop, especially travellers or couriers from Paris. Deputy Lechapelier, in his elegant vesture, from his elegant vehicle looks forth amazed through his spectacles, apprehensive for life;—states eagerly that he is Patriot Deputy Lechapelier, and even Old President Lechapelier, who presided on the Night of Pentecost, and is original member of the Breton Club. Thereupon 'rises huge shout of Vive Lechapelier, and several armed persons spring up behind and before to escort him.'²

Nevertheless, news, despatches from Lafayette, or vague noise of rumour, have pierced through, by side roads. In the National Assembly, while all is busy discussing the order of the day; regretting that there should be Anti National Repasts in Opera-halls; that his Majesty should still hesitate about accepting the Rights of Man, and hang conditions and peradventures on them,—Mirabeau steps up to the President, experienced Mounier as it chanced to be; and articulates, in bass undertone: 'Mounier, Paris marche sur nous (Paris is marching on us).'

¹ Deux Amis III. 159.

² Ibid., II. 177. Dictionnaire des Hommes Marquants, II. 379.

 'May be (Je n'en sais rien)!'—'Believe it or disbelieve it, that is not my concern; but Paris, I say, is marching on us. Fall suddenly unwell; go over to the Château; tell them this. There is not a moment to lose.'—

'Paris marching on us?' responds Mounier, with an atrabiliar accent: 'Well, so much the better! We shall the sooner be a Republic.' Mirabeau quits him, as one quits an experienced President getting blindfold into deep waters; and the order of the day continues as before.

Yes, Paris is marching on us; and more than the women of Paris! Scarcely was Maillard gone, when M. de Gouvion's message to all the Districts, and such tocsin and drumming of the générale, began to take effect. Armed National Guards from every District; especially the Grenadiers of the Centre, who are our old Gardes Françaises, arrive, in quick sequence, on the Place de Grève. An 'immense people' is there; Saint-Antoine, with pike and rusty firelock, is all crowding thither, be it welcome or unwelcome. The Centre Grenadiers are received with cheering: 'It is not cheers that we want,' answer they gloomily; 'the Nation has been insulted; to arms, and come with us for orders!' Ha, sits the wind so? Patriotism and Patrollotism are now one!

The Three Hundred have assembled; 'all the Committees are in activity'; Lafayette is dictating despatches for Versailles, LECHAPELIER.

CHAP. V
 Oct. 5, 1789

BOOK VII
Oct. 6, 1793

sailles, when a Deputation of the Centre Grenadiers introduces itself to him. The Deputation makes military obeisance, and thus speaks, not without a kind of thought in it: 'Mon Général, we are deputed by the Six Companies of Grenadiers. We do not think you a traitor, but we think the Government betrays you, it is time that this end. We cannot turn our bayonets against women crying to us for bread. The people are miserable, the source of the mischief is at Versailles: we must go seek the King, and bring him to Paris. We must exterminate (exterminer) the Régiment de Flandre and the Gardes du Corps, who have dared to trample on the National Cockade. If the King be too weak to wear his crown, let him lay it down. You will crown his Son, you will name a Council of Regency: and all will go better.'

Reproachful astonishment paints itself on the face of Lafayette, speaks itself from his eloquent chivalrous lips in vain. 'My General, we would shed the last drop of our blood for you, but the root of the mischief is at Versailles, we must go and bring the King to Paris, all the people wish it, tout le peuple le veut.'

My General descends to the outer staircase, and harangues once more in vain. 'To Versailles! To Versailles!' Mayor Bailly, sent for through floods of Sansculottism, attempts academic oratory from his gilt state coach, realises nothing but infinite hoarse cries of 'Bread! To Versailles!'—and gladly shrinks within doors. Lafayette mounts the white charger, and again harangues, and reharangues with eloquence, with firmness, indignant demonstration, with all things but persuasion. 'To Versailles! To Versailles!' So lasts it, hour after hour,—for the space of half a day.

The great Scipio Americanus can do nothing, not so much as escape. 'Morbleu, mon Général,' cry the Grenadiers serrying their ranks as the white charger makes a motion that way, 'you will not leave us, you will abide with us!' A perilous juncture. Mayor Bailly and the Municipals sit quaking within doors, my General is prisoner without. The Place de Grève, with its thirty thousand Regulars, its whole irregular Saint Antoine and Saint Marceau, is one mutatory mass of clear or rusty steel, all hearts set, with a moody fixedness, on one object. Mood, fixed are all hearts: tranquil is no heart,—if it be not that of the white charger, who paws there, with arched neck, composedly champing his bit ; as if no World, with its Dynasties and Eras, were now rushing down. The drizzly day bends westward ; the cry is still : ' To Versailles ! ' CHAP. V

Oct. 5, 1789

Nay now, borne from afar, come quite sinister cries ; hoarse, reverberating in long-drawn hollow murmurs, with syllables too like those of ' Lanterne ' ! Or else, irregular Sanseulottism may be marching off, of itself, with pikes, nay with cannon. The inflexible Scipio does at length, by aide-de-camp, ask of the Municipals : Whether or not he may go ? A Letter is handed out to him, over armed heads ; sixty thousand faces flash fixedly on his, there is stillness and no bosom breathes, till he have read. By Heaven, he grows suddenly pale ! Do the Municipals permit ? ' Permit, and even order,'—since he can no other. Clangour of approval rends the welkin. To your ranks, then ; let us march !

BAILLY.

It

BOOK VII
Oct. 3, 1789

It is, as we compute, towards three in the afternoon. Indignant National Guards may dine for once from their haversack—dined or undined, they march with one heart. Paris flings up her windows, ‘claps hands,’ as the Avengers, with their shrilling drums and shalms, tramp by; she will then sit pensive, apprehensive, and pass rather a sleepless night.¹ On the white charger, Lafayette, in the slowest possible manner, going and coming, and eloquently haranguing among the ranks, rolls onward with his thirty thousand. Saint-Antoine, with pike and cannon, has preceded him; a mixed multitude, of all and of no arms, hovers on his flanks and skirts, the country once more pauses agape: Paris marche sur nous.

CHAPTER VI

TO VERSAILLES

For, indeed, about this same moment, Maillard has halted his draggled Menads on the last hill top, and now Versailles, and the Château of Versailles, and far and wide the inheritance of Royalty opens to the wondering eye. From far on the right, over Marly and Saint Germain en Laye, round towards Rambouillet, on the left: beautiful all, softly embosomed; as if in sadness, in the dim moist weather! And near before us is Versailles, New and Old; with that broad frondent Avenue de Versailles between,—stately frondent, broad, three hundred feet as men reckon, with its four Rows of Elms; and then the Château de Versailles, ending in royal Parks and Pleasances, gleaming Lakelets, Arbours, Labyrinths, the Ménagerie, and Great and Little Trianon. High towered dwellings, leafy pleasant places, where the gods of this lower world abide—whence, nevertheless, black Care cannot be excluded; whither Menadic Hunger is even now advancing, armed with pike thyrsi!

Yes, yonder, Mesdames, where our straight frondent Avenue, joined, as you note, by Two frondent brother Avenues from this hand and from that, spreads out into Place Royal and Palace Forecourt,—yonder is the Salle des Menus. Yonder an august

¹ Deux Jours, i. l. 165.

BOOK VII forehodings Surely, for these four weary hours he has reclined
 Oct. 5, 1789 not on roses! The order of the day is getting forward a Deputation to his Majesty seems proper, that it might please him to grant 'Acceptance pure and simple' to those Constitution Articles of ours, the 'mixed qualified Acceptance,' with its peradventures, is satisfactory to neither gods nor men

So much is clear And yet there is more, which no man speaks, which all men now vaguely understand Disquietude, absence of mind is on every face, Members whisper, uneasily come and go the order of the day is evidently not the day's want Till at length, from the outer gates, is heard a rustling and justling, shrill uproar and squabbling, muffled by walls, which testifies that the hour is come! Rushing and crushing one hears now, then enter Usher Maillard, with a Deputation of Fifteen muddy dripping Women,—having, by incredible industry, and aid of all the macers, persuaded the rest to wait out of doors National Assembly shall now, therefore, look its august task directly in the face regenerative Constitutionalism has an unregenerate Sansculottism hoddily in front of it, crying 'Bread! Bread!'

Shifty Maillard, translating frenzy into articulation, repressive with the one hand, expostulative with the other, does his best, and really, though not bred to public speaking, manages rather well —In the present dreadful rarity of grains, a Deputation of Female Citizens has, as the august Assembly can discern, come out from Paris to petition Plots of Aristocrats are too evident in the matter, for example, one miller has been bribed 'by a bank note of 200 livres' not to grind — name unknown to the Usher, hut fact provable, at least in dubitable Further, it seems, the National Cockade has been trampled on; also there are Black Cockades, or were All which things will not an august National Assembly, the hope of France, take into its wise immediate consideration?

And Menadic Hunger, irrepressible, crying 'Black Cockades,' crying 'Bread, Bread,' adds, after such fashion Will it not?
 —Yes, Messieurs, if a Deputation to his Majesty, for the 'Acceptance pure and simple,' seemed proper,—how much more now, for 'the afflicting situation of Paris', for the calming of this effervescence! President Mounier, with a speedy Deputation, among whom we notice the respectable figure of Doctor Guillotin, gets himself forward on march

Vice-President

Vice-President shall continue the order of the day; Usher CHAP. VI Maillard shall stay by him to repress the women. It is four Oct. 6, 1789 o'clock, of the miserablest afternoon, when Monnier steps out.

O experienced Monnier, what an afternoon; the last of thy political existence! Better had it been to fall 'suddenly unwell,' while it was yet time. For, behold, the Esplanade, over all its spacious expanse, is covered with groups of squalid dripping Women; of lankhaired male Rascality, armed with axes, rusty pikes, old muskets, iron-shod clubs (bâtons ferrés, which end in knives or swordblades, a kind of extempore hill-hook);—looking nothing but hungry revolt. The rain pours: Gardes-du-Corps go caracoling through the groups 'amid hisses'; irritating and agitating what is but dispersed here to reunite there.

Innumerable squalid women beleaguer the President and Deputation; insist on going with him: has not his Majesty himself, looking from the window, sent out to ask, What we wanted? 'Bread, and speech with the King (Du pain, et parler au Roi),' that was the answer. Twelve women are clamorously added to the Deputation; and march with it, across the Esplanade; through dissipated groups, caracoling Bodyguards and the pouring rain.

President Monnier, unexpectedly augmented by Twelve women, copiously escorted by Hunger and Rascality, is himself mistaken for a group: himself and his Women are dispersed by caracolers; rally again with difficulty, among the mud.¹ Finally the Grates are opened; the Deputation gets access, with the Twelve women too in it; of which latter, Five shall even see the face of his Majesty. Let wet Menadism, in the best spirits it can, expect their return.

CHAPTER VII

AT VERSAILLES

BUT already Pallas Athene (in the shape of Demoiselle Théroigne) is busy with Flandre and the dismounted Dragoons. She, and such women as are fittest, go through the ranks;

¹ Monnier, Expost Justificatif (cited in Deux Amis, iii. 185).

BOOK VII
Oct. 5, 1789

even chases him, Brunout flying nimbly, though in a pirouette manner, and now with sword also drawn. At which sight of wrath and victory, two other Bodyguards (for wrath is contagious, and to pent Bodyguards is so solacing) do likewise give way, give chase, with brandished sabre, and in the air make horrid circles. So that poor Bruout has nothing for it but to retreat with accelerated nimbleness, through rank after rank; Parthian like, fenciog as he flies, above all, shouting lustily, 'On nous laisse assassiner, They are getting us assassinated!'

Shameful! Three against one! Growls come from the Lecomtrian ranks, bellowings,—lastly shots. Savonnieres' arm is raised to strike the bullet of a Lecomtrian musket shatters it; the brandished sabre jingles down harmless. Brunout has escaped, this duel well ended but the wild howl of war is everywhere beginning to pipe!

The Amazons recoil; Saint Antoine has its cannon pointed (full of grapeshot), thrice applies the lit flambeau, which thrice refuses to catch,—the touchholes are so wetted; and voices cry 'Arrêtez, il n'est pas temps encore, Stop, it is not yet time!'¹ Messieurs of the Garde du Corps, ye had orders not to fire, nevertheless two of you jump dismounted, and one war horse lies slain. Were it not well to draw back out of shot-range, finally to file off,—into the interior? If so so filing off, there did a musketoon or two discharge itself at these armed shopkeepers, hooting and crowing, could man wonder? Draggled are your white cockades of an enormous size, would to Heaven they were got exchanged for tricolor ones! Your buckskins are wet, your hearts heavy. Go, and return not!

The Bodyguards file off, as we hunt, giving and receiving shots, drawing no life blood, leaving boundless indignation. Some three times in the thickening dusk, a glimpse of them is seen, at this or the other Portal saluted always with execrations, with the whew of lead. Let but a Bodyguard show face, he is hunted by Rascality,—for instance, poor 'M de Moucheton of the Scotch Company,' owner of the slain war horse; and has to be smuggled off by Versailles Captains. Or rusty fire locks helch after him, shivering asunder his—hat. In the end, by superior Order, the Bodyguards, all but the few on immediate duty, disappear; or as it were abscond; and march, under cloud of night, to Rambouillet.²

¹ Deux Amis ii 197 201

² Weber ibid supra.

We remark also that the Versaillesse have now got ammunition: all afternoon, the official Person could find none; till, in these so critical moments, a patriotie Sublicutenant set a pistol to his ear, and would thank him to find some,—which he thereupon succeeded in doing. Likewise that Flandre, disarmed by Pallas Athene, says openly, it will not fight with citizens; and for token of peace has exchanged cartridges with the Versaillesse.

Sansculottism is now among mere friends; and can 'circulate freely'; indignant at Bodyguards;—complaining also considerably of hunger.

CHAP. VII
Oct. 5, 1789

CHAPTER VIII

THE EQUAL DIET

BUT why lingers Mounier; returns not with his Deputation? It is six, it is seven o'clock; and still no Mounier, no Acceptance pure and simple.

And, behold, the dripping Menads, not now in deputation but in mass, have penetrated into the Assembly: to the shamefulest interruption of public speaking and order of the day. Neither Maillard nor Vice-President can restrain them, except within wide limits; not even, except for minutes, can the lion-voice of Mirabeau, though they applaud it: but ever and anon they break-in upon the regeneration of France with cries of: 'Bread; not so much discoursing! Du pain; pas tant de longs discours!'—So insensible were these poor creatures to bursts of parliamentary eloquence!

One learns also that the royal Carriages are getting yoked, as if for Metz. Carriages, royal or not, have verily showed themselves at the back Gates. They even produced, or quoted, a written order from our Versailles Municipality,—which is a Monarchic not a Democratic one. However, Versailles Patrols drove them in again; as the vigilant Lecointre has strictly charged them to do.

A busy man, truly, is Major Lecointre, in these hours. For Colonel d'Estaing loiters invisible in the Œil-de-Bœuf; invisible, or still more questionably visible for instants: then also

BOOK VII also received with rapturous Menadic plaudits —Only could Oct 5, 1789 not an august Assembly contrive further to 'fix the price of bread at eight sous the halfquartern, butchers meat at six sous the pound', which seem fair rates? Such motion do 'a multitude of men and women,' irrepressible by Usher Maillard, now make, does an august Assembly hear made Usher Maillard himself is not always perfectly measured in speech, but if rebuked, he can justly excuse himself by the peculiarity of the circumstances¹

But finally, this Decree well passed, and the disorder continuing, and Members melting away, and no President Mounier returning—what can the Vice President do but also melt away? The Assembly melts, under such pressure, into deliquium, or, as it is officially called adjourns Maillard is despatched to Paris, with the 'Decree concerning Grains' in his pocket, he and some women in carriages belonging to the King Thitherward slim Louison Chahray has already set forth, with that 'written answer' which the Twelve She deputies returned in to seek Slim sylph, she has set forth through the black muddy country she has much to tell her poor nerves so flurried, and travels, as indeed today on this road all persons do, with extreme slowness President Mounier has not come nor the Acceptance pure and simple, though six hours with their events have come, though courier on courier reports that Lafayette is coming Coming with war or with peace? It is time that the Château also should determine on one thing or another, that the Château also should show itself alive, if it would continue living!

Victorious, joyful after such delay, Mounier does arrive at last, and the hard earned Acceptance with him, which now, alas, is of small value Fancy Mounier's surprise to find his Senate, whom he hoped to charm by the Acceptance pure and simple, all gone, and in its stead a Senate of Menads! For as Erasmus's Ape mimicked, say with wooden splint, Erasmus shaving so do these Amazons hold, in mock majesty, some confused parody of National Assembly They make motions, deliver speeches, pass enactments, productive at least of loud laughter All galleries and benches are filled, a Strong Dame of the Market is in Mounier's Chair Not without difficulty, Mounier, by aid of macers and persuasive speaking makes his way to the Female President; the Strong Dame, before abdicating, signifies that, for one thing, she and indeed her whole senate male and female (for what was one roasted war-horse among so many?) are suffering very considerably from hunger.

¹ Moniteur (a Hist Parl 44, 105).

CHAP. VIII
Oct. 5, 1789

Experienced Mounier, in these circumstances, takes a two-fold resolution: To reconvoke his Assembly Members by sound of drum; also to procure a supply of food. Swift messengers fly, to all bakers, cooks, pastrycooks, vintners, restorers; drums beat, accompanied with shrill vocal proclamation, through all streets. They come: the Assembly Members come; what is still better, the provisions come. On tray and barrow come these latter; loaves, wine, great store of sausages. The nourishing baskets circulate harmoniously along the benches; nor, according to the Father of Epics, did any soul lack a fair share of victual (δαίρος ἕως, an equal diet); highly desirable at the moment.¹

Gradually some hundred or so of Assembly Members get edged in, Menadism making way a little, round Mounier's chair; listen to the Acceptance pure and simple; and begin, what is the order of the night, 'discussion of the Penal Code.' All benches are crowded; in the dusky galleries, duskier with unwashed heads, is a strange 'coruscation,'—of impromptu bill-hooks.² It is exactly five months this day since these same galleries were filled with high-plumed jewelled Beauty, raining bright influences; and now? To such length have we got in regenerating France. Methinks the travail-throes are of the sharpest!—Menadism will not be restrained from occasional remarks; asks, 'What is the use of Penal Code? The thing we want is Bread.' Mirabeau turns round with lion-voiced rebuke; Menadism applauds him; but recommences.

Thus they, chewing tough sausages, discussing the Penal Code, make night hideous. What the issue will be? Lafayette with his thirty thousand must arrive first: him, who cannot now be distant, all men expect, as the messenger of Destiny.

¹ Deux Amis, iii. 208.

² Courrier de Provence (Mirabeau's Newspaper), No. 50, p. 19.

BOOK VII
Oct. 5-6, 1789

CHAPTER IX

LAFAYETTE

TOWARDS midnight lights flare on the hill, Lafayette's lights! The roll of his drums comes up the Avenue de Versailles 'With peace, or with war? Patience, friends! With

LAFAYETTE.

neither Lafayette is come, but not yet the catastrophe

He has halted and harangued so often, on the march, spent nine hours on four leagues of road At Montreuil, close on Versailles, the whole Host had to pause, and, with up lifted right hand, in the murk of Night, to these pouring skies, swear solemnly to respect the King's Dwelling, to be faithful to King and National As sembly Rage is driven down out of sight, by the laggard march, the thirst of vengeance slaked in weariness and soaking clothes Flandre is again drawn out under arms but Flandre, grown so patriotic, now needs no 'exterminating' The wayworn Battalions halt in the Avenue they have, for the present, no wish so pressing as that of shelter and rest

Anxious sits President Mounier, anxious the Château There is a message coming from the Château that M Mounier would please to return thither with a fresh Deputation, swiftly, and so at least unite our two anxieties Anxious Mounier does of himself send meanwhile, to apprise the General that his Majesty has been so gracious as to grant us the Acceptance pure and simple The General, with a small advance column, makes answer in passing, speaks vaguely some smooth words to the National National President,—glances, only with the eye, at that so mixtiform National Assembly; then fares forward towards the Château. There are with him two Paris Municipals; they were chosen from the Three Hundred for that errand. He gets admittance through the locked and padlocked Grates, through sentries and ushers, to the Royal Halls.

CHAP. IX
Oct. 5-6, 1789

LE DAUPHIN.

The Court, male and female, crowds on his passage, to read their doom on his face; which exhibits, say Historians, a mixture 'of sorrow, of fervour and valour,' singular to behold.¹ The King, with Monsieur, with Ministers and Marshals, is waiting to receive him: He 'is come,' in his highflown chivalrous way, 'to offer his head for the safety of his Majesty's.'

¹ Mémoire de M. le Comte de Lally-Tollendal (Janvier 1790), pp. 161-5

BOOK VII
Oct. 5-6,
1793

where, must take the National Oath, make reparation to the Tricolor, Flandre will swear There may be much swearing much public speaking there will infallibly be and so, with barangues and vows, may the matter in some handsome way wind itself up

Or, alas, may it not be all otherwise, unhandsome, the consent not honourable, but extorted, ignominious? Boundless Chaos of Insurrection presses slumbering round the Palace, like Ocean round a Diving bell, and may penetrate at any crevice Let but that accumulated insurrectionary mass find entrance! Like the infinite inburst of water, or say rather, of inflammable, self igniting fluid, for example, 'turpentine-and phosphorus oil,'—fluid known to Spinola Santerre!

CHAPTER X

THE GRAND ENTRIES

THE dull dawn of a new morning, drizzly and chill, had but broken over Versailles, when it pleased Destiny that a Bodyguard should look out of window, on the right wing of the Château, to see what prospect there was in Heaven and in Earth Rascality male and female is prowling in view of him His fasting stomach is, with good cause, sour, he perhaps cannot forbear a passing malison on them, least of all can he forbear answering such

Ill words breed worse till the worst word come, and then the ill deed Did the maledicent Bodyguard, getting (as was too inevitable) better malediction than he gave, load his musketoon, and threaten to fire, nay actually fire? Were wise who wist! It stands asserted, to us not credibly But be this as it may, menaced Rascality, in whinnying scorn, is shaking at all Grates the fastening of one (some write, it was a chain merely) gives way, Rascality is in the Grand Court, whinnying louder still that 'the Sieur Cardine, a National Guard without arms, was stabbed.' But see, sure enough, poor Jérôme l'Héritier, an unarmed National Guard he too, 'cabinet-maker, a saddler's son, of Paris,' with the down of youthhood still on his chin,—he reels death-stricken; rushes to the pavement, scattering it with his blood and brains!—Allelu! Wilder than Irish wakes rises the howl; of pity, of infinite revenge. In few moments, the Grate of the inner and inmost Court, which they name Court of Marble, this too is forced, or surprised, and bursts open: the Court of Marble too is overflowed: up the Grand Staircase, up all stairs and entrances rushes the living Deluge! Deshuttes and Varigny, the two sentry Bodyguards, are trodden down, are massacred with a hundred pikes. Women snatch their cutlasses, or any weapon, and storm-in Menadic:—other women lift the corpse of shot Jérôme; lay it down on the Marble steps; there shall the livid face and smashed head, dumb for ever, speak.

The maledicent Bodyguard, more Bodyguards than he do now give fire, a man's arm is shattered Lecomte will depose¹

¹ Dépôt en de Lecomte (n H st Parl 1. 211 5).

Wo now to all Bodyguards, mercy is none for them! Miomandre de Sainte-Marie pleads with soft words, on the Grand Staircase, 'descending four steps':—to the roaring tornado. His comrades snatch him up, by the skirts and belts; literally, from the jaws of Destruction; and slam-to their Door. This also will stand few instants; the panels shivering in, like potsherds. Barricading serves not: fly fast, ye Bodyguards: rabid Insurrection, like the Hellhound Chase, uproaring at your heels!

The terror-struck Bodyguards fly, bolting and barricading; it follows. Whitherward? Through hall on hall: wo, now! towards the Queen's Suite of Rooms, in the farthest room of which the Queen is now asleep. Five sentinels rush through that long Suite; they are in the Anteroom knocking loud: 'Save the Queen!' Trembling women fall at their feet with tears: are answered: 'Yes, we will die; save ye the Queen!'

Tremble not, women, but haste: for, lo, another voice shouts far through the outermost door, 'Save the Queen!' and the door is shut. It is brave Miomandre's voice that shouts this second warning. He has stormed across imminent death to do it; fronts imminent death, having done it. Brave Tardivet du Repaire, bent on the same desperate service, was borne down with pikes; his comrades hardly snatched him in again

CHAP. X
Oct. 6, 1789

BOOK VII again alive Miomandre and Tardivet let the names of these
Oct. 6, 1789 two Bodyguards, as the names of brave men should, live long

Trembling Maids of Honour, one of whom from afar caught glimpse of Miomandre as well as heard him, hastily wrap the Queen, not in robes of state She flies for her life, across the Œil de Bœuf, against the main door of which too Insurrection hatters. She is in the King's Apartments, in the King's arms, she clasps her children amid a faithful few The Imperial hearted hursts into mother's tears 'O my friends, save me and my children, O mes amis, sauvez moi et mes enfans!' The hattering of Insurrectionary axes clangs audible across the Œil de Bœuf What an hour!

Yes, Friends, a hideous fearful hour, shameful alike to Governed and Governor, wherein Governed and Governor ignominiously testify that their relation is at an end Rage, which had brewed itself in twenty thousand hearts for the last four and twenty hours, has taken fire Jérôme's brained corpse lies there as live coal It is, as we said, the infinite Element bursting in, wild surging through all corridors and conduits

Meanwhile the poor Bodyguards have got hunted mostly into the Œil de Bœuf They may die there at the King's threshold, they can do little to defend it They are heaping tabourets (stools of honour) benches and all movables against the door, at which the axe of Insurrection thunders—But did brave Miomandre perish, then, at the Queen's outer door? No, he was fractured, slashed, lacerated, left for dead, he has nevertheless crawled hither, and shall live, honoured of loyal France Remark also, in flat contradiction to much which has been said and sung, that Insurrection did not burst that door he had defended, but hurried elsewhere, seeking new Bodyguards¹

Poor Bodyguards with their Thyestes Opera Repast! Well for them that Insurrection has only pikes and axes, no right sieging tools! It shakes and thunders Must they all perish miserably, and Royalty with them? Deshuttés and Varigny, massacred at the first inbreak have been beheaded in the Marble Court, a sacrifice to Jérôme's manes Jourdan with the tile-beard did that duty willingly; and asked, If there were no more? Another captive they are leading round the corpse, with howl-chantings: may not Jourdan again tuck-up his sleeves?

¹ Campan ii. 75-87

CHAP. X
Oct. 6, 1789

And louder and louder rages Insurrection within, plundering if it cannot kill; louder and louder it thunders at the Œil-de-Bœuf: what can now hinder its bursting-in?—On a sudden it ceases; the battering has ceased! Wild-rushing; the cries grow fainter; there is silence, or the tramp of regular steps; then a friendly knocking: 'We are the Centre Grenadiers, old Gardes Françaises: Open to us, Messieurs of the Garde-du-Corps; we have not forgotten how you saved us at Fontenoy!'¹ The door is opened; enter Captain Gondran and the Centre Grenadiers: there are military embracings; there is sudden deliverance from death into life.

Strange Sons of Adam! It was to 'exterminate' these Gardes-du-Corps that the Centre Grenadiers left home: and now they have rushed to save them from extermination. The memory of common peril, of old help, melts the rough heart; bosom is clasped to bosom, not in war. The King shows himself, one moment, through the door of his Apartment, with: 'Do not hurt my Guards!—' Soyons frères, Let us be brothers!' cries Captain Gondran; and again dashes off, with levelled bayonets, to sweep the Palace clear.

Now too Lafayette, suddenly roused, not from sleep (for his eyes had not yet closed), arrives; with passionate popular eloquence, with prompt military word of command. National Guards, suddenly roused, by sound of trumpet and alarm-drum, are all arriving. The death-melody ceases: the first sky-lambent blaze of Insurrection is got damped down; it burns now, if unextinguished yet flameless, as charred coals do, and not inextinguishable. The King's Apartments are safe. Ministers, Officials, and even some loyal National Deputies are assembling round their Majesties. The consternation will, with sobs and confusion, settle down gradually, into plan and counsel, better or worse.

But glance now, for a moment, from the royal windows! A roaring sea of human heads, inundating both Courts; billowing against all passages: Menadic women; infuriated men, ¹ Toulougeon, i. 144.

BOOK VII
Oct. 6 1789

mad with revenge, with love of mischief, love of plunder ! Rascality has slipped its muzzle ; and now bays, three throated like the Dog of Erebus Fourteen Bodyguards are wounded, two massacred, and as we saw, beheaded, Jourdan asking ' Was it worth while to come so far for two ? ' Hapless Deshuttés and Vargny ! Their fate surely was sad Whirled down so suddenly to the abyss, as men are, suddenly, by the wide thunder of the Mountain Avalanche, awakened not by them, awakened far off by others ! When the Château Clock last struck, they two were pacing languid, with poised musketoes, anxious mainly that the next hour would strike It has struck, to them inaudible Their trunks lie mangled their heads parade, ' on pikes twelve feet long ' through the streets of Versailles, and shall, about noon, reach the Barriers of Paris,—a too ghastly contradiction to the large comfortable Placards that have been posted there !

The other captive Bodyguard is still circling the corpse of Jérôme, amid Indian war whooping, bloody Tilebeard, with tucked sleeves brandishing his bloody axe, when Gondran and the Grenadiers come in sight. ' Comrades, will you see a man massacred in cold blood ? '—' Off, butchers ! ' answer they, and the poor Bodyguard is free Busy runs Gondran busy run Guards and Captains, scouring all corridors, dispersing Rascality and Robbery, sweeping the Palace clear The mangled carnage is removed, Jérôme's body to the Town hall, for inquest the fire of Insurrection gets damped, more and more, into measurable, manageable heat

Transcendent things of all sorts as in the general outburst of multitudinous Passion, are huddled together, the ludicrous, nay the ridiculous, with the horrible Far over the billowy sea of heads, may be seen Rascality, caprioling on horses from the Royal Stud The Spoilers these, for Patriotism is always infected so with a proportion of mere thieves and scoundrels Gondran snatched their prey from them in the Château, where upon they hurried to the Stables, and took horse there But the generous Diomedes' steeds according to Weber, disdained such scoundrel burden, and, flinging up their royal heels, did soon project most of it, in parabolic curves to a distance, amid peals of laughter ; and were caught. Mounted National Guards secured the rest

Now too is witnessed the touching last flicker of Etiquette, which

THE GALLIC (WEATHER) COCK, THE THREE ESTATES, AND THE ONCOMING STORM.

which sinks not here, in the Cimmerian World-wreckage, without a sign ; as the house-cricket might still chirp in the pealing of a Trump of Doom. 'Monsieur,' said some Master of Ceremonies (one hopes it might be De Brézé), as Lafayette, in these fearful moments, was rushing towards the inner Royal Apartments. 'Monsieur, le Roi vous accorde les grandes entrées, Monsieur, the King grants you the Grand Entries,'—not finding it convenient to refuse them !¹

CHAP. I
Oct. 6, 17

CHAPTER XI

FROM VERSAILLES

HOWEVER, the Paris National Guard, wholly under arms, has cleared the Palace, and even occupies the nearer external spaces ; extruding miscellaneous Patriotism, for most part, into the Grand Court, or even into the Forecourt.

The Bodyguards, you can observe, have now of a verity 'hoisted the National Coekade' : for they step forward to the windows or balconies, hat aloft in hand, on each hat a huge tricolor ; and fling over their bandoleers in sign of surrender ; and shout Vive la Nation. To which how can the generous heart respond but with, Vive le Roi ; vivent les Gardes-du-Corps ? His Majesty himself has appeared with Lafayette on the balcony, and again appears : Vive le Roi greets him from all throats ; but also from some one throat is heard, 'Le Roi à Paris, The King to Paris !'

Her Majesty too, on demand, shows herself, though there is peril in it : she steps out on the balcony, with her little boy and girl. 'No children, Point d'enfans !' cry the voices. She gently pushes back her children ; and stands alone, her hands serenely crossed on her breast : 'Should I die,' she had said, 'I will do it.' Such serenity of heroism has its effect. Lafayette, with ready wit, in his highflown chivalrous way, takes that fair queenly hand, and, reverently kneeling, kisses it : thereupon the people do shout Vive la Reine. Nevertheless, poor Weber 'saw' (or even thought he saw ; for hardly the third

¹ Toulangeon, i. App. 120.

BOOK VII part of poor Weber's experiences, in such hysterical days, Oct 6, 1789 will stand scrutiny) 'one of these brigands level his musket at her Majesty,'—with or without intention to shoot ; for another of the brigands 'angrily struck it down.'

MARIE ANTOINETTE.

So that all, and the Queen herself, may the very Captain of the Bodyguards, have grown National! The very Captain of the Bodyguards steps out now with Lafayette. On the hat of the repentant man is an enormous tricolor; large as a soup-platter or sunflower; visible to the utmost Forecourt. He takes the National Oath with a loud voice, elevating his hat; at which sight all the army raise their bonnets on their bayonets, with shouts. Sweet is reconciliation to the heart of man. Lafayette has sworn Flandre; he swears the remaining Bodyguards, down in the Marble Court; the people clasp them in their arms:—O my brothers, why would ye force us to slay you? Behold, there is joy over you, as over returning prodigal sons!—The poor Bodyguards, now National and tricolor, exchange bonnets, exchange arms; there shall be peace and fraternity. And still 'Vive le Roi'; and also 'Le Roi à Paris,' not now from one throat, but from all throats as one, for it is the heart's wish of all mortals.

Yes, The King to Paris: what else? Ministers may consult, and National Deputies wag their heads: but there is now no other possibility. You have forced him to go willingly. 'At one o'clock,' Lafayette gives audible assurance to that purpose; and universal Insurrection, with immeasurable shout, and a discharge of all the fire-arms, clear and rusty, great and small, that it has, returns him acceptance. What a sound; heard for leagues; a doom-peal!—That sound too rolls away; into the Silence of Ages. And the Château of Versailles stands ever since vacant, hushed-still; its spacious Courts grassgrown, responsive to the hoe of the weeder. Times and generations roll on, in their confused Gulf-current; and buildings, like builders, have their destiny.

Till one o'clock, then, there will be three parties, National Assembly, National Rascality, National Royalty, all busy enough. Rascality rejoices; women trim themselves with tricolor. Nay motherly Paris has sent her Avengers sufficient 'cartloads of loaves'; which are shouted over, which are gratefully consumed. The Avengers, in return, are searching for grain-stores; loading them in fifty wagons; that so a National King, probable harbinger of all blessings, may be the evident bringer of plenty, for one.

And thus has Sansculottism made prisoner its King; re- voking

BOOK VII
Oct. 6, 1789

Wooden Punch emerges not, with his domestic sorrows, into the light of day, unless the wire be pulled—how can human mobs? Was it not D Orléans, then, and Lacroix, Marquis Sillery, Mirabeau and the sons of confusion, hoping to drive the King to Metz, and gather the spoil? Nay was it not, quite contrariwise, the Ciel de Bœuf, Bodyguard Colonel de Guiche, Minister Saint Priest and high flying Loyalists; hoping also to drive him to Metz, and try it by the sword of civil war? Good Marquis Toulangeon, the Historian and Deputy, feels constrained to admit that it was both!

Alas, my Friends, credulous incredulity is a strange matter. But when a whole Nation is smitten with Suspicion, and sees a dramatic miracle in the very operation of the gastric juices, what help is there? Such Nation is already a mere hypochondriac bundle of diseases; as good as changed into glass, atrabiliar, decadent, and will suffer crises. Is not Suspicion itself the one thing to be suspected, as Montaigne feared only fear?

Now, however, the short hour has struck. His Majesty is in his carriage, with his Queen, sister Elizabeth and two royal children. Not for another hour can the infinite Procession get marshalled and under way. The weather is dim drizzling, the mind confused, the noise great.

Processional marches not a few our world has seen, Roman triumphs and ovations, Cabine cymbal beatings, Royal progresses, Irish funerals; but thus of the French Monarchy, marching to its bed remained to be seen. Miles long, and of breadth losing itself in vagueness, for all the neighbouring country crowds to see. Slow, stagnating along, like shoreless Lake, yet with a noise like Niagara, like Babel and Bedlam. A splashing and a tramping, a hurrahing, uproaring, musket-volleying;—the truest segment of Chaos seen in these latter Ages! Till slowly it disembody itself, in the thickening dusk, into expectant Paris, through a double row of faces all the way from Passy to the Hôtel de-Ville.

Consider this Vanguard of National troops; with trains of artillery, of pikemen and pikewomen, mounted on cannons, on carts, hackney-coaches, or on foot;—tripudiating, in tricolor ribbons from head to heel; loaves stuck on the points of bayonets, green boughs stuck in gun-burels.¹ Next, as main- (CHAP. XI march, 'fifty cart-loads of corn,' which have been lent, for Oct. 6, 1789) peace, from the stores of Versailles. Behind which follow stragglers of the Garde-du-Corps; all humiliated, in Grenadier bonnets. Close on these comes the Royal Carriage; come Royal Carriages: for there are a Hundred National Deputies too, among whom sits Mirabeau,—his remarks not given. Then finally, pellmell, as rear-guard, Flandre, Swiss, Hundred Swiss, other Body-guards, Brigands, who-soever cannot get before.

Between and among all which masses flows without limit Saint-Antoine and the Menadic Cohort. Menadic especially about the Royal Carriage; tripudiating there, covered with tricolor; singing 'allusive songs'; pointing with one hand to the Royal Carriage, which the allusions hit, and pointing to the Provision-wagons with the other hand, and these words:
'Courage, Friends! We shall not want bread now; we are bringing you the Baker, the Bakeress and Baker's-boy (le Boulangier, la Boulangère et le petit Mitron).'²

The wet day draggles the tricolor, but the joy is unextinguishable. Is not all well now? 'Ah, Madame, notre bonne Reine,' said some of these Strong-women some days hence,
'Ah, Madame, our good Queen, don't be a traitor any more (ne soyez plus traître), and we will all love you!' Poor Weber went splashing along, close by the Royal Carriage, with the tear in his eye: 'their Majesties did me the honour,' or I thought they did it, 'to testify, from time to time, by shrugging of the shoulders, by looks directed to Heaven, the emotions they felt.' Thus, like frail cockle, floats the royal Life-boat, helmless, on black deluges of Reality.

Mercier, in his loose way, estimates the Procession and assistants at two hundred thousand. He says it was one boundless inarticulate Haha;—transcendent World-Laughter; comparable to the Saturnalia of the Ancients. Why not?
Here too, as we said, is Human Nature once more human;
shudder at it who-so is of shuddering humour; yet, behold, it is human. It has 'swallowed all formulas'; it tripudiates even so. For which reason they that collect Vases and Antiques, with figures of Dancing Bacchantes 'in wild and all-but impossible positions,' may look with some interest on it.

¹ Mercier, Nouvelles Paris, iii. 21.

² Toulougeon, i. 134-61; Deux Arts, iii. c. 9; etc. etc.

BOOK VII
 CH. 6, 1789 Thus, however, has the slow moving Chaos, or modern Saturnalia of the Ancients, reached the Barrier; and must halt, to be harangued by Mayor Bailly. Thereafter it has to lumber along, between the double row of faces, in the transeendoot heaven lashing Haha; two hours longer, towards the Hôtel de-Ville. Then again to be harangued there, by several persons; by Moreau de Saint Méry among others, Moreau of the Three thousand orders, now National Deputy for St Domingo. To all which poor Louis, 'who seemed to experience a slight emotion' on entering this Townhall, can answer only that he 'comes with pleasure, with confidence among his people.' Mayor Bailly, in reporting it, forgets 'confidence': and the poor Queen says eagerly. 'Add, with confidence'—'Messieurs,' rejoins Mayor Bailly, 'you are happier than if I had not forgotten.'

Finally, the King is shown on an upper balcony, by torch light, with a huge tricolor in his hat: 'and all the people,' says Weber, 'grasped one another's hand', thinking now surely the New Era was born. Hardly till eleven at night can Royalty get to its vacant, long deserted Palace of the Tuileries; to lodge there, somewhat in strolling player fashion. It is Tuesday the 6th of October 1789

Poor Louis has Two other Paris Processions to make. one ludicrous ignominious like this; the other not ludicrous nor ignominious, but serious, nay sublime.

II

THE CONSTITUTION

Flauern seh' ich gehurtz und Flauern seh' ich erliget, Hier Gefangene, dort auch der Gefangenen viel.
Ist vielleicht nur die Welt ein großer Kerker? Und frei ist Wohl der Lelle, der sich Ketten zu Ketten erhebt?
Greife

THE CONSTITUTION

BOOK FIRST

THE FEAST OF PIKES

CHAPTER I

IN THE TUILERIES

THE victim having once got his stroke-of-grace, the catastrophe can be considered as almost come. There is small interest now in watching his long low moans: notable only are his sharper agonies, what convulsive struggles he may make to cast the torture off from him; and then finally the last departure of life itself, and how he lies extinct and ended, either wrapt like Cæsar in decorous mantle-folds, or unseemly sunk together, like one that had not the force even to die.

Was French Royalty, when wrenched forth from its tapestries in that fashion, on that Sixth of October 1789, such a victim? Universal France, and Royal Proclamation to all the Provinces, answers anxiously, No. Nevertheless one may fear the worst. Royalty was beforehand so decrepit, moribund, there is little life in it to heal an injury. How much of its strength, which was of the imagination merely, has fled; Rascality having looked plainly in the King's face, and not died! When the assembled crows can pluck up their scarecrow, and say to it, Here shalt thou stand and not there; and can treat with it, and make it, from an infinite, a quite finite Constitutional scarecrow,—what is to be looked for? Not in the finite Constitutional scarecrow, but in what still unmeasured, infinite-seeming force may rally round it, is there thenceforth any hope. For it is most true that all available Authority is mystic in its conditions, and comes 'by the grace of God.'

BOOK I
Oct. 1789

Cheerfuller than watching the death struggles of Royalism will it be to watch the growth and gambollings of Sansculottism, for, in human things, especially in human society, all death is but a death birth thus if the sceptre is departing from Louis, it is only that, in other forms, other sceptres, were it even pike sceptres, may bear sway In a prurient element, rich with nutritive influences, we shall find that Sansculottism grows lustily, and even frisks in not ungraceful sport as indeed most young creatures are sportful, nay, may it not be noted further, that as the grown cat, and cat species generally, is the cruellest thing known, so the merriest is precisely the kitten, or growing cat ?

But fancy the Royal Family risen from its truckle-beds on the morrow of that mad day · fancy the Municipal inquiry, ‘How would your Majesty please to lodge ?’—and then that the King’s rough answer, ‘Each may lodge as he can, I am well enough’ is congéed and howed away, in expressive grins, by the Townhall Functionaries, with obsequious upholsterers at their back ; and how the Chateau of the Tuileries is repainted, regarnished into a golden Royal Residence, and Lafayette with his blue National Guards lies encompassing it, as blue Neptune (in the language of poets) does an island, wooingly Thither may the wrecks of rehabilitated Loyalty gather, if it will become Constitutional, for Constitutionalism thinks no evil, Sansculottism itself rejoices in the King’s countenance The rubbish of a Menadic Insurrection, as in this ever kindly world all rubbish can and must be, is swept aside, and so again, on clear arena, under new conditions, with something even of a new stateliness, we begin a new course of action

Arthur Young has witnessed the strangest scene Majesty walking unattended in the Tuileries Gardens, and miscellaneous tricolor crowds, who cheer it, and reverently make way for it the very Queen commands at lowest respectful silence regretful avoidance¹ Simple ducks, in those royal waters, quackle for crumbs from young royal fingers the little Dauphin has a little railed garden, where he is seen delving, with ruddy cheeks and flaxen curled hair ; also a little hutch to put his tools in, and screen himself against showers What peaceable simplicity! Is it peace of a Father restored to his children? Or of a Taskmaster who has lost his whip? Lafayette and the Municipality and universal Constitutionalism assert the former, and do what is in them to realise it. Such Patriotism as snarls dangerously and shows teeth, Patrollotism shall suppress; or far better, Royalty shall soothe down the angry hair of it, by gentle pattings; and, most effectual of all, by fuller diet. Yes, not only shall Paris be fed, but the King's hand be seen in that work. The household goods of the Poor shall, up to a certain amount, by royal bounty, be disengaged from pawn, and that insatiable Mont de Piété shall disgorge; rides in the city with their Vive-le-Roi need not fail: and so, by substance and show, shall Royalty, if man's art can popularise it, be popularised.¹

¹ Arthur Young’s Travels, I. 264-80.

Or, alas, is it neither restored Father nor diswhipped Taskmaster that walks there; but an anomalous complex of both these, and of innumerable other heterogeneities: reducible to no rubric, if not to this newly-devised one: King Louis Restorer of French Liberty? Man indeed, and King Louis like other men, lives in this world to make rule out of the ruleless; by his living energy, he shall force the absurd itself to become less absurd. But then if there be no living energy; living passivity only? King Serpent, hurled into its unexpected watery dominion, did at least bite, and assert credibly that he was there: but as for the poor King Log, tumbled hither and thither as thousand-fold chance and other will than his might direct, how happy for him that he was indeed wooden; and, doing nothing, could also see and suffer nothing! It is a distracted business.

For his French Majesty, meanwhile, one of the worst things is, that he can get no hunting. Alas, no hunting henceforth; only a fatal being-hunted! Scarcely, in the next June weeks, shall he taste again the joys of the game-destroyer; in next June, and never more. He sends for his smith-tools; gives, in the course of the day, official or ceremonial business being ended, a 'few strokes of the file, quelques coups de lime.'² Innocent brother mortal, why wert thou not an obscure substantial maker of locks; but doomed in that other far-seen craft, to be

¹ Deux Amis, iii. c. 10.

² Le Château des Tuileries, ou récit etc., par Roussel (in Hist. Parl. vi. 195-219).

BOOK I
Oct. 1789

a maker only of world follies, unrealities, things self-destructive, which no mortal hammering could rivet into coherence!

Poor Louis is not without insight, nor even without the elements of will, some sharpness of temper, spurning at times from a stagnating character. If harmless inertness could save him, it were well, but he will slumber and painfully dream, and to do aught is not given him. Royalist Antiquarians still show the rooms where Majesty and suite, in these extraordinary circumstances, had their lodging. Here sat the Queen, reading,—for she had her library brought hither though the King refused his, taking vehement counsel of the vehement uncounselled, sorrowing over altered times, yet with sure hope of better. In her young rosy Boy has she not the living emblem of hope? It is a murky, working sky yet with golden gleams—of dawn, or of deeper meteoric night! Here again this chamber, on the other side of the main entrance, was the King's—here his Majesty breakfasted and did official work, here daily after breakfast he received the Queen sometimes in pathetic friendliness, sometimes in human sulkiness, for flesh is weak, and when questioned about business, would answer 'Madame, your business is with the children.' Nay, Sire, were it not better you your Majesty's self took the children? So asks impartial History, scornful that the thicker vessel was not also the stronger, pity-struck for the porcelain clay of humanity rather than for the tile-clay—though indeed both were broken!

So however, in this Medicean Tuileries shall the French King and Queen now sit for one and forty months, and see a wild fermenting France work out its own destiny and theirs. Months bleak, ungenial, of rapid vicissitude, yet with a mild pale splendour, here and there as of an April that were leading to leafiest Summer, as of an October that led only to everlasting Frost. Medicean Tuileries how changed since it was a peaceful Tile field! Or is the ground itself fate-stricken accursed, an Atreus' Palace, for that Louvre window is still nigh, out of which a Capet, whipt of the Furies, fired his signal of the Saint Bartholomew! Dark is the way of the Eternal as mirrored in this world of Time. God's way is in the sea and His path in the great deep.

CHAPTER II

IN THE SALLE DE MANÈGE

To believing Patriots, however, it is now clear that the Constitution will march, marcher,—had it once legs, to stand on. Quick, then, ye Patriots, bestir yourselves, and make it; shape legs for it! In the Archevêché, or Archbishop's Palace, his Grace himself having fled; and afterwards in the Riding-hall, named Manège, close on the Tuileries: there does a National Assembly apply itself to the miraculous work. Successfully, had there been any heaven-sealing Prometheus among them; not successfully, since there was none! There, in noisy debate, for the sessions are occasionally 'scandalous,' and as many as three speakers have been seen in the Tribune at once,—let us continue to fancy it wearing the slow months.

Tough, dogmatic, long of wind is Abbé Maury; Ciceronian pathetic is Cazalès. Keen-trenchant, on the other side, glitters a young Barnave; abhorrent of sophistry; shearing, like keen Damaseus sabre, all sophistry asunder,—reckless what else he shear with it. Simple seemest thou, O solid Dutch-built Pétion; if solid, surely dull. Nor lifegiving is that tone of thine, livelier polemical Rabaut. With ineffable serenity sniffs great Sieyès, aloft, alone; his Constitution ye may babble over, ye may mar, but can by no possibility mend: is not Polity a science he has exhausted? Cool, slow, two military Lameths are visible, with their quality sneer, or demi-sneer; they shall gallantly refund their Mother's Pension, when the Red Book is produced; gallantly be wounded in duels. A Marquis Toulangeon, whose Pen we yet thank, sits there; in stoical meditative humour, oftenest silent, accepts what Destiny will send. Thouret and Parliamentary Duport produce mountains of Reformed Law; liberal, Anglomaniæ; available and unavailable. Mortals rise and fall. Shall goose Gobel, for example,—or Göbel, for he is of Strasburg German breed,—be a Constitutional Archbishop?

Alone of all men there, Mirabeau may begin to discern clearly whither all this is tending. Patriotism, accordingly, regrets that his zeal seems to be getting cool. In that famed Pentecost-Night

BOOK I
Oct.-Nov.
1789

Night of the Fourth of August, when new Faith rose suddenly into miraculous fire, and old Feudality was burnt up, men remarked that Mirabeau took no hand in it; that, in fact, he luckily happened to be absent. But did he not defend the Veto, nay Veto Absolu; and tell vehement Barnave that six hundred irresponsible senators would make of all tyrannies

SIEYÈS.

the insupportablest? Again, how anxious was he that the King's Ministers should have seat and voice in the National Assembly;—doubtless with an eye to being Minister himself! Whereupon the National Assembly decides, what is very momentous, that no Deputy shall be Minister; he, in his haughty stormful manner, advising us to make it, 'no Deputy called Mirabeau.'¹ A man of perhaps inveterate Feudalisms:

¹ Affaireur, Nos. 65, 86 (20th September, 7th November, 1789).

of stratagems ; too often visible leanings towards the Royalist side : a man suspect ; whom Patriotism will unmask ! Thus, in these June days, when the question, Who shall have right to declare war ? comes on, you hear hoarse Hawkers sound dolcely through the streets, 'Grand Treason of Count Mirabeau, price only one sou' ;—because he pleads that it shall be not the Assembly, but the King ! Pleads ; nay prevails : for in spite of the hoarse Hawkers, and an endless Populace raised by them to the pitch even of 'Lanterne,' he mounts the Tribune next day ; grim-resolute ; murmuring aside to his friends that speak of danger : 'I know it : I must come hence either in triumph or else torn in fragments' : and it was in triumph that he came.

A man stout of heart ; whose popularity is not of the populace 'pas populacière' ; whom no clamour of unwashed mobs without doors, or of washed mobs within, can scare from his way ! Dumont remembers hearing him deliver a Report on Mar-silles ; 'every word was interrupted on the part of the Côté Droit by abusive epithets ; calumniator, liar, assassin, scoundrel (scélérat) : Mirabeau pauses a moment, and, in a honeyed tone, addressing the most furious, says : "I wait, Messieurs, till these amenities be exhausted."'¹ A man enigmatic, difficult to unmask ! For example, whence comes his money ? Can the profit of a Newspaper, sorely eaten into by Dame Le Jay ; can this, and the eighteen francs a day your National Deputy has, be supposed equal to this expenditure ? House in the Chaussée d'Antin ; Country-house at Argenteuil ; splendours, sumptuosities, orgies ;—living as if he had a mint ! All saloons, barred against Adventurer Mirabeau, are flung wide-open to King Mirabeau, the cynosure of Europe, whom female France flutters to behold,—though the Man Mirabeau is one and the same. As for money, one may conjecture that Royalism furnishes it ; which if Royalism do, will not the same be welcome, as money always is to him ?

'Sold,' whatever Patriotism thinks, he cannot readily be : the spiritual fire which is in that man ; which shining through such confusions is nevertheless Conviction, and makes him strong, and without which he had no strength,—is not buyable nor saleable ; in such transference of barter, it would vanish and not be. Perhaps 'paid and not sold, payé pas

¹ Dumont, Souvenirs, p. 278.

BOOK I
Dec. 1789

rendu ' as poor Ruvarel, in the unhappier converse way, calls himself 'sold and not paid'! A man travelling, comet like, in splendour and aehnosity, his wild way, whom telescopic Patriotism may long watch, hut, without higher mathematics, will not make out. A questionable, most hlamable man, yet to us the far notablist of all With rich munificence, as we oftea say, in a most hlinkard, hespectacled, logie chopping generation, Nature has gifted this man with an eye Welcome is his word, there where he speaks and works, and growing ever welcomer, for it alone goes to the heart of the husiness logical cobwehbery shriaks itself together, and thou seest a thing, bow it is, how it may be worked with Unhappily our National Assembly has much to do a France to regenerate, and France is short of so many requisites, short even of cash These same Finances give trouble enough, no coking of the Deficit, which gapes ever, Give, give! To appease the Deficit we venture on a hazardous step sale of the Clergy's Lands and superfluous Edifices, most bozardous Nay, given the sale, who is to buy them, ready money having fled? Wherefore, on the 10th day of December, a paper money of 'Assignats,' of Bonds secured, or assigned, on that Clerico National Property, and unquestionable nt least in pay ment of that,—is decreed the first of a long series of like financial performances, which shall astonish mankind So that now, while old rags last, there shall be no lack of circulating medium whether of commodities to circulate thereon, is another question But, after all does not this Assignat busi ness speak volumes for modern science? Bankruptcy, we may say, was come, as the end of all Delusions needs must come yet how gently, in softening diffusion, in mild succession, was it herehy made to fall,—like no all destroying avalanche, like gentle showers of a powdery impalpable snow, shower after shower, till all was indeed buried, and yet little was destroyed that could not be replaced, be dispensed with! To such length has modern machinery reached Bankruptcy, we said, was great, hut indeed Money itself is a standing miracle

On the whole, it is a matter of endless difficulty, that of the Clergy Clerical property may be made the Nation's, and the Clergy hired servants of the State, hut if so, is it not an altered Church? Adjustment enough of the most confused sort, has become unavoidable Old landmarks, in any sense, avail avail not in a new France. Nay literally, the very Ground is new divided; your old particoloured Provinces become new uniform Departments Eighty-three in number;—whereby, as in some sudden shifting of the Earth's axis, no mortal knows his new latitude at once. The Twelve old Parlements too, what is to be done with them? The old Parlements are declared to be all 'in permanent vacation,'—till once the new equal-justice, of Departmental Courts, National Appeal-Court, of elective Justices, Justices of Peace, and other Thotfret-and-Duport apparatus be got ready. They have to sit there, these old Parlements, uneasily waiting; as it were, with the rope round their neck; crying as they can, Is there none to deliver us? But happily the answer being, None, none, they are a manageable class, these Parlements. They can be bullied, even, into silence; the Paris Parlement, wiser than most, has never whimpered. They will and must sit there, in such vacation as is fit; their Chamber of Vacation distributes in the interim what little justice is going. With the rope round their neck, their destiny may be succinct! On the 13th of November 1790, Mayor Bailly shall walk to the Palais de Justice, few even heeding him; and with municipal seal-stamp and a little hot wax, seal up the Parliamentary Paper-rooms,—and the dread Parlement of Paris pass away, into Chaos, gently as does a Dream! So shall the Parlements perish, succinctly; and innumerable eyes be dry.

Not so the Clergy. For, granting even that Religion were dead; that it had died, half-centuries ago, with unutterable Dubois; or emigrated lately to Alsace, with Necklace-Cardinal Rohan; or that it now walked as goblin revenant, with Bishop Talleyrand of Autun; yet does not the Shadow of Religion, the Cant of Religion, still linger? The Clergy have means and material: means, of number, organisation, social weight; a material, at lowest, of public ignorance, known to be the mother of devotion. Nay withal, is it incredible that there might, in simple hearts, latent here and there like gold-grains in the mud-beach, still dwell some real Faith in God, of so singular and tenacious a sort that even a Maury or a Talleyrand could still be the symbol for it?—Enough, the Clergy has strength, the Clergy has craft and indignation. It is a most fatal business this of the Clergy. A weltering hydra-coil, which the National Assembly has stirred up about its ears; hissing, stinging; which bristling with no crop but that of Sansculottic steel these were tolerably didactic lessons, but them they have not taught. There are still men, of whom it was of old written, Bray them in a mortar! Or, in milder language, They have wedded their delusions fire nor steel, nor any sharpness of Experience, shall sever the bond, till death do us part! On such may the Heavens have mercy, for the Earth, with her rigorous Necessity, will have none

BOOK I
1789-90

Admit, at the same time, that it was most natural Man lives by hope Pandora, when her box of gods' gifts flew all out, and became gods'-curses, still retained Hope How shall an irrational mortal, when his highplace is never so evidently pulled down, and he, being irrational, is left resourceless, part with the belief that it will be rebuilt? It would make all so straight again; it seems so unspeakably desirable; so reasonable,—would you but look at it aright! For, must not the thing which was continue to be, or else the solid World dissolve? Yes, persist, O infatuated Sansculottes of France! Revolt against constituted Authorities, hunt out your rightful Seigneurs who at bottom so loved you, and readily shed their blood for you,—in country's battles as at Rosshach and elsewhere; and, even in preserving game, were preserving you, could ye but have understood it hunt them out, as if they were wild wolves, set fire to their Châteaux and Chartiers as to wolf dens, and what then? Why, then turn every man his hand against his fellow! In confusion, famine, desolation, regret the days that are gone, rueful recall them, recall us with them To repentant prayers we will not be deaf

So, with dimmer or clearer consciousness, must the Right Side reason and act An inevitable position perhaps, but a most false one for them Evil, be thou our good this henceforth must virtually be their prayer The fiercer the effervescence grows, the sooner will it pass, for, after all, it is but some mad effervescence, the World is solid, and cannot dissolve

For the rest, if they have any positive industry, it is that of plots, and backstairs conclaves Plots which cannot be executed, which are mostly theoretic on their part,—for which nevertheless this and the other practical Sieur Augeard, Sieur Maillebois, Sieur Bonne Savardin, gets into trouble, gets imprisoned, and escapes with difficulty Nay there is a poor practical practical Chevalier Favras, who, not without some passing reflex on Monsieur himself, gets hanged for them, amid loud uproar of the world. Poor Favras, he keeps dictating his last will 'at thé Hôtel-de-Ville, through the whole remainder of the day,' a weary February day; offers to reveal secrets, if they will save him; handsomely declines since they will not; then dies, in the flare of torchlight, with politest composure; remarking, rather than exclaiming, with outspread hands: 'People, I die innocent; pray for me.'¹ Poor Favras,—type of so much that has prowled indefatigable over France, in days now ending; and, in freer field, might have earned instead of prowling,—to thee it is no theory!

PORCELAIN AND TILECLAY.
('both were broken.')

In the Senate-house again, the attitude of the Right Side is that of calm unbelief. Let an august National Assembly make a Fourth-of-August Abolition of Feudality; declare the Clergy State-servants, who shall have wages; vote Suspensive Votos, new Law-Courts; vote or decree what contested thing it will; have it responded to from the four corners of France, nay get King's Sanction, and what other Acceptance were conceivable,—the Right Side, as we find, persists, with imperturbablest tenacity, in considering, and ever and anon shows that it still considers, all these so-called Decrees as mere temporary whims, which indeed stand on paper, but in practice and fact are not, and cannot be. Figure the brass head of an Abbé Maury flooding forth jesuitic eloquence in this strain; dusky D'Espréménil, Barrel Mirabeau (probably in liquor), and enough of others, cheering him from the Right; and, for example, with what visage a seagreen Robespierre eyes him from the Left. And how Sieyès ineffably sniffs on him, or does not deign to sniff; and how the Galleries groan in spirit, or bark rabid on him; so that to escape the Lanterne, on stepping forth, he needs presence of mind, and a pair of pistols in his girdle! For he is one of the toughest of men.

Here indeed becomes notable one great difference between our two kinds of civil war; between the modern lingual or Parliamentary-logical kind, and the ancient or manual kind in the steel battlefield;—much to the disadvantage of the former. In the manual kind, where you front your foe with drawn weapon, one right stroke is final; for, physically speaking, when the brains are out the man does honestly die, and trouble

¹ See Deux Amis, iv. c. 14, 7; Hist. Parl. vi. 384.

BOOK I
Oct 21, 1789

But, looking away now from these precincts of the Tuileries, where Constitutional Royalty, let Lafayette water it as he will, languishes too like a cut branch, and august Senators are perhaps at bottom only perfecting their 'theory of defective verbs'—how does the young Reality, young Sansculottism thrive? The attentive observer can answer. It thrives bravely, putting forth new buds, expanding the old buds into leaves, into boughs. Is not French Existence, as before, most pruned, all loosened, most nutrient for it? Sansculottism has the property of growing by what other things die of—by agitation, contention, disarrangement, nay in a word by what is the symbol and fruit of all these—Hunger.

In such a France as this, Hunger, as we have remarked can hardly fail. The Provinces, the Southern Cities feel it in their turn, and what it brings—Exasperation, preternatural Suspicion. In Paris some halcyon days of abundance followed the Menadic Insurrection, with its Versailles grain-carts and recovered Restorer of Liberty, but they could not continue. The month is still October, when famishing Saint Antoine, in a moment of passion, seizes a poor Baker, innocent 'François the Baker', and hangs him, in Constantinople wise,—but even this, singular as it may seem, does not cheapen bread! Too clear it is, no Royal bounty, no Municipal dexterity can adequately feed a Bastille-destroying Paris. Wherefore on view of the hanged Baker, Constitutionalism in sorrow and anger demands 'Loi Martiale,' a kind of Riot Act,—and indeed gets it most readily, almost before the sun goes down.

This is that famed Martial Law, with its Red Flag its 'Drapeau Rouge,' in virtue of which Mayor Bailly, or any Mayor, has but henceforth to hang out that new Oriflamme of his, then to read or mumble something about the King's peace, and, after certain pauses, serve any undispersing Assemblage with musket shot, or whatever shot will disperse it. A decisive Law, and most just on one proviso—that all Patrollotism be of God and all mob-assembling be of the Devil,—otherwise not so just. Mayor Bailly, be unwilling to use it! Hang not out that new Oriflamme, flame not of gold but of the want of gold! The thrice-blessed Revolution is done, thou thinkest? If so it will be well with thee.

But now let no mortal say henceforth that an august National Assembly wants riot : all it ever wanted was riot enough to CHAP. II balance Court-plotting ; all it now wants, of Heaven or of Oct. 21, 1789 Earth, is to get its theory of defective verbs perfected.

CHAPTER III

THE MUSTER

WITH Famine and a Constitutional theory of defective verbs going on, all other excitement is conceivable. A universal shaking and sifting of French Existence this is : in the course of which, for one thing, what a multitude of low-lying figures are sifted to the top, and set busily to work there !

Dogleech Marat, now far-seen as Simon Stylites, we already know ; him and others, raised aloft. The mere sample these of what is coming, of what continues coming, upwards from the realm of Night ! —Chaumette, by and by Anaxagoras Chaumette, one already describes : mellifluous in street-groups ; not now a seaboy on the high and giddy mast : a mellifluous tribune of the common people, with long curling locks, on bournestone of the thoroughfares ; able sub-editor too ; who shall rise,—to the very gallows. Clerk Tallien, he also is become sub-editor ; shall become able-editor ; and more. Bibliopolic Momoro, Typographic Prudhomme see new trades opening. Collot d'Herbois, tearing a passion to rags, pauses on the Thespian boards ; listens, with that black bushy head, to the sound of the world's drama : shall the Mimetic become Real ? Did ye hiss him, O men of Lyons ?¹ Better had ye clapped !

CHAUMETTE.

BOOK I 1789-90

Happy now, indeed, for all manner of mimetic, half-original men ! Tumid blustering, with more or less of sincerity, which need not be entirely sincere, yet the sincerer the better, is like to go far. Shall we say, the Revolution-element works itself rarer and rarer, so that only lighter and lighter bodies will float in it, till at last the mere blown bladder is your only swimmer ? Limitation of mind, then vehemence, promptitude, nudacity shall all be available, to which add only these two : cunning and good lungs. Good fortune must be presupposed. Accordingly, of all classes the rising one, we observe, is now the Attorney class : witness Bazires, Carriers, Fouquier Tinville, Basoche-Captain Bourbons : more than enough. Such figure shall Night, from her wonder-bearing bosom, emit ; swarm after swarm. Of another deeper and deeper swarm, not yet dawned on the astonished eye ; of pilfering Candle-snuffers, Thief valets, disrobed Capuchins, and so many Héberts, Henriots, Ronsins, Rossignols, let us, as long as possible, forbear speaking.

Thus, over France, all stirs that has what the Physiologists call irritability in it : how much more all wherein irritability has perfected itself into vitality, into actual vision, and force that can will ! All stirs, and if not in Paris, flows thither. Great and greater waxes President Danton in his Cordeliers Section, his rhetorical tropes are all 'gigantic' : energy flashes from his black brows, menaces in his athletic figure, rolls in the sound of his voice 'reverberating from the domes', this man also, like Mirabeau, has a natural eye, and begins to see whither Constitutionalism is tending, though with a wish so different from Mirabeau's.

Remark, on the other hand, how General Dumouriez has quitted Normandy and the Cherbourg Breakwater, to come—whither we may guess. It is his second or even third trial at Paris, since this New Era began ; but now it is in right earnest, for he has quitted all else. Wiry, elastic, unwearied man ; whose life was but a battle and a march ! No, not a creature of Choiseul's, 'the creature of God and of my sword,'—he fiercely answered in old days. Overfalling Cor sican batteries, in the deadly fire-hail; wriggling invincible from under his horse, at Closterkamp of the Netherlands, though tethered with 'crushed stirrup-iron and nineteen wounds'; tough, minatory, standing at bay, as forlorn hope, on the skirts of Poland; intriguing, battling in cabinet and field; roaming far out, obscure, as King's spial, or sitting sealed up, enchanted in Bastille; fencing, pamphleteering, scheming and struggling from the very birth of him,¹—the man has come thus far. How repressed, how irrepressible! Like some incarnate spirit in prison, which indeed he was; hewing on granite walls for deliverance; striking fire-flashes from them. And now has the general earthquake rent his cavern too? Twenty years younger, what might he not have done! But his hair has a shade of gray; his way of thought is all fixed, military. He can grow no further, and the new world is in such growth. We will name him, on the whole, one of Heaven's Swiss; without faith; wanting above all things work, work on any side. Work also is appointed him; and he will do it.

¹ Bazot, Mémorial (Paris 1823), p. 90.

Not from over France only are the unrestful flocking towards Paris; but from all sides of Europe. Where the carcass is, thither will the eagles gather. Think how many a Spanish Guzman, Martinico Fournier named 'Fournier l'Américain,' Engineer Miranda from the very Andes, were flocking or had flocked. Walloon Percyra might boast of the strangest parentage: him, they say, Prince Kaunitz the Diplomatist heedlessly dropped; like ostrich-egg, to be hatched of Chance,—into an ostrich-eater! Jewish or German Freys do business in the great Cesspool of Agio; which Cesspool this Assignat-fiat has quickened, into a Mother of dead dogs. Swiss Clavière could find no Socinian Genevese Colony in Ireland; but he paused, years ago, prophetic, before the Minister's Hôtel at Paris; and said, it was borne on his mind that he one day was to be Minister, and laughed.² Swiss Pache, on the other hand, sits sleekheaded, frugal; the wonder of his own alley, and even of neighbouring ones, for humility of mind, and a thought deeper than most men's: sit there, Tartuffe, till wanted! Ye Italian Dufournys, Flemish Prolys, flit hither all ye bipeds

¹ Dumouriez, Mémoires, i. 28, etc.

² Dumont, Souvenirs sur Mirabeau, p. 399.

BOOK I 1789-90

of prey! Come whosoever head is hot, thou of mind ungoverned, he it chaos as of undevelopment or chaos as of ruin, the man who cannot get known, the man who is too well known;
if thou have any vendible faculty, nay if thou have but edacity and loquacity, come! They come, with bot unutterabilities in their heart, as Pilgrims towards a miraculous shrine. Nay how many come as vacant Strollers, aimless, of whom Europe is full, merely towards something! For benighted fowls, whence you beat their bushes, rush towards any light. Thus Frederick Baron Trench too is here, mazed, purblind, from the cells of Magdeburg, Minotauric cells, and his Ariadne lost! Singular to say, Trench, in these years, sells wine, not indeed in bottle, but in wood.

Nor is our England without her missionaries. She has her life saving Needham,¹ to whom was solemnly presented a 'civic sword,'—long since rusted into nothingness. Her Paine rebellious Staymaker, unkempt; who feels that he,
a single Needleman, did, by his Common Sense Pamphlet, free America,—that he can and will free all this World; perhaps even the other Price Stanhope Constitutional Association sends over to congratulate,² welcomed by National Assembly, though they are but a London Club, whom Burke and Toryism eye askance.

On thee too, for country's sake, O Chevalier John Paul, be a word spent, or misspent! In faded naval uniform, Paul Jones lingers visible here, like a wineskin from which the wine is all drawn. Like the ghost of himself! Low is his oace loud bruit; scarcely audible, save, with extreme tedium, in ministerial ante-chambers, in this or the other charitable dining room, mindful of the past. What changes; culmi-nations and declinings! Not now, poor Paul, thou lookest wistful over the Solway brine, by the foot of native Criffel into blue mountainous Cumberland, into blue infinitude; environed with thrift, with humble friendliness; thyself, young fool, looting to be aloft from it, or even to be away from it.
Yes, beyond that sapphire Promontory, which men name St

¹ A trustworthy gentleman writes to me three years ago with a feeling which I cannot but respect, that his Father, 'the late Admiral Needham' (not Needham, as the French Journalists give it) is the Englishman meant; and furthermore that the sword is 'not rusted at all,' but still lies with the due memory attached to it in his (the son's) possession at Plymouth, in a chest state. (Note of 1857)

² Monitor, 10 November, 7 December 1789.

Bees, which is not sapphire either, but dull sandstone, when one gets close to it, there is a world. Which world thou too shalt taste of!—From yonder White Haven rise his smoke-clouds; ominous though ineffectual. Proud Forth quakes at his bellying sails; had not the wind suddenly shifted. Flam-borough reapers, homegoing, pause on the hill-side; for what sulphur-cloud is that that defaces the sleek sea: sulphur-cloud spitting streaks of fire? A sea cock-fight it is, and of the hottest; where British Serapis and French-American Bon Homme Richard do lash and throttle each other, in their fashion; and lo the desperate valour has suffocated the deliberate, and Paul Jones too is of the Kings of the Sea!

The Euxine, the Meotian waters felt thee next, and long-skirted Turks, O Paul; and thy fiery soul has wasted itself in thousand contradictions;—to no purpose. For, in far lands, with scarlet Nassau-Siegens, with sinful Imperial Catherines, is not the heart broken, even as at home with the mean? Poor Paul! hunger and dispiritment track thy sinking footsteps: once, or at most twice, in this Revolution-tumult the figure of thee emerges; mute, ghostlike, as ‘with stars dim-twinkling through.’ And then, when the light is gone quite out, a National Legislature grants ‘ceremonial funeral’! As good had been the natural Presbyterian Kirk-bell, and six feet of Scottish earth, among the dust of thy loved ones.—Such world lay beyond the Promontory of St. Bees. Such is the life of sinful mankind here below.

But of all strangers far the notablest for us is Baron Jean Baptiste de Cloutz;—or, dropping baptisms and feudalisms, World-Citizen Anacharsis Cloutz, from Cleves. Him mark, judicious Reader. Thou hast known his Uncle, sharp-sighted, thorough-going Cornelius de Pauw, who mercilessly cuts down cherished illusions; and of the finest antique Spartans will make mere modern cutthroat Mainots.¹ The like stuff is in Anacharsis: hot metal; full of scorix, which should and could have been smelted out, but which will not. He has wandered over this terraqueous Planet; seeking, one may say, the Paradise we lost long ago. He has seen English Burke; has been seen of the Portugal Inquisition; has roamed, and fought, and written; is writing, among other things, ‘Evidences of the Mahometan Religion.⁴ But now, like his Scythian adoptive godfather, he finds himself in the Paris Athens; surely, at last, the haven of his soul. A dashing man, beloved at Patriotic dinner-tables; with gaiety, nay with humour; headlong, trenchant, of free purse; in suitable costume; though what mortal ever more despised costumes? Under all costumes

¹ De Pauw, Recherches sur les Grecs, etc.

BOOK I 1783-90

CLOUTZ.

Anacharsis seeks the man; not Stylites Morat will more freely trample costumes, if they hold no man. This is the faith of Anacharsis: That there is a Paradise discoverable; that all costumes ought to hold men. O Anacharsis, it is a headlong, swift-going faith. Mounted thereon, meseems, thou art bound hastily for the City of Nowhere; and wilt arrive! At best, we may say, arrive in good riding attitude; which indeed is something.

So many new persons and new things have come to occupy this France. Her old Speech and Thought, and Activity which springs from these, are all changing ; fermenting towards unknown issues. To the dullest peasant, as he sits sluggish, over-toiled, by his evening hearth, one idea has come : that of Châteaux burnt ; of Châteaux combustible. How altered all Coffeehouses, in Province or Capital ! The Antre de Procope has now other questions than the Three Stagyrte Unities to settle ; not theatre-controversies, but a world-controversy : there, in the ancient pigtail mode, or with modern Brutus' heads, do well-frizzed logicians hold hubbub, and Chaos umpire sits. The ever-enduring melody of Paris Saloons has got a new ground-tone : ever-enduring ; which has been heard, and by the listening Heaven too, since Julian the Apostate's time and earlier ; mad now as formerly.
which

Ex-Censor Suard, Ex-Censor, for we have freedom of the Press ; he may be seen there ; impartial, even neutral. Tyrant Grimm rolls large eyes, over a questionable coming Time. Atheist Naigeon, beloved-disciple of Diderot, crows, in his small difficult way, heralding glad dawn.¹ But on the other hand, how many Morellets, Marmontels, who had sat all their life hatching Philosophe eggs, cackle now, in a state bordering on distraction, at the brood they have brought out.² It was so delightful to have one's Philosophe Theorem demonstrated, crowned in the saloons : and now an infatuated people will not continue speculative, but have Practice !

There also observe Preceptress Genlis, or Sillery, or Sillery-Genlis,—for our husband is both Count and Marquis, and we have more than one title. Pretentious, frothy ; a puritan yet creedless ; darkening counsel by words without wisdom ! For, it is in that thin element of the Sentimentalist and Distinguished-Female that Sillery-Genlis works ; she would gladly be sincere, yet can grow no sincerer than sincere-cant : sincere-cant of many forms, ending in the devotional form. For the present, on a neck still of moderate whiteness, she wears as jewel a miniature Bastille, cut on mere sandstone, but then actual Bastille sandstone. M. le Marquis is one of D'Orléans's errand-men ; in National Assembly, and elsewhere. Madame, for her part, trains up a youthful D'Orléans generation in what superfinest morality one can ; gives meanwhile rather enigmatic

¹ Naigeon, Adresse à l'Assemblée Nationale (Paris, 1790), sur la liberté des opinions.

² See Marmontel, Mémoires, passim ; Morellet, Mémoires, etc.

BOOK I 1789-99

account of fair Mademoiselle Pamela, the Daughter whom she has adopted. Thus she, in Palais-Royal Saloon;—whither, we remark, D'Orléans himself, spite of Lafayette, has returned from that English 'mission' of his: surely no pleasant mission: for the English would not speak to him; and Saint Hannah More of England, so unlike Saint Sillery-Genlis of France, saw him shunned, in Vauxhall Gardens, like one peststruck,¹ and his red blue impassive visage waxing hardly a shade bluer.

COMTESSE DE GENLIS.

¹ Hannah More's Lives and Correspondence, L. C. 5.

CHAPTER IV

JOURNALISM

As for Constitutionalism, with its National Guards, it is doing what it can ; and has enough to do : it must, *as ever, with one hand wave persuasively, repressing Patriotism ; and keep the other clenched to menace Royalist plotters. A most delicate task ; requiring tact.

Thus, if People's-friend Marat has today his writ of 'prise de corps, or seizure of body,' served on him, and dives out of sight, tomorrow he is left at large ; or is even encouraged, as a sort of bandog whose baying may be useful. President Danton, in open Hall, with reverberating voice, declares that, in a case like Marat's, 'force may be resisted by force.' Whereupon the Châtelet serves Danton also with a writ ;—which however, as the whole Cordeliers District responds to it, what Constable will be prompt to execute ? Twice more, on new occasions, does the Châtelet launch its writ ; and twice more in vain : the body of Danton cannot be seized by Châtelet ; he unseized, should he even fly for a season, shall behold the Châtelet itself flung into limbo.

Municipality and Brissot, meanwhile, are far on with their Municipal Constitution. The Sixty Districts shall become Forty-eight Sections ; much shall be adjusted, and Paris have its Constitution. A Constitution wholly Elective ; as indeed all French Government shall and must be. And yet, one fatal element has been introduced : that of citoyen actif. No man who does not pay the marc d'argent, or yearly tax equal to three days' labour, shall be other than a passive citizen : not the slightest vote for him ; were he acting, all the year round, with sledge-hammer, with forest-levelling axe ! Unheard of ! cry Patriot Journals. Yes truly, my Patriot Friends, if Liberty, the passion and prayer of all men's souls, means Liberty to send your fifty-thousandth part of a new Tongue-fencer into National Debating-club, then, be the gods witness, ye are hardly entreated. O, if in National Palaver (as the Africans name it), such blessedness is verily found, what

BOOK I 1789-90

morrow, even as Speech ever is Nay what, O thou immortal Man of Letters, is Writing itself but Speech conserved for a time? The Placard Journal conserved it for one day, some Books conserve it for the matter of ten years, nay some for three thousand. but what then? Why, then, the years being all run, it also dies, and the world is rid of it O, were there not a spirit in the word of man, as in man himself, that survived the audible bodied word, and tended either godward or else devilward for evermore, why should he trouble himself much with the truth of it, or the falsehood of it, except for commercial purposes? His immortality indeed, and whether it shall last half a lifetime or a lifetime and half, is not that a very considerable thing? Immortality, mortality—there were certain runaways whom Fritz the Great bullied back into the battle with a ‘R—, wollt ihr ewig leben, Unprintable Offscouring of Scoundrels, would ye live for ever!’

This is the Communication of Thought, how happy when there is any Thought to communicate! Neither let the simpler old methods be neglected, in their sphere The Palais Royal Teat, a tyrannous Patrollotism has removed, but can it remove the lungs of man? Anaxagoras Chaumette we saw mounted on bourne stones, while Tallien worked sedentary at the sub-editorial desk In any corner of the civilised world, a tub can be inverted, and an articulate-speaking biped mount thereon. Nay, with contrivance, a portable trestle, or folding stool, can be procured, for love or mooney, thus the peripatetic Orator can take in his band, and, driven out here, set it up again there saying mildly, with a Sage Bias, Omnia mea mecum porto

Such is Journalism, hawked, pasted, spoken How changed since One old Métra walked this same Tuileries Garden in gilt cocked hat, with Journal at his nose, or held loose-folded behind his back, and was o notability of Paris, ‘Métra the Newsman’,¹ and Louis himself was wont to say Qu'en dit Métra? Since the first Venetian News sheet was sold for a gazza, or farthing, and named Gazette! We live in a fertile world

¹ Delaure, Il s'agit de Paris vol. 4331 Mercier, Nouveau Paris etc.

CHAPTER V

CLUBBISM

WHERE the heart is full, it seeks, for a thousand reasons, in a thousand ways, to impart itself. How sweet, indispensable, in such cases, is fellowship; soul mystically strengthening soul! The meditative Germans, some think, have been of opinion that Enthusiasm in general means simply excessive Congregating—Schwärmerey, or Swarming. At any rate, do we not see glimmering half-red embers, if laid together, get into the brightest white glow?

In such a France, gregarious Reunions will needs multiply intensify; French Life will step out of doors, and, from domestic, become a public Club Life. Old Clubs, which already germinated, grow and flourish; new everywhere bud forth. It is the sure symptom of Social Unrest: in such way, most infallibly of all, does Social Unrest exhibit itself; find solacement, and also nutriment. In every French head there hangs now, whether for terror or for hope, some prophetic picture of a New France: prophecy which brings, nay which almost is, its own fulfilment; and in all ways, consciously and unconsciously, works towards that.

Observe, moreover, how the Aggregative Principle, let it be but deep enough, goes on aggregating, and this even in a geometrical progression; how when the whole world, in such a plastic time, is forming itself into Clubs, some One Club, the strongest or luckiest, shall by friendly attracting, by victorious compelling, grow ever stronger, till it become immeasurably strong; and all the others, with their strength, be either lovingly absorbed into it, or hostilely abolished by it. This if the Club-spirit is universal; if the time is plastic. Plastic enough is the time, universal the Club-spirit: such an all-absorbing, paramount One Club cannot be wanting.

What a progress, since the first salient-point of the Breton Committee! It worked long in secret, not languidly; it has come with the National Assembly to Paris; calls itself Club; calls itself, in imitation, as is thought, of those generous Price-Stanhope English who sent over to congratulate, French Revolution

BOOK I
1789-90

once shook the world, there is pacific chaffering for poultry and greens. The sacred National Assembly Hall itself has become common ground; President's platform permeable to wain and dustcart, for the Rue de Rivoli runs there. Verily, at Cock-crow (of this Cock or the other), all Apparitions do melt and dissolve in space.

The Paris Jacobins became the 'Mother Society, Société Mère', and had as many as 'three hundred' shrill-tongued daughters in 'direct correspondence' with her. Of indirectly corresponding, what we may call grand-daughters and minute progeny, she counted 'forty-four thousand'!—But for the present we note only two things: the first of them a mere anecdote. One night, a couple of Brother Jacobins are door-keepers, for the members take this post of duty and honour in rotation, and admit none that have not tickets: one door-keeper was the worthy Sieur Lais, a patriotic Opera singer, stricken in years, whose windpipe is long since closed without result, the other, young, and named Louis Philippe, D'Orléans's firsthorn, has in this latter time, after unheard-of destinies, become Citizen King, and struggles to rule for a season. All flesh is grass, higher reedgrass, or creeping herb.

The second thing we have to note is historical: that the Mother Society, even in this its effulgent period, cannot content all Patriots. Already it must throw off, so to speak, two dissatisfied swarms, a swarm to the right, a swarm to the left. One party, which thinks the Jacobins lukewarm, constitutes itself into Club of the Cordeliers, a hotter Club: it is Danton's element; with whom goes Desmoulins. The other party, again, which thinks the Jacobins scalding hot, flies off to the right, and becomes 'Club of 1789, Friends of the Monarchic Constitution'. They are afterwards named 'Feuillans Club', their place of meeting being the Feuillans Convent. Lafayette is, or becomes, their chief man; supported by the respectable Patriot everywhere, by the mass of Property and intelligence,—with the most flourishing prospects. They, in these June days of 1790, do, in the Palais Royal, dine solemnly with open windows, to the cheers of the people, with toasts, with inspiring songs,—with one song at least, among the icebiest ever sung! They shall, in due time, be hooted forth, over the borders, into Cimmerian Night.

Another expressly Monarchic or Royalist Club, 'Club des Monarchiens,' though a Club of ample funds, and all sitting on damask sofas, cannot realise the smallest momentary cheer: realises only scoffs and groans;—till, ere long, certain Patriots in disorderly sufficient number, proceed thither, for a night or for nights, and groan it out of pain. Vivacious alone shall

CHAP. V
1789-90

LOUIS PHILIPPE D'ORLÉANS, DUC DE CHARTRES
KING OF THE FRENCH, 1830-1846.

the Mother Society and her family be. The very Cordeliers may, as it were, return into her bosom, which will have grown warm enough.

Fatal-looking! Are not such Societies an incipient New Order of Society itself? The Aggregative Principle anew at work in a Society grown obsolete, cracked asunder, dissolving into rubbish and primary atonies?

CHAPTER VI

JE LE JURF

WITH these signs of the times, is it not surprising that the dominant feeling all over France was still continually Hope? O blessed Hope, sole boon of man whereby, on his strait prison walls, are painted beautiful far stretching landscapes, and into the night of very Death is shed holiest dawn! Thou art to all an indefeasible possession in this God's world, to the wise a sacred Constantine's banner, written on the eternal skies, under which they shall conquer, for the battle itself is victory to the foolish some secular mirage, or shadow of still waters, painted on the parched Earth, whereby at least their dusty pilgrimage, if devious, becomes cheerfule, becomes possible.

In the death tumults of a sinking Society, French Hope sees only the birth struggles of a new unspeakably better Society, and sings, with full assurance of faith, her brisk Melody, which some inspired fiddler has in these very days composed for her,—the world famous Ça ira 'Yes, 'that will go' and then there will come —? All men hope, even Marat hopes—that Patriotism will take mull and dink King Louis is not without hope in the chapter of chances, in a flight to some Bouillé, in getting popularised at Paris But what a hoping People he had, judge by the fact, and series of facts, now to be noted

Poor Louis, meaning the best, with little insight and even less determination of his own, has to follow, in that dum way faring of his such signal as may be given him, by backstairs Royalism, by official or backstairs Constitutionalism whichever for the month may have convinced the royal mind If flight to Bouillé, and (horrible to think!) a drawing of the civil sword do hang as theory, portentous in the background, much nearer is this fact of these Twelve Hundred Kings who sit in the Salle de Manège Kings uncontrollable by him, not yet irrevocant to him Could kind management of these but prosper, how much better were it than armed Emigrants, Turin intrigues and the help of Austria! Nay are the two hopes inconsistent?

Rides

Rides in the suburbs, we have found, cost little ; yet they always brought vivats.¹ Still cheaper is a soft word ; such as has many times turned away wrath. In these rapid days, while France is all getting divided into Departments, Clergy about to be remodelled, Popular Societies rising, and Feudalism and so much else is ready to be hurled into the melting-pot,—might not one try ?

On the 4th of February, accordingly, M. le Président reads to his National Assembly a short autograph, announcing that his Majesty will step over, quite in an unceremonious way, probably about noon. Think, therefore, Messieurs, what it may mean ; especially, how ye will get the Hall decorated a little. The Secretaries' Bureau can be shifted down from the platform ; on the President's chair he slipped this cover of velvet, ' of a violet colour sprigged with gold fleur-de-lys ' ;—for indeed M. le Président has had previous notice underhand, and taken counsel with Doctor Guillotin. Then some fraction of ' velvet carpet,' of like texture and colour, cannot that be spread in front of the chair, where the Secretaries usually sit ? So has judicious Guillotin advised : and the effect is found satisfactory. Moreover, as it is probable that his Majesty, in spite of the fleur-de-lys velvet, will stand and not sit at all, the President himself, in the interim, presides standing. And so, while some honourable Member is discussing, say, the division of a Department, Ushers announce : ' His Majesty ! ' In person, with small suite, enter Majesty : the honourable Member stops short ; the Assembly starts to its feet : the Twelve Hundred Kings ' almost all,' and the Galleries no less, do welcome the Restorer of French Liberty with loyal shouts. His Majesty's Speech, in diluted conventional phraseology, expresses this mainly : That he, most of all Frenchmen, rejoices to see France getting regenerated ; is sure, at the same time, that they will deal gently with her in the process, and not regenerate her roughly. Such was his Majesty's Speech : the feat he performed was coming to speak it, and going back again.

Surely, except to a very hoping People, there was not much here to build upon. Yet what did they not build ! The fact that the King has spoken, that he has voluntarily come to speak, how inexpressibly encouraging ! Did not the glance of his royal countenance, like concentrated sunbeams, kindle will be seen in our August Anniversary Key which is published in France & to which you have been happy to add but many more than for the first time. The Deputed have in their hands of thirty complimentary Key things is not a supply in hand. And still with the steady & steady and to one other to ship as well as the Hall. To move that the work shall

¹ See Bertrand-Moleville, i. 241, etc.

I thought the Master, with his sword in hand and his single Englishman of a fine form which is there bursting to do service, I saw which was the Master. The President was who shall appear, in distinct seignior. No any thing a written slip signed with the mouth now casts an eye to the sword again. And then to the sword the hills how Bally, the towards nightfall of the is assembled that the would be of Twelve steps
 the excellent multi with a thunder the within. And as in their eyes and another, and This was the Fourth of in Constitutional

It is not only a right, but partially or fully a duty of each District, the people of the District, and always as the people of the District itself. Behold them, District of Columbia, where the Non-Resident Electors of the District with their uplifted right hands, and with their hearts, with embassage, and that of the District of the embouchure,—which are to be there not to be considered! Faithful to the King to the Law, to the Constitution which the National Assembly shall make

Fancy, for example, the Professors of Universities parading the streets with their young France, and swearing, in an enthusiastic manner, not without tumult. By a larger exercise of fancy, expand duly this little word: The like was repeated in every Town and District in France! Nay one Patriot Mother in Lagnon of Brittany, assembles her ten children; and, with her own aged hand, swears them all herself, the high-souled venerable woman. Of all which, moreover, a National Assembly must be eloquently apprised. Such three weeks of swearing! Saw the Sun ever such a swearing people? Have they been bit by a swearing tarantula? No: but they are men and Frenchmen; they have Hope; and, singular to say, they have Faith, were it only in the Gospel according to Jean Jaecques. O my Brothers, would to Heaven it were even as ye think, and have sworn! But there are Lover's Oaths, which, had they been true as love itself, cannot be kept; not to speak of Dicer's Oaths, also a known sort.

CHAP. VI
Feb. 4, 1790

CHAPTER VII

PRODIGIES

To such length had the Contrat Social brought it, in believing hearts. Man, as is well said, lives by faith; each generation has its own faith, more or less; and laughs at the faith of its predecessor,—most unwisely. Grant indeed that this faith in the Social Contract belongs to the stranger sorts; that an unborn generation may very wisely, if not laugh, yet stare at it, and piously consider. For, alas, what is Contrat? If all men were such that a mere spoken or sworn Contract would bind them, all men were then true men, and Government a superfluity. Not what thou and I have promised to each other, but what the balance of our forces can make us perform to each other: that, in so sinful a world as ours, is the thing to be counted on. But above all, a People and a Sovereign promising to one another; as if a whole People, changing from generation to generation, nay from hour to hour, could ever by any method be made to speak or promise; and to speak mere solecisms: 'We, be the Heavens witness, which Heavens, however, however, do no miracles now, we, ever-changing Millions, will allow thee, changeful Unit, to force us or govern us ! ' The world has perhaps seen few faiths comparable to that

BOOK I
1782-90

So nevertheless had the world then construed the matter Had they not so construed it, how different had their hopes been, their attempts, their results ! But so and not otherwise did the Upper Powers will it to be Freedom by social Contract - such was verily the Gospel of that Era And all men had believed in it, as in a Heaven's Glad tidings men should ; and with overflowing heart and uplifted voice clave to it, and stood fronting Time and Eternity an it Nay smile not, or only with a smile sadder than tears ! Thus too was a better faith than the one it had replaced, than faith merely in the Everlasting Nothing and man's Digestive Power, lower than which no faith can go

Not that such universally prevalent, universally jurant, feeling of Hope could be a unanimous one Far from that The time was ominous social dissolution near and certain, social reactivation still a problem, difficult and distant, even though sure. But it ominous to some clearest onlooker, whose faith stood not with the one side or with the other, nor in the ever vexed jarring of Greek with Greek at all,—how unspeakably ominous to dim Royalist participators, for whom Royalism was Mankind's palladium ; for whom, with the abolition of Most Christian Kingship and Most Talleyrand Bishopship, all loyal obedience, all religious faith was to expire, and final Night envelop the Destinies of Man ! On serious hearts, of that persuasion, the matter sinks down deep, prompting, as we have seen, to backstairs plots, to Emigration with pledge of war, to Monarchic Clubs ; nay to still madder things

The Spirit of Prophecy, for instance, had been considered extinct for some centuries nevertheless these last times, as indeed is the tendency of last times, do revive it, that so, of French mad things, we might have sample also of the maddest In remote rural districts, whither Plulosophism has not yet radiated, where a heterodox Constitution of the Clergy is bringing strife round the altar itself, and the very Church bells are getting melted into small money coin, it appears probable that the End of the World cannot be far off Deep-musing atrabiliar old

old men, especially old women, hint in an obscure way that they know what they know. The Holy Virgin, silent so long, has not gone dumb ;—and truly now, if ever more in this world, were the time for her to speak. One Prophetess, though careless Historians have omitted her name, condition and whereabouts, becomes audible to the general ear ; credible to not a few ; credible to Friar Gerle, poor Patriot Chartreux, in the National Assembly itself ! She, in Pythoness recitative, with wild-staring eye, sings that there shall be a Sign ; that the heavenly Sun himself will hang out a Sign, or Mock-Sun, —which, many say, shall be stamped with the head of Hanged Favras. List, Dom Gerle, with that poor addled poll of thine ; list, O list ;—and hear nothing.¹

Notable, however, was that ‘magnetic vellum, vélin magnétique,’ of the Sieurs d’Hozier and Petit-Jean, Parlemeuteers of Rouen. Sweet young D’Hozier, ‘bred in the faith of his Missal, and of parchment genealogies,’ and of parchment generally ; adust, melancholic, middle-aged Petit-Jean : why came these two to Saint-Cloud, where his Majesty was hunting, on the festival of St. Peter and St. Paul ; and waited there, in antechambers, a wonder to whispering Swiss, the livelong day ; and even waited without the Grates, when turned out ; and had dismissed their valets to Paris, as with purpose of endless waiting ? They have a magnetic vellum, these two ; whereon the Virgin, wonderfully clothing herself in Mesmorean Cagliostic Occult-Philosophy, has inspired them to jot down instructions and predictions for a much-straitened King. To whom, by Higher Order, they will this day present it ; and save the Monarchy and World. Unaccountable pair of visual-objects ! Ye should be men, and of the Eighteenth Century ; but your magnetic vellum forbids us so to interpret. Say, are ye aught ? Thus ask the Guard-house Captains, the Mayor of Saint-Cloud ; nay, at great length, thus asks the Committee of Researches, and not the Municipal, but the National Assembly one. No distinct answer, for weeks. At last it becomes plain that the right answer is negative. Go, ye Chimeras, with your magnetic vellum ; sweet young Chimera, adust middle-aged one ! The Prison-doors are open. Hardly again shall ye preside the Rouen Chamber of Accounts ; but vanish obscurely into Limbo.²

¹ Deux Amis, v. 7.

² Ibid., v. 199.

CHAPTER VIII

SOLEMN LEAGUE AND COVENANT

SUCH dim masses, and specks of even deepest black, work in that white-hot glow of the French mind, now wholly in fusion and confusion. Old women here swearing their ten children on the new Evangel of Jean Jacques; old women there looking up for Favras' Heads in the celestial Luminary: these are preternatural signs, prefiguring somewhat.

In fact, to the Patriot children of Hope themselves it is undeniable that difficulties exist: emigrating Seigneurs, Parlements in sneaking but most malicious mutiny (though the rope is round their neck), above all, the most decided 'deficiency of grains' Sorrowful; but, to a Nation that hopes, not irremediable. To a Nation which is in fusion and ardent communion of thought, which, for example, on signal of one Fuglemaa, will lift its right hand like a drilled regiment, and swear and illuminate, till every village from Ardennes to the Pyrenees has rolled its village-drum, and sent up its little oath, and glimmer of tallow illumination some fathoms into the reign of Night!

If grains are defective, the fault is not of Nature or National Assembly, but of Art and Anti-National Intriguers. Such malign individuals, of the scoundrel species, have power to vex us, while the Constitution is a making. Endure it, ye heroic Patriots: nay rather, why not cure it? Grains do grow, they lie extant there in sheaf or sack; only that regicides and Royalist plotters, to provoke the People into illegality, obstruct the transport of grains. Quick, ye organised Patriot Authorities, armed National Guards, meet together; unite your goodwill; in union is tenfold strength: let the concentrated flash of your Patriotism strike stealthily Scoundrelism blind, paralytic, as with a coup de soleil!

Under which hat or nightcap of the Twenty-five millions, this pregnant Idea first arose, for in some one head it did rise, no man can now say. A most small idea, near at hand for the whole world; but a living one, fit; and which waxed, whether into greatness or not, into immeasurable size. When a Nation is in this state that the Fugleman can operate on it, what will the word in season, the act in season, not do ! It will grow verily, like the Boy's Bean, in the Fairy-Tale, heaven-high, with habitations and adventures on it, in one night. It is nevertheless unfortunately still a Bean (for your long-lived Oak grows not so) ; and the next night, it may lie felled, horizontal, trodden into common mud.—But remark, at least, how natural to any agitated Nation, which has Faith, this business of Covenanting is. The Scotch, believing in a righteous Heaven above them, and also in a Gospel far other than the Jean-Jacques one, swore, in their extreme need, a Solemn League and Covenant, —as Brothers on the forlorn-hope, and imminence of battle, who embrace, looking godward : and got the whole Isle to swear it ; and even, in their tough Old-Saxon Hebrew-Presbyterian way, to keep it more or less ;—for the thing, as such things are, was heard in Heaven and partially ratified there : neither is it yet dead, if thou wilt look, nor like to die. The French too, with their Gallic-Ethnic excitability and effervescence, have, as we have seen, real Faith, of a sort ; they are hard bestead, though in the middle of Hope : a National Solemn League and Covenant there may be in France too ; under how different conditions ; with how different development and issue !

CHAP. VIII
1789-90

Note, accordingly, the small commencement ; first spark of a mighty firework : for if the particular hat cannot be fixed upon, the particular District can. On the 29th day of last November, were National Guards by the thousand seen filing, from far and near, with military music, with Municipal officers in tricolor sashes, towards and along the Rhone-stream, to the little town of Etoile. There with ceremonial evolution and manœuvre, with fanfaronading, musketry salvoes, and what else the Patriot genius could devise, they made oath and obtestation to stand faithfully by one another, under Law and King ; in particular, to have all manner of grains, while grains there were, freely circulated, in spite both of robber and regrater. This was the meeting of Etoile, in the mild end of November 1789.

But now, if a mere empty Review, followed by Review-dinner, ball, and such gesticulation and flirtation as there may be, interests the happy County-town, and makes it the envy of surrounding County-towns, how much more might this ! In a fortnight, larger Montélimart, half ashamed of itself, will

BOOK I
May 1790

the Quai de Rhone, to march thence to the Federation-field; amid wrappings of hats and lady-handkerchiefs; glad shoutings of some two hundred thousand Patriot voices and hearts; the beautiful and brave! Among whom, courting no notice, and yet the notablist of all, what queen-like Figure is this; with her escort of house-friends and Champagneux the Patriot

MME. ROLAND.

Editor; come abroad with the earliest? Radiant with enthusiasm are those dark eyes, is that strong Minerva-face, looking dignity and earnest joy; joyfulest she where all are joyful. It is Roland de la Patrière's Wife!¹ Strict elderly Roland, King's Inspector of Manufactures here; and now likewise, by popular choice, the strictest of our new Lyons Municipals: a man who has gained much, if worth and faculty be gain; but, above all things, has gained to wife Philipon the

¹ Madame Roland, Mémoires, I. (Discours Préliminaire, p. 23).

Paris Engraver's daughter. Reader, mark that queenlike burgher-woman: beautiful, Amazonian-graceful to the eye; more so to the mind. Unconscious of her worth (as all worth is), of her greatness, of her crystal clearness; genuine, the creature of Sincerity and Nature, in an age of Artificiality, Pollution and Cant; there, in her still completeness, in her still invincibility, she, if thou knew it, is the noblest of all living

CHAP. VIII

1700

ROLAND.

Frenchwomen,—and will be seen, one day. O, blessed rather while unseen, even of herself! For the present she gazes, nothing doubting, into this grand theatricality; and thinks her young dreams are to be fulfilled.

From dawn to dusk, as we said, it lasts; and truly a sight like few. Flourishes of drums and trumpets are something; but think of an 'artificial Rock fifty feet high,' all cut into crag-steps, not without the similitude of 'shrubs'! The interior cavity,—for in sooth it is made of deal,—stands solemn,

BOOK I
1790

solemn, o 'Temple of Concord' on the outer summit rises 'a Statue of Liberty,' colossal, seen for miles, with her Pike and Phrygian cap, and civic column, at her feet a Country's Altar, 'Autel de la Patrie'—on all which neither deal timber nor lath and plaster, with paint of various colours, have been spared. But fancy then the banners all placed on the steps of the Rock, high mass chanted, and the civic oath of fifty thousand with what volcanic outburst of sound from iron and other throats, enough to frighten back the very Saône and Rhone, and how the brightest fireworks, and balls, and even repasts closed in that night of the gods! And so the Lyons Federation vanishes too, swallowed of darkness,—and yet not wholly, for our brave fair Rolond was there, also she, though in the deepest privacy, writes her Narrative of it in Champagne's Courrier de Lyon, a piece which 'circulates to the extent of sixty thousand', which one would now like to read.

But on the whole, Paris, we may see, will have little to devise, will only have to borrow and apply. And then as to the day, what day of all the calendar is fit, if the Bastille Anniversary be not? The particular spot too, it is easy to see, must be the Champ de-Mars, where many a Julian the Apostate has been lifted on bucklers, to France's or the world's sovereignty; and iron Franks, loud-clanging, have responded to the voice of a Charlemagne, and from of old mere sublimities have been familiar.

CHAPTER IX

SYMBOLIC

How natural, in all decisive circumstances, is Symbolic Representation to all kinds of men! Nay, what is man's whole terrestrial life but a Symbolic Representation, and making visible, of the Celestial invisible Force that is in him? By act and word he strives to do it; with sincerity, if possible, failing that, with theatricality, which latter also may have its meaning. An Almack's Masquerade is not nothing; in more genial ages, your Christmas Givings, Feasts of the Ass, Abbots of Unreason were a considerable something: sincere sport they were, as

THE TITAN (MIRABEAU).

Almack's may still be sincere wish for sport. But what, on the other hand, must not sincere earnest have been ; say, a Hebrew Feast of Tabernacles have been ! A whole Nation gathered, in the name of the Highest, under the eye of the Highest ; imagination herself flagging under the reality ; and all noblest Ceremony as yet not grown ceremonial, but solemn, significant to the outmost fringe ! Neither, in modern private life, are theatrical scenes, of tearful women wetting whole ells of cambric in concert, of impassioned bushy-whiskered youth threatening suicide, and such-like, to be so entirely detested : drop thou a tear over them thyself rather.

At any rate, one can remark that no Nation will throw-by its work, and deliberately go out to make a scene, without meaning something thereby. For indeed no scenic individual, with knavish hypocritical views, will take the trouble to soliloquise a scene : and now consider, is not a scenic Nation placed precisely in that predicament of soliloquising ; for its own behoof alone ; to solace its own sensibilities, maudlin or other ? —Yet in this respect, of readiness for scenes, the difference of Nations, as of men, is very great. If our Saxon Puritanic friends, for example, swore and signed their National Covenant, without discharge of gunpowder, or the beating of any drum, in a dingy Covenant-Close of the Edinburgh High-Street, in a mean room, where men now drink mean liquor, it was consistent with their ways so to swear it. Our Gallic-Encyclopedic friends, again, must have a Champ-de-Mars, seen of all the world, or universe ; and such a Scenic Exhibition, to which the Coliseum Amphitheatre was but a strollers' barn, as this old Globe of ours had never or hardly ever beheld. Which method also we reckon natural, then and there. Nor perhaps was the respective keeping of these two Oaths far out of due proportion to such respective display in taking them : inverse proportion, namely. For the theatricality of a People goes in a compound ratio : ratio indeed of their trustfulness, sociability, fervency ; but then also of their excitability, of their porosity, not continent ; or say, of their explosiveness, hot-flashing, but which does not last.

How true also, once more, is it that no man or Nation of men, conscious of doing a great thing, was ever, in that thing, doing other than a small one ! O Champ-de-Mars Federation, with three hundred drummers, twelve hundred wind-musicians, and

BOOK I
1790

and artillery planted on height after height to boom the tidings of it all over France, in few minutes! Could no Atheist Nageon contrive to discern, eighteen centuries off, those Thirteen most poor mean dressed men, at frugal Supper, in a mean Jewish dwelling, with no symbol but hearts god initiated into the 'Divine depth of Sorrow,' and a Do this in remembrance of me; —and so cease that small difficult crowing of his, if he were not doomed to it?

CHAPTER X

MANKIND

PARDONABLE are human theatricalities; nay, perhaps touching, like the passionate utterance of a tongue which with sincerity stammers, of a head which with insincerity babbles, —having gone distracted. Yet, in comparison with unpremeditated outbursts of Nature, such as an Insurrection of Women, how poisonless, unedifying, undelightful; like small ale palled, like an effervescence that has effervesced! Such scenes, coming of forethought, were they world great, and never so cunningly devised, are at bottom mainly pasteboard and paint. But the others are original; emitted from the great everliving heart of Nature herself. what figure they will assume is unspeakably significant. To us, therefore, let the French National Solemn League and Federation be the highest recorded triumph of the Thespian Art. triumphant surely, since the whole Pit, which was of Twenty five millions, not only claps hands, but does itself spring on the boards and passionately set to playing there. And being such, be it treated as such. with sincere cursory admiration, with wonder from afar. A whole Nation gone mumming deserves so much; but deserves not that loving minuteness a Menadic Insurrection did. Much more let prior, and as it were rehearsal scenes of Federation come and go, henceforward as they list; and, on Plains and under City walls, innumerable regimental bands blare-off into the Inane, without note from us.

One scene, however, the hastiest reader will momentarily pause on: that of Anacharsis Clootz and the Collective sinful

Posterty

Posterity of Adam.—For a Patriot Municipality has now, on the 4th of June, got its plan concocted, and got it sanctioned by National Assembly; a Patriot King assenting; to whom, were he even free to dissent, Federative harangues, overflowing with loyalty, have doubtless a transient sweetness. There shall come Deputed National Guards, so many in the hundred, from each of the Eighty-three Departments of France. Likewise from all Naval and Military King's Forces shall Deputed quotas come; such Federation of National with Royal Soldier has, taking place spontaneously, been already seen and sanctioned. For the rest, it is hoped, as many as forty thousand may arrive: expenses to be borne by the Deputing District; of all which let District and Department take thought, and elect fit men,—whom the Paris brethren will fly to meet and welcome.

Now, therefore, judge if our Patriot Artists are busy; taking deep counsel how to make the Scene worthy of a look from the Universe! As many as fifteen thousand men, spademen, barrow-men, stonebuilders, rammers, with their engineers, are at work on the Champ-de-Mars; hollowing it out into a National Amphitheatre, fit for such solemnity. For one may hope it will be annual and perennial; a 'Feast of Pikes, Fête des Piques,' notablest among the hightides of the year: in any case, ought not a scenic Free Nation to have some permanent National Amphitheatre? The Champ-de-Mars is getting hollowed out; and the daily talk and the nightly dream in most Parisian heads is of Federation and that only. Federate Deputies are already under way. National Assembly, what with its natural work, what with hearing and answering harangues of these Federates, of this Federation, will have enough to do! Harangue of 'American Committee,' among whom is that faint figure of Paul Jones as 'with the stars dim-twinkling through it,'—come to congratulate us on the prospect of such auspicious day. Harangue of Bastille Conquerors, come to 'renounce' any special recompense, any peculiar place at the solemnity;—since the Centre Grenadiers rather grumble. Harangue of 'Tennis-Court Club,' who enter with far-gleaming Brass-plate, aloft on a pole, and the Tennis-Court Oath engraved thereon; which far-gleaming Brass-plate they purpose to affix solemnly in the Versailles original locality, on the 20th of this month, which is the anniversary, as a deathless memorial, for some years: they will then dine, as they come back, in the

BOOK I
1790

Bois de Boulogne ;¹—cannot, however, do it without apprising the world. To such things does the august National Assembly ever and anon cheerfully listen, suspending its regenerative labours ; and with some touch of impromptu eloquence, make friendly reply ;—as indeed the wont has long been ; for it is a gesticulating, sympathetic People, and has a heart, and wears it on its sleeve.

In which circumstances, it occurred to the mind of Ana-

LEFEBVIERRE DE SAINT-PARGÉAU.

charris Cloutz, that while so much was embodying itself into Club or Committee, and perorating applauded, there yet remained a greater and greatest ; of which, if it also took body and perorated, what might not the effect be : Human-kind namely, le Genre Humain itself ! In what rapt creative moment the Thought rose in Anacharsis's soul ; all his throes, while he went about giving shape and birth to it ; how he was sneered at by cold worldlings ; but did sneer again, being a man of polished sarcasm ; and moved to and fro persuasive in coffee-house and soir  e, and dived down assiduous-obscure in the great deep of Paris, making his Thought a Fact : of all this the spiritual biographies of that period say nothing. Enough that on the 19th evening of June 1790, the sun's slant rays lighted a spectacle such as our foolish little planet has not often had to show : Anacharsis Clootz entering the august Salle de Man  ge, with the Human Species at his heels, Swedes, Spapiards, Polaeks ; Turks, Chaldeans, Greeks, dwellers in Mesopotamia ; behold them all ; they have come to claim place in the grand Federation, having an undoubted interest in it.

¹ See Deux Amis, v. 322 ; Hist. Parl. etc.

'Our Ambassador titles,' said the fervid Clootz, 'are not written on parchment, but on the living hearts of all men.' These whiskered Polaeks, long-flowing turbaned Ishmaelites, astrological Chaldeans, who stand so mute here, let them plead with you, august Senators, more eloquently than eloquence could. They are the mute representatives of their tongue-tied, befettered, heavy-laden Nations ; who from out of that dark bewilderment gaze wistful, amazed, with half-incredulous hope, towards you, and this your bright light of a French Federation : bright particular daystar, the herald of universal day. We claim to stand there, as mute monuments, pathetically adumbrative of much.—From bench and gallery comes 'repeated applause' ; for what august Senator but is flattered even by the very shadow of human Species depending on him ? From President Siey  s, who presides this remarkable fortnight, in spite of his small voice, there comes eloquent though shrill reply. Anacharsis and the 'Foreigners Committee' shall have place at the Federation ; on condition of telling their respective Peoples what they see there. In the mean time, we invite them to the 'honours of the sitting, honneur de la s  ance.' A long-flowing Turk, for rejoinder, bows with Eastern solemnity, and utters articulate sounds : but owing to his imperfect knowledge of the French dialect,¹ his words are like spilt water ; the thought he had in him remains conjectural to this day.

Anacharsis and Mankind accept the honours of the sitting ; and have forthwith, as the old Newspapers still testify, the satisfaction to see several things. First and chief, on the motion of Lameth, Lafayette, Saint-Fargeau and other Patriot Nobles, let the others repugn as they will : all Titles of Nobility, ¹ Moniteur, etc. (in Hist. Parl. xii. 283).

BOOK I
June 1790

from Duke to Esquire, or lower, are henceforth abolished Then in like manner, Livery Servants or rather the Livery of Servants Neither, for the future shall any man or woman self styled noble, be 'incensed,'—foolishly fumigated with incense in Church, as the wont has been In a word Feudalism being dead these ten months why should her empty trappings and scutcheons survive? the very Coats of arms will require to be obliterated,—and yet Cassandra Marat on this and the other coach panel notices that they 'are but painted over,' and threaten to peer through again

So that henceforth De Lafayette is but the Sieur Motier, and Saint Fargeau is plain Michel Lepelletier, and Mirabeau soon after has to say huffingly, 'With your Rigourth you have set Europe at cross purposes for three days' For his Count hood is not indifferent to this man, which indeed the admiring People treat him with to the last But let extreme Patriotism rejoice and chiefly Anacharsis and Mankind for now it seems to be taken for granted that one Adam is Father of us all!—

Such was in historical accuracy, the famed fest of Anacharsis Thus did the most extensive of Public Bodies find a sort of spokesman Whereby at least we may judge of one thing, what a humour the once snuffing mocking City of Paris and Baron Cloatz had got into, when such exhibition could appear a propriety, next door to a sublimity It is true, Envy did in after times, pervert this success of Anacharsis, making him, from incidental 'Speaker of the Foreign Nations Committee,' claim to be official permanent 'Speaker, Orateur, of the Human Species' which he only deserved to be and alleging calumniously, that his astrological Chaldeans and the rest were a mere French tag rag and bobtail disguised for the nonce, and in short, sneering and sneering at him in her cold barren way all which however, he the man he was could receive on thick enough panoply, or even rebound therefrom, and also go his way

Most extensive of Public Bodies we may call it, and also the most unexpected for who could have thought to see all Nations in the Tuileries Riding Hall? But so it is, and truly as strange things may happen when a whole People goes mumming and muming Hast not thou thyself perchance seen diademed Cleopatra daughter of the Ptolemies pleading almost almost with bended knee, in unheroic tea-parlour, or dimlit retail-shop, to inflexible gross Burghal Dignitary, for leave to reign and die; being dressed for it, and moneyless, with small children;—while suddenly Constables have shut the Thespian barn, and her Antony pleaded in vain? Such visual spectra flit across this Earth, if the Thespian Stage be rudely interfered with: but much more, when, as was said, Pit jumps on Stage, then is it verily, as in Herr Tieck's Drama, a Verkehrte Welt, or World Topsyturried!

Having seen the Human Species itself, to have seen the 'Dean of the Human Species' ceased now to be a miracle. Such 'Doyen du Genre Humain, Eldest of Men,' had shown himself there, in these weeks: Jean Claude Jacob, a born Serf, deputed from his native Jura Mountains to thank the National Assembly for enfranchising them. On his bleached worn face are ploughed the furrowings of one hundred and twenty years. He has heard din patois-talk, of immortal Grand-Monarch victories; of a burned Palatinate, as he toiled and moiled to make a little speck of this Earth greener; of Cévennes Dragoonings; of Marlborough going to the war. Four generations have bloomed out, and loved and hated, and rustled off: he was forty-six when Louis Fourteenth died. The Assembly, as one man, spontaneously rose, and did reverence to the Eldest of the World; old Jean is to take séance among them, honourably, with covered head. He gazes feebly there, with his old eyes, on that new wonder-scene; dream-like to him, and uncertain, wavering amid fragments of old memories and dreams. For Time is all growing unsubstantial, dreamlike; Jean's eyes and mind are weary, and about to close,—and open on a far other wonder-scene, which shall be real. Patriot Subscription, Royal Pension was got for him, and he returned home glad; but in two months more he left it all, and went on his unknown way.¹

¹ Deux Artistes, iv. iii.

BOOK I
July 1 1790

CHAPTER XI

AS IN THE AGE OF COLD

MEANWHILE to Paris ever going and returning day after day and all day long towards that Field of Mars it becomes painfully apparent that the spadework there cannot be got done in time. There is such an area of it, three hundred thousand square feet for from the École Militaire (which will need to be done up in wood with balconies and galleries) westward to the Gate by the River (where also shall be wood in triumphal arches) we count some thousand yards of length, and for breadth from this umbrageous Avenue of eight rows on the South side to that corresponding one on the North, some thousand feet more or less. All this to be scooped out and wheeled up in slope along the sides, high enough for it must be rammed down there and shaped stair wise into as many as 'thirty ranges of convenient seats' firm trimmed with turf covered with enduring timber—and then our huge pyramidal Fatherland's Altar Autel de la Patrie in the centre, also to be raised and stair stepped. Force-work with a vengeance, it is a World's Amphitheatre! There are but fifteen days good and at this languid rate it might take half as many weeks. What is singular too the spademen seem to work lazily, they will not work double tides even for offer of more wages though their tide is but seven hours they declare angrily that the human tabernacle requires occasional rest!

Is it Aristocrats secretly bribing? Aristocrats were capable of that. Only six months since did not evidence get afloat that subterranean Paris—for we stand over quarries and catacombs dangerously, as it were midway between Heaven and the Abyss and are hollow underground—was charged with gunpowder which should make us 'leap'? Till a Cordeliers Deputation actually went to examine and found it—carried off again! An accursed incurable brood, all asking for 'passports' in these sacred days. Trouble of noting châteaux burning is in the Limousin and elsewhere, for they are lury! Between the best of Peoples and the best of Restorer Kings

¹ 23d December 1793 (Newspapers in H. of Com. 41).

they

they would sow grudges ; with what a fiend's grin would they see this Federation, looked for by the Universe, fail !

CHAP. XI
July 1, 1709

Fail for want of spadework, however, it shall not. He that has four limbs and a French heart can do spadework ; and will ! On the first July Monday, scarcely has the signal-cannon boomed ; scarcely have the languescient mercenary Fifteen Thousand laid down their tools, and the eyes of on-lookers turned sorrowfully to the still high Sun ; when this and the other Patriot, fire in his eye, snatches barrow and mattock, and himself begins indignantly wheeling. Whom scores and then hundreds follow ; and soon a volunteer Fifteen Thousand are shovelling and trundling ; with the heart of giants : and all in right order, with that extemporaneous adroitness of theirs : whereby such a lift has been given, worth three mercenary ones ;—which may end when the late twilight thickens, in triumph-shouts, heard or heard of beyond Montmartre !

A sympathetic population will wait, next day, with eagerness, till the tools are free. Or why wait ? Spades elsewhere exist ! And so now bursts forth that effulgence of Parisian enthusiasm, good-heartedness and brotherly love ; such, if Chroniclers are trustworthy, as was not witnessed since the Age of Gold. Paris, male and female, precipitates itself towards its Southwest extremity, spade on shoulder. Streams of men, without order ; or in order, as ranked fellow-craftsmen, as natural or accidental reunions, march towards the Field of Mars. Three-deep these march ; to the sound of stringed music ; preceded by young girls with green boughs and tricolor streamers : they have shouldered, soldier-wise, their shovels and picks ; and with one throat are singing ça-ira. Yes, pardieu ça-ira, cry the passengers on the streets. All corporate Guilds, and public and private Bodies of Citizens, from the highest to the lowest, march ; the very Hawkers, one finds, have ceased bawling for one day. The neighbouring Villages turn out : their able men come marching, to village fiddle or tambourine and triangle, under their Mayor, or Mayor and Curate, who also walk bespaded, and in tricolor sash. As many as one hundred and fifty thousand workers ; nay at certain seasons, as some count, two hundred and fifty thousand ; for, in the afternoon especially, what mortal but, finishing his hasty day's work, work, would run! A stirring City, from the time you reach the Place Louis Quinze, southward over the River, by all Avenues, it is one living throng. So many workers, and no mercenary mock workers but real ones that he freely to it each Patriot stretches himself against the stuhhorn glebe, hews and wheels with the whole weight that is in him.

BOOK I
July 2-1^o, 1790

Amiable infants, aimables enfans! They do the 'police de l'atelier' too, the guidance and governance, themselves, with that ready will of theirs, with that extemporaneous adroitness. It is a true brethren's work, all distinctions confounded, abolished, as it was in the beginning when Adam himself delved. Long frocked tonsured Monks with short skirted Water carriers, with swallow tailed well frizzled Incroyables of a Patriot turn, dark Charcoalmen meal white Peruke-makers or Peruke wearers for Advocate and Judge are there, and all Heads of Districts sober Nuns sisterlike with flauanting Nymphs of the Opera and females in common circumstances named unfortunate the patriot Ragpicker, and perfumed dweller in palaces, for Patriotism, like New birth and also like Death, levels all. The Printers have come marching Prudhommes all in Paper caps with Révolutions de Paris printed on them.—as Camille notes, wishing that in these great days there should be a Pacte des Écrivains too, or Federation of Able Editors! Beautiful to see! The snowy linen and delicate pantaloons alternates with the soiled check shirt and bushel breeches, for both have cast their coats and under both are four limbs and a set of Patriot muscles. There do they pick and shovel, or bend forward, yoked in long strings to box barrow or overloaded tumbril, joyous with one mind. Abbé Sieyès is seen pulling wiry, vehement, if too tight for draught, by the side of Beauharnais who shall get Kings though he be none. Abbé Maury did not pull, but the Charcoalmen brought a mummer guised like him and he had to pull in effigy. Let no august Senator disdain the work. Mayor Bailly, Generalissimo Lafayette are there,—and alas shall be there again another day! The King himself comes to see sky rending Vive le roi! and suddenly with shouldered spades they form a guard of honour round him. Whosoever can come comes, to work, or to look, and bless the work.

Whole families have come. One whole family we see clearly

¹ See Newspapers, etc. (u H st Parl vi. 381 406).

of three generations : the father picking, the mother shovelling, the young ones wheeling assiduous ; old grandfather, hoary with ninety-three years, holds in his arms the youngest of all : ¹ frisky, not helpful this one ; who nevertheless may tell it to his grandchildren ; and how the Future and the Past alike looked on, and with failing or with half-formed voice faltered their ça-ira. A vintner has wheeled in, on Patriot truck, beverage of wine : ' Drink not, my brothers, if ye are not thirsty ; that your eask may last the longer ' : neither did any drink but men ' evidently exhausted. ' A dapper Abbé looks on, sneering : ' To the barrow ! ' cry several ; whom he, lest a worse thing befall him, obeys : nevertheless one wiser Patriot barrowman, arriving now, interposes his 'arrêtez' ; setting down his own barrow, he snatches the Abbé's ; trundles it fast, like an infected thing, forth of the Champ-de-Mars circuit, and discharges it there. Thus too a certain person (of some quality, or private capital, to appearance), entering hastily, flings down his coat, waistcoat and two watches, and is rushing to the thick of the work : ' But your watches ? ' cries the general voice. — ' Does one distrust his brothers ? ' answers he ; nor were the watches stolen. How beautiful is noble-sentiment : like gossamer gauze, beautiful and cheap ; which will stand no tear and wear ! Beautiful cheap gossamer gauze, thou film-shadow of a raw-material of Virtue, which art not woven, nor likely to be, into Duty ; thou art better than nothing, and also worse !

DE BEAUHARNAIS.

Young Boarding-school Boys, College Students, shout Vive la Nation, and regret that they have yet ' only their sweat to ¹ Mercier, ii. 76, etc.

BOOK I
July 2 12, 1790

give' What say we of Boys? Beautifullest Hebes; the loveliest of Paris, in their light air robes, with riband girdle of tricolor, are there, shovelling and wheeling with the rest; their Hebe eyes brighter with enthusiasm, and long hair in beautiful dishevelment; broad pressed are their small fingers; but they make the patriot barrow go, and even force it to the summit of the slope (with a little tracing, which what man's arm were not too happy to lend?)—then bound down with it again, and go for more, with their long locks and tricolors blown back, graceful as the rosy Hours O, as that evening Sun fell over the Champ-de-Mars, and tinted with fire the thick umbrageous boscage that shelters it on this hand and on that, and struck direct on those Domes and two-and forty Windows of the Ecole Militaire, and made them all of burnished gold,—saw he on his wide zodiac road other such sight? A living garden spotted and dotted with such flowerage; all colours of the prism; the beautifullest blent friendly with the usefulest; all growing and working brotherlike there under one warm feeling, were it but for days; once and no second time! But Night is sinking, these Nights, too, into Eternity. The hastiest traveller Versailles ward has drawn bridle on the heights of Chaillot and looked for moments over the River, reporting at Versailles what he saw, not without tears¹

Meanwhile, from all points of the compass, Federates are arriving: fervid children of the South, 'who glory in their Mirabeau', considerate North blooded Mountaineers of Jura; sharp Bretons, with their Gaelic suddenness; Normans, not to be overreached in bargain; all now animated with one noblest fire of Patriotism Whom the Paris brethren march forth to receive; with military solemnities with fraternal embracing, and a hospitality worthy of the heroic ages They assist at the Assembly's Debates, these Federates, the Galleries are reserved for them They assist in the toils of the Champ-de-Mars; each new troop will put its hand to the spade, lift a hod of earth on the Altar of the Fatherland But the flourishes of rhetoric, for it is a gesticulating People, the moral sublimae of those Addresses to an august Assembly, to a Patriot Restorer! Our Breton Captain of Federates kneels even, in a fit of enthusiasm, and gives up his sword; he wet-eyed to a

¹ Merder, in. 81

King wet-eyed. Poor Louis! These, as he said afterwards, were among the bright days of his life.

CHAP. XI
July 2-12,
1790.

Reviews also there must be; royal Federate-reviews, with King, Queen and tricolor Court looking on: at lowest, if, as is too common, it rains, our Federate Volunteers will file through the inner gateways, Royalty standing dry. Nay there, should some stop occur, the beautifullest fingers in France may take you softly by the lapelle, and, in mild flute-voice, ask: 'Monsieur, of what Province are you?' Happy he who can reply, chivalrously lowering his sword's point, 'Madame, from the Province your ancestors reigned over.' He that happy 'Provincial Advocate,' now Provincial Federate, shall be rewarded by a sun-smile, and such melodious glad words addressed to a King: 'Sire, these are your faithful Lorrainers.' Cheerier verily, in these holidays, is this 'skyblue faced with red' of a National Guardsman, than the dull black and grey of a Provincial Advocate, which in workdays one was used to. For the same thrice-blessed Lorrainer shall, this evening, stand sentry at a Queen's door; and feel that he could die a thousand deaths for her: then again, at the outer gate, and even a third time, she shall see him; nay he will make her do it; presenting arms with emphasis, 'making his musket jingle again': and in her salute there shall again be a sun-smile, and that little blonde-locked too hasty Dauphin shall be admonished, 'Salute, then, Monsieur; don't be unpolite'; and therewith she, like a bright Sky-wanderer or Planet with her little Moon, issues forth peculiar.¹

But at night, when Patriot spadework is over, figure the sacred rites of hospitality! Lepelletier Saint-Fargeau, a mere private senator, but with great possessions, has daily his 'hundred dinner-guests'; the table of Generalissimo Lafayette may double that number. In lowly parlour, as in lofty saloon, the wine-cup passes round; crowned by the smiles of Beauty; be it of lightly-tripping Grisette or of high-sailing Dame, for both equally have beauty, and smiles precious to the brave.

¹ Narrative by a Lorraine Federate (given in Hist. Parl. vi. 389-91).

BOOK I
July 14 1790

CHAPTER XII

SOUND AND SMOKE

AND so now, in spite of plotting Aristocrats, lazy hired spademen, and almost of Destiny itself (for there has been much rain too), the Champ-de-Mars, on the 13th of the month, is fairly ready: trimmed, rammed, buttressed with firm masonry, and Patriotism can stroll over it admiring; and as it were rehearsing, for in every head is some unutterable image of the morrow. Pray Heaven there be not clouds. Nay what far worse cloud is this, of a misguided Municipality that talks of admitting Patriotism to the solemnity by tickets! Was it by tickets we were admitted to the work, and to what brought the work? Did we take the Bastille by tickets? A misguided Municipality sees the error; at late midnight, rolling drums announced to Patriotism starting half out of its bed-clothes, that it is to be ticketless. Pull down thy nightcap therefore; and, with demi-articulate grumble, significant of several things, go pacified to sleep again. To-morrow is Wednesday morning; unforgettable among the faits of the world.

The morning comes, cold for a July one; but such a festivity would make Greenland smile. Through every inlet of that National Amphitheatre (for it is a league in circuit, cut with openings at due intervals), floods in the living throng; covers, without tumult, space after space. The Ecole Militaire has galleries and overvaulting canopies, wherein Carpentry and Painting have vied, for the Upper Authorities, triumphal arches, at the Gate by the River, bear inscriptions, if weak, yet well meant and orthodox. Far aloft, over the Altar of the Fatherland, on their tall crane standards of iron, swing pensile our antique Cassolettes or Pans of Incense; dispensing sweet incense-fumes,—unless for the Heathen Mythology, one sees not for whom. Two hundred thousand Patriotic Men; and, twice as good, one hundred thousand Patriotic Women, all decked and glorified as one can fancy, sit waiting in this Champ-de-Mars.

What a picture, that circle of bright-dyed Life, spread up there.

there, on its thirty-seated Slope; leaning, one would say, on the thick umbrage of those Avenue-Trees, for the stems of them are hidden by the height; and all beyond it mere greenness of Summer Earth, with the gleams of waters, or white sparklings of stone edifices: little circular enamel picture in the centre of such a vase—of emerald! A vase not empty: the Invalides Cupolas want not their population nor the distant Windmills of Montmartre; on remotest steeple and invisible village belfry stand men with spy-glasses. On the heights of Chaillot are many-coloured undulating groups; round and far on, over all the circling heights that embosom Paris, it is as one more or less peopled Amphitheatre; which the eye grows dim with measuring. Nay heights, as was before hinted, have cannon; and a floating-battery of cannon is on the Seine. When eye fails, ear shall serve; and all France properly is but one Amphitheatre; for in paved town and unpaved hamlet men walk listening; till the muffled thunder sound audible on their horizon, that they too may begin swearing and firing!¹ But now, to streams of music, come Federates enough,—for they have assembled on the Boulevard Saint-Antoine or thereby, and come marching through the City, with their Eighty-three Department Banners, and blessings not loud but deep; comes National Assembly, and takes seat under its Canopy; comes Royalty, and takes seat on a throne beside it. And Lafayette, on white charger, is here, and all the civic Functionaries; and the Federates form dances, till their strictly military evolutions and manœuvres can begin.

Evolutions and manœuvres? Task not the pen of mortal to describe them: truant imagination droops;—declares that it is not worth while. There is wheeling and sweeping, to slow, to quick and double-quick time: Sieur Motier, or Generalissimo Lafayette, for they are one and the same, and he is General of France, in the King's stead, for four-and-twenty hours; Sieur Motier must step forth, with that sublime chivalrous gait of his; solemnly ascend the steps of the Fatherland's Altar, in sight of Heaven and of the scarcely breathing Earth; and, under the creak of those swinging Cassolettes, 'pressing his sword's point firmly there,' pronounce the Oath, To King, to Law, and Nation (not to mention 'grains' with their circulating), in his own name and that of armed France. Whereat

¹ Deux Août, v. 168.

BOOK I
 July 14 1790 there is waving of banners and acclam sufficient The National Assembly must swear standing in its place, the King himself audibly The King swears, and now be the welkin split with vivats let citizens enfranchised embrace each smiting heartily his palm into his fellow's, and armed Federates clang their arms, above all, that floating battery speak! It has spoken—to the four corners of France From eminence to eminence bursts the thunder, faint heard loud repeated What a stone cast into what a lake, in circles that do not grow fainter From Arras to Avignon, from Metz to Bayonne! Over Orléans and Blois it rolls in cannon recitative, Puy bellows of it amid his granite mountains, Pau where is the shell cradle of Great Henri At far Marseilles one can think the ruddy evening witnesses it, over the deep blue Mediterranean waters the Castle of If ruddy tinted darts forth from every cannon's mouth its tongue of fire, and all the people shout Yes France is free O glorious France that has burst out so, into universal sound and smoke, and attained—the Phrygian Cap of Liberty! In all Towns Trees of Liberty also may be planted with or without advantage Said we not it was the highest stretch attained by the Thespian Art on this Planet or perhaps attainable?

The Thespian Art unfortunately, one must still call it for behold there on this Field of Mars the National Banners before there could be any swearing were to be all blessed A most proper omission, since surely without Heaven's blessing bestowed say even nudibly or inaudibly sought no earthly banner or contrivance can prove victorious but now the means of doing it? By what thrice-divine F'mkl'm thunder rod shall miraculous fire be drawn out of Heaven and descend gently, life-giving with health to the souls of men? Alas by the simplest by Two Hundred shaven-crowned Individuals 'in snow white albs with tricolor girdles' arranged on the steps of Fatherland's Altar, and at their head for spokes man Soul's Overseer Talleyrand Périgord! These shall act as miraculous thunder rod—to such length as they can O ye deep azure Heavens and thou green all nursing Earth ye Streams everflowing deciduous Forests that die and are born again continually like the sons of men, stone Mountains that die daily with every rain shower yet are not dead and levelled for ages of ages nor born again (it seems) but with new world explosions.

explosions, and such tumultuous seething and tumbling, CHAP. XII steam half-way to the Moon; O thou unfathomable mystic July 14, 1790 All, garment and dwelling-place of the UNNAMED; and thou, articulate-speaking Spirit of Man, who moulded and modellest

TALLEYRAND.

that Unfathomable Unnameable even as we see,—is not there a miracle: That some French mortal should, we say not have believed, but pretended to imagine he believed that Talleyrand and Two Hundred pieces of white Calico could do it!

Here, however, we are to remark with the sorrowing Historians of that day, that suddenly, while Episcopus Talleyrand, long-stoled,

BOOK I
July 14 1790

long stoled, with mitre and tricolor belt, was yet but hutching up the Altar steps to do his miracle, the material Heaven grew black, a north wind, moaning cold moisture, began to sing; and there descended a very deluge of rain. Sad to see! The thirty staired Seats, all round our Amphitheatre, get instantaneously slated with mere umbrellas, fallacious when so thick-set our antique Cassolettes become water pots, their incense-smoke gone hissing in a whiff of muddy vapour. Alas, instead of vivats, there is nothing now but the furious peppering and rattling. From three to four hundred thousand human individuals feel that they have a skin, happily impervious. The General's sash runs water. how all military banners droop, and will not wave, but lazily flap as if metamorphosed into painted tin banners! Worse far worse these hundred thousand, such is the Historian's testimony, of the fairest of France! Their snowy muslins all splashed and dimggled, the ostrich feather shrunk shamefully to the backbone of a feather. all caps are ruined, innermost pasteboard molten into its original pap. Beauty no longer swims decorated in her garniture, like Love-goddess hidden revealed in her Paphian clouds but struggles in disastrous imprisonment in it, for 'the shape was noticeable', and now only sympathetic interjections, titterings, teheerings and resolute good humour will avail. A deluge, an incessant sheet or fluid-column of rain,—such that our Overseer's very mitre must be filled, not a mitre, but a filled and leaky fire-bucket on his reverend head!—Regardless of which, Overseer Talleyrand performs his miracle. the Blessing of Talleyrand another than that of Jacob, is on all the eighty-three departmental flags of France, which wave or flap, with such thankfulness as needs. Towards three o'clock, the sun beams out again. the remaining evolutions can be transacted under bright heavens, though with decorations much damaged.¹

On Wednesday our Federation is consummated. but the festivities last out the week, and over into the next. Festivities such as no Bagdad Caliph, or Aladdin with the Lamp could have equalled. There is a Jousting on the River; with its water somersets, splashing and hahing. Abbé Fauchet, Te Deum Fauchet, preches, for his part, in the 'rotunda of the Corn Market,' a funeral harangue on Franklin, for whom the National Assembly has lately gone three days in black.

The Motier and Lepelletier tables still groan with viands ; CHAP. XII roofs ringing with patriotic toasts. On the fifth evening, which July 14-18, is the Christian Sabbath, there is a universal Ball. Paris, 1790 out of doors and in, man, woman and child, is jiggling it, to the sound of harp and four-stringed fiddle. The hoaricstheaded man will tread one other measure, under this nether Moon ; speechless nurselings, infants as we call them, νήπια τέκνα, crow in arms ; and sprawl out numb-plump little limbs, —impatient for muscularity, they know not why. The stiffest balk bends more or less ; all joists creak.

Or out, on the Earth's breast itself, behold the Ruins of the Bastille. All lamplit, allegorically decorated ; a Tree of Liberty sixty feet high ; and Phrygian Cap on it, of size enormous, under which King Arthur and his round-table might have dined ! In the depths of the background is a single lugubrious lamp, rendering dim-visible one of your iron cages, half-buried, and some Prison stones,—Tyranny vanishing downwards, all gone but the skirt : the rest wholly lamp-festoons, trees real or of pasteboard ; in the similitude of a fairy grove ;
 with this inscription, readable to runner : 'Ici l'on danse, Dancing Here.' As indeed had been obscurely foreshadowed by Cagliostro¹ prophetic Quack of Quacks, when he, four years ago, quitted the grim durance ;—to fall into a grimmer, of the Roman Inquisition, and not quit it.

But, after all, what is this Bastille business to that of the Champs Élysées ! Thither, to these Fields well named Elysian, all feet tend. It is radiant as day with festooned lamps ; little oil-cups, like variegated fire-flies, daintily illumine the highest leaves : trees there are all sheeted with variegated fire, shedding far a glimmer into the dubious wood. There, under the free sky, do tight-limbed Federates, with fairest newfound sweethearts, elastic as Diana, and not of that coyness and tart humour of Diana, thread their jocund mazes, all through the ambrosial night ; and hearts were touched and fired ; and seldom surely had our old Planet, in that huge conic Shadow of hers, ' which goes beyond the Moon, and is named Night, ' curtained such a Ball-room. O if, according to Seneca, the very gods look down on a good man struggling with adversity, and smile ; what must they think of Five-and-twenty million indifferent ones victorious over it,—for eight days and more ?

¹ See his Lettre au Peuple Français (London, 1786).

BOOK I
July 14-18,
1790

In this way, and in such ways however, has the Feast of Pikes danced itself off gallant Federates wending homewards, towards every point of the compass, with feverish nerves, heart and head much heated, some of them, indeed as Dampmartin's elderly respectable friend from Strasburg quite 'burnt out with liquors,' and flickering towards extinction! The Feast of Pikes has danced itself off, and become defunct, and the ghost of a Feast,—nothing of it now remaining but this vision in men's memory, and the place that knew it (for the slope of that Champ-de-Mars is crumbled to half the original height²) now knowing it no more. Undoubtedly, one of the memorablest National Hightides. Never or hardly ever, as we said, was Oath sworn with such heart-effusion, emphasis, and expenditure of joyance, and then it was broken irremediably within year and day. Ah why? When the swearing of it was so heavenly joyful, bosom clasped to bosom, and Five-and-twenty million hearts all burning together, O ye inexorable Destinies, why?—Partly because it was sworn with such overjoyance, but chiefly, indeed, for an older reason—that Sin had come into the world, and Misery by Sin! These Five and twenty millions, if we will consider it, have now henceforth, with that Phrygian Cap of theirs, no force over them to bind and guide, neither in them, more than heretofore, is guiding force or rule of just living—how then, while they all go rushing at such a pace, on unknown ways with no bridle, towards no aim can hurlyburly unutterable fail! For verily not Federation rosepink is the colour of this Earth and her work—not by outbursts of noble-sentiment, but with far other ammunition, shall a man front the world.

But how wise, in all cases, to 'husband your fire', to keep it deep down, rather, as genial radical heat! Explosions, the forciblest, and never so well-directed, are questionable, far oftener futile, always frightfully wasteful—but think of a man, of a Nation of men, spending its whole stock of fire in one ostentatious Firework! So have we seen fond weddings (for individuals like Nations, have their Hightides) celebrated with an outburst of triumph and demerol, of which the elderly shook their heads. Better had a serious cheerfulness been; for the enterprise was great. Fond pair! the more triumphant ye feel, and victorious over terrestrial evil, which seems all abolished, the wider-eyed will your disappointment be to find terrestrial evil still extant. 'And why extant?' will each of you cry: 'Because my false mate has played the traitor: evil was abolished; I, for one, meant faithfully, and did, or would have done!' Whereby the over-sweet moon of honey changes itself into long years of vinegar: perhaps divulsive vinegar, like Hannibal's.

¹ Dampmartin to Fédération, L. 141-84.

² Delaune, Histoire de Paris vol. 25.

CHAP. XII
July 14-18,
1790

Shall we say, then, the French Nation has led Royalty, or wooed and teased poor Royalty to lead her, to the hymeneal Fatherland's Altar, in such over-sweet manner; and has, most thoughtlessly, to celebrate the nuptials with due shine and demonstration,—burnt her bed?

BOOK II
1700

future 'Alone' as he says, or almost alone, of all the old military Notabilities, he has not emigrated; but thinks always, in atrabiliar moments, that there will be nothing for him too but to cross the marches. He might cross, say, to Treves or Coblenz, where Exiled Princes will be one day ranking, or say, over into Luxemburg, where old Broglie lingers and lingers. Or is there not the great dim Deep of European Diplomacy; where your Calottes, your Breteuils are beginning to bower, dimly discernible?

With immeasurable confused outlooks and purposes with no clear purpose but this of still trying to do his Majesty's service, Bouillé waits; struggling what he can to keep his district loyal, his troops faithful, his garrisons furnished. He maintains, as yet, with his Cousin Lafayette some thin diplomatic correspondence, by letter and messenger; chivalrous constitutional professions on the one side, military gravity and brevity on the other, which thin correspondence one can see growing ever the thinner and hollower, towards the verge of entire vacuity.¹ A quick, choleric, sharply discerning stubbornly endeavouring man, with suppressed-explosive resolution, with valour, nay headlong audacity: a man who was more in his place, lionlike defending those Windward Isles, or, as with military tiger spring, clutching Nevis and Montserrat from the English,—than here in this suppressed condition, muzzled and fettered by diplomatic packthreads; looking out for a civil war, which may never arrive. Few years ago Bouillé was to have led a French East Indian Expedition and reconquered or conquered Pondicherry and the Kingdoms of the Sun: but the whole world is suddenly changed, and he with it; Destiny willed it not in that way, but in this

CHAPTER II

ARRIERS AND ARISTOCRATS

INDEED, as to the general outlook of things, Bouillé himself augurs not well of it. The French Army, ever since those old Bastille days, and earlier, has been universally in the question ablest state, and growing daily worse. Discipline, which is at all times a kind of miracle, and works by faith, broke down then ; one sees not with what near prospect of recovering itself. The Gardes Françaises played a deadly game ; but how they won it, and wear the prizes of it, all men know. In that general overturn, we saw the hired Fighters refuse to fight. The very Swiss of Château-Vieux, which indeed is a kind of French Swiss, from Geneva and the Pays de Vaud, are understood to have declined. Deserters glided over ; Royal-Allemand itself looked disconsolate, though stanch of purpose. In a word, we there saw Military Rule, in the shape of poor Besenval with that convulsive unmanageable Camp of his, pass two martyr-days on the Champ-de-Mars ; and then, veiling itself, so to speak, 'under cloud of night,' depart 'down the left bank of the Seine,' to seek refuge elsewhere ; this ground having clearly become too hot for it.

¹ Essai sur l'Armée (London 1797), l. c. 8.

But what new ground to seek, what remedy to try ? Quarters that were 'uninfected' : this doubtless, with judicious strictness of drilling, were the plan. Alas, in all quarters and places, from Paris onward to the remotest hamlet, is infection, is seditious contagion : inhaled, propagated by contact and converse, till the dullest soldier catch it ! There is speech of men in uniform with men not in uniform ; men in uniform read journals, and even write in them.¹ There are public petitions or remonstrances, private emissaries and associations ; there is discontent, jealousy, uncertainty, sullen suspicious humour. The whole French Army, fermenting in dark heat, glooms ominous, boding good to no one.

So that, in the general social dissolution and revolt, we are to have this deepest and dimest kind of it, a revolting soldiery ? Barren, desolate to look upon is this same business of revolt under all its aspects ; but how infinitely more so, when it takes the aspect of military mutiny ! The very implement of rule and restraint, whereby all the rest was managed and held in order, has become precisely the frightfullest immeasurable implement of misrule ; like the element of Fire, our indispensable all-ministering servant, when it gets the mastery, and becomes conflagration. Discipline we called a kind of miracle : in fact, is it not miraculous how one man moves hundreds of thousands ; each unit of whom, it may be, loves him not, and singly fears him not, yet has to obey him, to go hither or go thither, to march and halt, to give death, and even to receive it, as if a Fate had spoken; and the word-of-command becomes, almost in the literal sense, a magic word?

¹ See Newspapers of July 1789 (in Hist. Parl. ii. 35), etc.

BOOK II
1790

Which magic word, again, if it be once forgotten; the spell of it once broken! The legions of assiduous moistering spirits rise on you now as menacing fiends, your free orderly arena becomes a tumult place of the Nether Pit, and the hapless magician is rent limb from limb. Military mobs are mobs with muskets in their hands, and also with death hanging over their heads, for death is the penalty of disobedience, and they have disobeyed. And now if all mobs are properly frenzies, and work frenetically with mad fits of hot and of cold, fierce rage alternating so incoherently with panic terror, consider what your military mob will be, with such a conflict of duties and penalties, whirled between remorse and fury, and for the hot fit, loaded fire-arms in its hand! To the soldier himself, revolt is frightful, and oftenest perhaps pitiable, and yet so dangerous, it can only be hated, cannot be pitied. An anomalous class of mortals these poor Hired Killers! With a frankness, which to the Moralist in these times seems surprising, they have sworn to become machines, and nevertheless they are still partly men. Let no prudent person in authority remind them of this latter fact, but always let force let in justice above all stop short clearly on this side of the rebounding point! Soldiers, as we often say, do revolt: were it not so, several things which are transient in this world might be perennial.

Over and above the general quarrel which all sons of Adam maintain with their lot here below, the grievances of the French soldiery reduce themselves to two. First that their Officers are Aristocrats, secondly, that they cheat them of their Pay. Two grievances, or rather we might say one, capable of becoming a hundred, for in that single first proposition that the Officers are Aristocrats what a multitude of corollaries lie ready! It is a bottomless ever flowing fountain of grievances this, what you may call a general raw material of grievance wherefrom individual grievance after grievance will daily body itself forth. Nay there will even be a kind of comfort in getting it, from time to time so embodied. Peculation of one's Pay!

It

It is embodied ; made tangible, made denounceable ; exhalable, if only in angry words.

For unluckily that grand fountain of grievances does exist : Aristocrats almost all our Officers necessarily are ; they have it in the blood and bone. By the law of the case, no man can pretend to be the pitifulest lieutenant of militia till he have first verified, to the satisfaction of the Lion-King, a Nobility of four generations. Not nobility only, but four generations of it : this latter is the improvement hit upon, in comparatively late years, by a certain War-minister much pressed for commissions.¹ An improvement which did relieve the oppressed War-minister, but which split France still further into yawning contrasts of Commonalty and Nobility, nay of new Nobility and old ; as if already with your new and old, and then with your old, older, and oldest, there were not contrasts and discrepencies enough ; —the general clash whereof men now see and hear, and in the singular whirlpool, all contrasts gone together to the bottom ! Gone to the bottom or going ; with uproar, without return ; going everywhere save in the Military section of things ; and there, it may be asked, can they hope to continue always at the top ? Apparently, not.

It is true, in a time of external Peace, when there is no fighting, but only drilling, this question, How you rise from the ranks, may seem theoretical rather. But in reference to the Rights of Man it is continually practical. The soldier has sworn to be faithful not to the King only, but to the Law and the Nation. Do our commanders love the Revolution ? ask all soldiers. Unhappily no, they hate it, and love the Counter-Revolution. Young epanletted men, with quality-blood in them, poisoned with quality-pride, do sniff openly, with indignation struggling to become contempt, at our Rights of Man, as at some new-fangled cobweb, which shall be brushed down again. Old Officers, more cautious, keep silent, with closed uncurl'd lips ; but one guesses what is passing within. Nay who knows, how, under the plausiblest word of command, might lie Counter-Revolution itself, sale to Exiled Princes and the Austrian Kaiser : treacherous Aristocrats hoodwinking the small insight of us common men ?—In such manner works that general raw-material of grievance ; disastrous ; instead of trust and reverence, breeding hate, endless suspicion, the impossibility of commanding and obeying And now when this second more tangible grievance has articulated itself universally in the mind of the common man. Peculation of his Pay! Peculation of the despicable sort does exist, and has long existed; but, unless the new-declared Rights of Man, and all rights whatsoever, be a cobweb, it shall no longer exist.

¹ Dampmartin, Evénements, i. 89.

BOOK II
179

The French Military System seems dying a sorrowful suicidal death. Nay more, citizen, as is natural, ranks himself against citizen in this cause. The soldier finds audience, of numbers and sympathy unlimited, among the Patriot lower-classes. Nor are the higher wanting to the officer. The officer still dresses and perfumes himself for such sad unemigrated society as there may still be; and speaks his woes,—which woes, are they not Majesty's and Nature's? Speaks, at the same time, his gay defiance, his firm set resolution. Citizens, still more Citizenesses, see the right and the wrong, not the Military System alone will die by suicide, but much along with it. As was said, there is yet possible a deeper overturn than any yet witnessed. that deepest upturn of the black burning sulphurous stratum whereon all rests and grows!

But how these things may act on the rude soldier mind, with its military pedantries, its inexperience of all that lies off the parade-ground; inexperience as of a child, yet fierceness of a man, and vehemence of a Frenchman! It is long that secret communings in mess room and guard room, sour looks, thousandfold petty vexations between commander and commanded, measure everywhere the weary military day. Ask Captain Dampmartin; an authentic, ingenious literary officer of horse; who loves the Reign of Liberty, after a sort: yet has had his heart grieved to the quick many times, in the hot South Western region and elsewhere, and has seen not, civil battle by daylight and by torchlight, and anarchy hateful than death. How insubordinate Troopers, with drink in their heads, meet Captain Dampmartin and another on the ramparts, where there is no escape or side-path; and make military salute punctually, for we look calm on them; yet make it in a snappish, almost insulting manner. how one morning they 'leave all their chamouis shirts' and superfluous buffs, which they are tired of, laid in piles at the Captains' doors; whereat 'we laugh,' as the ass does eating thistles: nay how they 'knot two forage-cords together,' with universal noisy

CONSTITUTION BUILDING AND THE UNLUCKY FEATHER.

(The Abbe Seyès, the Three Estates, and the Mischief.)

Cards—Louis XVI, Marie Antoinette (King and Queen of Hearts), Cardinal de Rohan and Comtesse de Lamotte (Knave and Queen of Diamonds), Robespierre and Danton (Knave and King of Clubs), Marat (Knave of Spades).

•

•

noisy cursing, with evident intent to hang the Quartermaster : —all this the worthy Captain, looking on it through the ruddy-and-sable of fond regretful memory, has slowly written down.¹ Men growl in vague discontent ; officers sling up their commissions and emigrate in disgust.

Or let us ask another literary Officer ; not yet Captain ; Sublieutenant only, in the Artillery Regiment La Père : a young man of twenty-one ; not mentitled to speak ; the name of him is Napoleon Buonaparte. To such height, of Sublieutenancy has he now got promoted, from Brienne School, five years ago ; ' being found qualified in mathematics by La Place.' He is lying at Auxonne, in the West, in these months ; not sumptuously lodged—' in the house of a Barber, to whose wife he did not pay the customary degree of respect ' ; or even over at the Pavillon, in a chamber with bare walls ; the only furniture an indifferent ' bed without curtains, two chairs, and in the recess of a window a table covered with books and papers : his Brother Louis sleeps on a coarse mattress in an adjoining room.' However, he is doing something great : writing his first Book or Pamphlet,—eloquent vehement Letter to M. Matteo Buttafuoco, our Corsican Deputy, who is not a Patriot, but an Aristocrat unworthy of Deputyship. Joly of Dôle is Publisher. The literary Sublieutenant corrects the proofs : ' sets out on foot from Auxonne every morning at four o'clock, for Dôle : after looking over the proofs, he partakes of an extremely frugal breakfast with Joly, and immediately prepares for returning to his Garrison ; where he arrives before noon, having thus walked above twenty miles in the course of the morning.'

This Sublieutenant can remark that, in drawing-rooms, on streets, on highways, at inns, everywhere men's minds are ready to kindle into a flame. That a Patriot, if he appear in the drawing-room, or amid a group of officers, is liable enough to be discouraged, so great is the majority against him : but no sooner does he get into the street, or among the soldiers, than he feels again as if the whole Nation were with him. That after the famous Oath, To the King, to the Nation, and Law, there was a great change ; that before this, if ordered to fire on the people, he for one would have done it in the King's name ; but that after this, in the Nation's name, he would not have done it. Likewise that the Patriot officers, more numerous too in the Artillery and Engineers than elsewhere were few in number; yet that having the soldiers on their side, they ruled the regiment, and did often deliver the Aristocrat brother officer out of peril and strait. One day, for example, 'a member of our own mess roused the mob, by singing from the windows of our dining room, O Richard, O my King, and I had to snatch him from their fury.'¹

¹ Dampmartin, Exercices, i. 122-46.

BOOK II
1790

All which let the reader multiply by ten thousand; and spread it, with slight variations, over all the camps and garrisons of France. The French Army seems on the verge of universal mutiny.

Universal mutiny! There is in that what may well make Patriot Constitutionalism and an august Assembly shudder. Something behoves to be done, yet what to do no man can tell. Mirabeau proposes even that the Soldier, having come to such a pass, be forthwith disbanded, the whole Two Hundred and Eighty Thousand of them; and organised anew.² Impossible this, in so sudden a manner! cry all men. And yet literally, answer we, it is inevitable, in one manner or another. Such an army, with its four generation Nobles, its speculated Pay, and men knotting forage-cords to hang their Quartermaster, cannot subsist beside such a Revolution. Your alternative is a slow pining chronic dissolution and new organisation; or a swift decisive one, the agonies spread over years, or concentrated into an hour. With a Mirabeau for Minister or Governor, the latter had been the choice, with no Mirabeau for Governor, it will naturally be the former.

CHAPTER III

BOULLÉ AT METZ

To Boullé, in his North Eastern circle none of these things are altogether hid. Many times slight over the matches gleams out on him as a fast guidance in such bewilderment: nevertheless he continues here, struggling always to hope the best.

¹ N. xviii, H. terre de Napoion L. 471 Les Cases, le met (transl. of Les Cases L. 1 of Napoion L. 23 31).

² Altogether 1790 No. 233.

not from new organisation, but from happy Counter-Revolution and return to the old. For the rest, it is clear to him that this same National Federation, and universal swearing and fraternising of People and Soldiers, has done 'incalculable mischief.' So much that fermented secretly has hereby got vent, and become open : National Guards and Soldiers of the line, solemnly embracing one another on all parade-fields, drinking, swearing patriotic oaths, fall into disorderly street-processions, constitutional unmilitary exclamations and hurrahings. On which account the Regiment Picardie, for one, has to be drawn out in the square of the barracks, here at Metz, and sharply harangued by the General himself ; but expresses penitence.¹

Far and near, as accounts testify, insubordination has begun grumbling louder and louder. Officers have been seen shut up in their mess-rooms ; assaulted with clamorous demands, not without menaces. The insubordinate ringleader is dismissed with 'yellow furlough,' yellow infamous thing they call cartouche jaune : but ten new ringleaders rise in his stead, and the yellow cartouche ceases to be thought disgraceful. 'Within a fortnight,' or at furthest a month, of that sublime Feast of Pikes, the whole French Army, demanding Arrears, forming Reading Clubs, frequenting Popular Societies, is in a state which Bouillé can call by no name but that of mutiny. Bouillé knows it as few do ; and speaks by dire experience. Take one instance instead of many.

It is still an early day of August, the precise date now undiscoverable, when Bouillé, about to set out for the waters of Aix-la-Chapelle, is once more suddenly summoned to the barracks of Metz. The soldiers stand ranged in fighting order, muskets loaded, the officers all there on compulsion ; and required with many-voiced emphasis to have their arrears paid. Picardie was penitent ; but we see it has relapsed : the wide space bristles and lours with mere mutinous armed men. Brave Bouillé advances to the nearest Regiment, opens his commanding lips to harangue ; obtains nothing but querulous-indignant discordance, and the sound of so many thousand livres legally due. The moment is trying ; there are some ten thousand soldiers now in Metz, and one spirit seems to have spread among them.

¹ Bouillé, Mémoires, i. 113.

BOOK II
Aug 1790

tions towards such, are universal over France Dampmartin with his knotted forage cords and piled chamois jackets is at Strashurg in the South East, in these same days or rather nights Royal Champagne is 'shouting Vive la Nation au diable les Aristocrates with some thirty lit candles' at Hesdin on the far North West 'The garrison of Bitche' Deputy Rewbell is sorry to state 'went out of the town with drums beating, deposed its officers, and then returned into the town sahre in hand '¹ Ought not a National Assembly to occupy itself with these objects? Military France is every where full of sour inflammatory humour which exhales itself fuliginously this way or that a whole continent of smoking flax, which blown on here or there by any angry wind might so easily start into a blaze into a continent of fire

Constitutional Patriotism is in deep natural alarm at these things The august Assembly sits diligently deliberating, dare nowise resolve with Mirabeau on an instantaneous disbandment and extinction, finds that a course of palliatives is easier But at least and lowest this grievance of the Arrears shall be rectified A plan much noised of in those days under the name 'Decree of the Sixth of August' has been devised for that Inspectors shall visit all armies, and with certain elected corporals and 'soldiers able to write' verify what arrears and peculations do lie due and make them good Well if in this way the smoky heat be cooled down, if it be not, as we say, ventilated over much or by sparks and collision some where sent up!

CHAPTER IV

ARREARS AT NANCI

WE are to remark, however that of all districts this of Bouillé seems the inflammablest It was always to Bouillé and Metz that Royalty would fly Austria lies near, here more than elsewhere must the disunited People look over the borders into a dim sea of Foreign Politics and Diplomacies with hope or apprehension with mutual exasperation

It was but in these days that certain Austrian troops march

¹ Une rue [un II de la L. vii. 27].

BOOK II
Aug 1799

of the eye, tones of the voice, and minutest commissions or omissions, it will jot-down somewhat, to account, under the head of sundries, which always swells the sum total. For example, in April last, in these times of preliminary Federation, when National Guards and Soldiers were everywhere swearing brotherhood, and all France was locally federating, preparing for the grand National Feast of Pikes, it was observed that these Nanci Officers threw cold water on the whole brotherly business, that they first hung back from appearing at the Nanci Federation, then did appear, but in mere redingote and undress, with scarcely a clean shirt on, nay that one of them, as the National Colours flaunted by in that solemn moment, did, without visible necessity, take occasion to spit!

Small 'sundries as per journal,' but then incessant ones! The Aristocrat Municipality, pretending to be Constitutional, keeps mostly quiet, not so the Daughter Society, the five-thousand adult male Patriots of the place still less the five thousand female not so the young, whiskered or whiskerless, four generation Noblesse in epaulettes, the grim Patriot Swiss of Château Vieux, effervescent infant of Regiment du Roi, hot troopers of Mestre-de Camp! Walled Nanci, which stands so bright and trim, with its straight streets spacious squares, and Stanislaus' Architecture, on the fruitful alluvium of the Meurthe, so bright, amid the yellow cornfields in these Reaper Months—is inwardly but a den of discord, anxiety, inflammability, not far from exploding. Let Bouillé look to it. If that universal military heat, which we liken to a vast continent of smoking flax, do anywhere take fire, his beard, here in Lorraine and Nanci, may the most readily of all get singed by it.

Bouillé, for his part, is busy enough but only with the general superintendence, getting his praefixed Salm, and all other still tolerable Regiments, marched out of Metz, to southward towns and villages, to rural Cantonments as at Vic, Marais and thereabout by the still waters, where is plenty of horse-forage, sequestered parade ground, and the soldier's speculative faculty can be stilled by drilling. Salm as we said, received only half payment of arrears, naturally not without grumbling. Nevertheless that scene of the drawn sword may, after all, have raised Bouillé in the mind of Salm, for men and soldiers love intrepidity and swift inflexible decision, even when they suffer by it. As indeed is not this fundamentally the quality of qualities for a man? A quality which by itself is next to nothing, since inferior animals, asses, dogs, even mules have it; yet, in due combination, it is the indispensable basis of all.

Of Nanci and its heats, Bouillé, commander of the whole, knows nothing special: understands generally that the troops in that City are perhaps the worst.¹ The Officers there have it all, as they have long had it, to themselves; and unhappily seem to manage it ill. 'Fifty yellow furloughs,' given out in one batch, do surely betoken difficulties. But what was Patriotism to think of certain light-fencing Fusileers 'set on,' or supposed to be set on, 'to insult the Grenadier-club,'—considerate speculative Grenadiers and that reading-room of theirs? With shoutings, with hootings; till the speculative Grenadier drew his side-arms too; and there ensued battery and duels! Nay more, are not swashbucklers of the same stamp 'sent out' visibly, or sent out, presumably, now in the dress of Soldiers, to pick quarrels with the Citizens; now, disguised as Citizens, to pick quarrels with the Soldiers? For a certain Roussière, expert in fence, was taken in the very fact; four Officers (presumably of tender years) hounding him on, who thereupon fled precipitately! Fence-master Roussière, haled to the guardhouse, had sentence of three months' imprisonment: but his comrades demanded 'yellow furlough' for him of all persons; nay thereafter they produced him on parade; capped him in paper-helmet, inscribed Iscariot; marched him to the gate of the City; and there sternly commanded him to vanish for evermore.

On all which suspicions, accusations and noisy procedure, and on enough of the like continually accumulating, the Officer could not but look with disdainful indignation; perhaps disdainfully express the same in words, and 'soon after fly over to the Austrians.'

So that when it here, as elsewhere, comes to the question of Arrears, the humour and procedure is of the bitterest. Regiment Mestre-de-Camp getting, amid loud clamour, some three gold louis a-man,—which have, as usual, to be borrowed from the Municipality; Swiss Château-Vieux applying for the like,

¹ Bouillé, i. c. 9.

BOOK II but getting instead instantaneous courrois, or cat-o' nine-tails Aug 1799 with subsequent unsufferable hisses from the women and children. Regiment du Roi, sick of hope deferred, at length seizing its military chest, and marching it to quarters, but next day marching it back again, through streets all struck silent—unordered parading and clamours not without strong liquor, oburgation, insubordination, your military ranked Arrangement going all (as the Typographers say of set types, in a similar case) rapidly *to pie!*¹ Such is Nancy in these early days of August, the sublime Feast of Pikes not yet a month old.

Constitutional Patriotism, at Paris and elsewhere, may well quake at the news. War Minister Latour du Pin runs breathless to the National Assembly, with a written message that 'all is burning, tout brule, tout presse'. The National Assembly, on the spur of the instant, renders such Décret, and 'order to submit and repent,' as he requires, if it will avail anything.
 On the other hand Journalism through all its throats, gives hoarse outcry, condemnatory, elegiac-applausive. The Forty eight Sections lift up voices, sonorous Brewer, or call him now Colonel Santerre is not silent, in the Faubourg Saint Antoine. For, meanwhile, the Nancy Soldiers have sent a Deputation of Ten, furnished with documents and proofs, who will tell another story than the 'all is burning' one.
 Which deputed Ten before ever they reach the Assembly Hall assiduous Latour du Pin picks up, and, on warrant of Mayor Bailly, claps in prison! Most unconstitutionally, for they had officers' furloughs. Whereupon Saint Antoine, in indignant uncertainty of the future closes its shops. Is Bouillé a traitor, then sold to Austria? In that case these poor private sentinels have revolted mainly out of Patriotism?

New Deputation Deputation of National Guardsmen now, sets forth from Nancy to enlighten the Assembly. It meets the old deputed Ten returning quite unexpectedly unchanged, and proceeds thereupon with better prospects, but effects nothing. Deputations Government Messengers Orderlies at hand gallop, Marine thousand voiced Humours go vibrating continually, backwards and forwards—scattering distraction.
 Not till the last week of August does M. de Malseigne selected as Inspector, get down to the scene of mutiny, with Authority, with cash, and 'Decree of the Sixth of August.' He now shall see these Arrears liquidated, justice done, or at least tumult quashed.

CHAP. IV
Aug. 1790

CHAPTER V

INSPECTOR MALSEIGNE

..

Of Inspector Malseigne we discern, by direct light, that he is 'of Herculean stature'; and infer, with probability, that he is of truenlent mustachioed aspeet,—for Royalist Officers now leave the upper lip unshaven; that he is of indomitable bull-heart; and also, unfortunately, of thiek bull-head.

On Tuesday the 24th of August 1790, he opens session as Inspecting Commissioner; meets those 'elected corporals, and soldiers that can write.' He finds the accounts of Château-Vieux to be complex; to require delay and reference: he takes to haranguing, to reprimanding; ends amid audible grumbling. Next morning, he resumes session, not at the Townhall as prudent Municipals counselled, but once more at the barracks. Unfortunately Château-Vieux, grumbling all night, will now hear of no delay or reference; from reprimanding on his part, it goes to bullying,—answered with continual cries of 'Jugez tout de suite, Judge it at once'; whereupon M. de Malseigne will off in a huff. But lo, Château-Vieux, swarming all about the barraek-court, has sentries at every gate; M. de Malseigne, demanding egress, cannot get it, not though Commandant Denoue baeks him, can get only 'Jugez tout de suite.' Here is a nodus!

Bull-hearted M. de Malseigne draws his sword; and will force egress. Confused splutter. M. de Malseigne's sword breaks: he snatches Commandant Denoue's: the sentry is wounded. M. de Malseigne, whom one is loth to kill, does force egress,—followed by Château-Vieux all in disarray; a spectacle to Nanci. M. de Malseigne walks at a sharp pace, yet never runs; wheeling from time to time, with menaces and movements of fence; and so reaches Denoue's house, unhurt; which house Château-Vieux, in an agitated manner, invests,—hindered as yet from entering, by a crowd of officers formed on the staircase. M. de Malseigne retreats by baek ways

BOOK II
Aug 28-th
1890

ways to the Townhall flustered though undaunted amid an escort of National Guards From the Townhall he on the morrow emits fresh orders fresh plans of settlement with Château Vieux, to none of which will Château Vieux listen whereupon he finally amid noise enough emits order that Château Vieux shall march on the morrow morning and quarter at Sarre Louis Château Vieux flatly refuses marching M de Malseigne 'takes act' due notarial protest of such refusal — it happily that may avail him

This is the end of Thursday and indeed of M de Malseigne's Inspectorship which has lasted some fifty hours To such length in fifty hours has he unfortunately brought it Mestre-de Camp and Regiment du Roi hang as it were fluttering Château Vieux is clean gone in what way we see Over night an Aide de Camp of Lafayette's stationed here for such emergency sends swift emissaries far and wide to summon National Guards The slumber of the country is broken by clattering hoofs by loud fraternal knockings everywhere the Constitutional Patriot must clutch his fighting gear and take the road for Nancy

And thus the Herculean Inspector has sat all Thursday among terror struck Municipals a centre of confused noise all Thursday Friday and till Saturday towards noon Château Vieux in spite of the notarial protest will not march a step As many as four thousand National Guards are dropping or pouring in uncertain what is expected of them still more uncertain what will be obtained of them For all is uncertainty commotion and suspicion there goes a word that Bouillé beginning to bestir himself in the rural Cantonments eastward is but a Royalist traitor that Château Vieux and Patriotism are sold to Austria of which latter M de Malseigne is probably some agent. Mestre-de Camp and Roi flutter still more questionably Château Vieux far from marching 'waves red flags out of two carriages' in a passionate manner along the streets, and next morning answers its Officers 'Pay us then and we will march with you to the world's end!'

Under which circumstances towards noon on Saturday M de Malseigne thinks it were good perhaps to inspect the ramparts, —on horseback. He mounts accordingly with escort of three troopers. At the gate of the City he bids two of them wait for his return, and with the third a trooper to be depended upon,

CHAP. V
Aug. 20, 1790

upon, he—gallops off for Lunéville; where lies a certain Carbineer Regiment not yet in a mutinous state! The two left troopers soon get uneasy; discover how it is, and give the alarm. Mestre-de-Camp, to the number of a hundred, saddles in frantic haste, as if sold to Austria; gallops out pellucl in chase of its Inspector. And so they spur, and the Inspector spurs; careering, with noise and jingle, up the valley of the River Meurthe, towards Lunéville and the midday sun: through an astonished country; indeed almost to their own astonishment. ••

What a hunt; Actæon-like;—which Actæon de Malseigne happily gains. To arms, ye Carbineers of Lunéville; to chastise mutinous men, insulting your General Officer, insulting your own quarters;—above all things, fire soon, lest there be parleying and ye refuse to fire! The Carbineers fire soon, exploding upon the first stragglers of Mestre-de-Camp; who shriek at the very flash, and fall back hastily on Nancy, in a state not far from distraction. Panic and fury: sold to Austria without an if; so much per regiment, the very sums can be specified; and traitorous Malseigne is fled! Help, O Heaven; help, thou Earth,—ye unwashed Patriots; ye too are sold like us!

Effervescent Regiment du Roi primes its firelocks, Mestre-de-Camp saddles wholly; Commandant Denoue is seized, is flung in prison with a 'canvas-shirt (sarreau de toile)' about him; Château-Vieux bursts-up the magazines; distributes 'three thousand fusils' to a Patriot people; Austria shall have a hot bargain. Alas, the unhappy hunting-dogs, as we said, have hunted away their huntsman; and do now run howling and baying, on what trail they know not; nigh rabid!

And so there is tumultuous march of men, through the night; with halt on the heights of Flinval, whence Lunéville can be seen all illuminated. Then there is parley, at four in the morning; and reparley; finally there is agreement: the Carbineers gave in; Malseigne is surrendered, with apologies on all sides. After weary confused hours, he is even got under way; the Lunévillers all turning out, in the idle Sunday, to see such departure: home-going of mutinous Mestre-de-Camp with its Inspector captive. Mestre-de-Camp accordingly marches; the Lunévillers look. See! at the corner of the first street, our Inspector bounds off again, bull-hearted as he is; amid the slash of sabres, the crackle of musketry; and escapes,

BOOK II
Aug 29,
1790

escapes, full gallop, with only a ball lodged in his buff jerkin. The Herculean man¹ And yet it is an escape to no purpose For the Carbineers, to whom after the hardest Sunday's ride on record, he has come circling back, 'stand deliberating by their nocturnal watch fires', deliberating of Austria, of traitors, and the rage of Mestre-de-Camp. So that, on the whole, the next sight we have is that of M. de Malseigne, on the Monday afternoon, faring bull hearted through the streets of Nanci, in open carriage, a soldier standing over him with drawn sword, amid the 'furies of the women,' hedges of National Guards, and confusion of Babel to the Prison beside Com-mandant Denoue! That finally is the lodging of Inspector Malseigne!

Surely it is time Bouillé were drawing near. The Country all round, alarmed with watch fires, illuminated towns, and marching and rout, has been sleepless these several nights. Nanci, with its uncertain National Guards, with its distributed fusils, mutinous soldiers, black panic and red-hot ire, is not a City but a Bedlam.

CHAPTER VI

BOUILLÉ AT NANCEI

HASTE with help, thou brave Bouillé! if swift help come not, all is now verily 'burning'; and may burn,—to what lengths and breadths! Much, in these hours, depends on Bouillé, as it shall now fare with him, the whole Future may be this way or be that. If, for example, he were to loiter dubitating, and not come, if he were to come, and fail—the whole Soldiery of France to blaze into mutiny, National Guards going some this way, some that; and Royalism to draw its rapier, and Sansculottism to snatch its pike—and the Spirit of Jacobinism, as yet young girl with sun rays, to grow instantaneously mature, girl with hell fire,—as mortals in one night of deadly crisis, have had their heads turned gray!

Brave Bouillé is advancing fast, with the old inflexibility; gathering himself, unhappily 'in small affluences,' from East,

¹ Deux Ans, v. 26-51; Newspapers and Documents (a History of the Revolution 34-162)
[from] from West and North; and now on Tuesday morning, the last day of the month, he stands all concentrated, unhappily still in small force, at the village of Frouarde, within some few miles. Son of Adam with a more dubious task before him is not in the world this Tuesday morning. A weltering inflammable sea of doubt and peril, and Bouillé sure of simply one thing, his own determination. Which one thing, indeed,

CHAP. VI
Aug. 31,
1790

BOUILLÉ.

may be worth many. He puts a most firm face on the matter: 'Submission, or unsparing battle and destruction; twenty-four hours to make your choice': this was the tenor of his Proclamation; thirty copies of which he sent yesterday to Nancy:—all which, we find, were intercepted and not posted.¹

Nevertheless, at half-past eleven this morning, seemingly by way of answer, there does wait on him at Frouarde some

¹ Compare Bouillé, Mémoires, i. 153-76; Deux Ann., v. 251-71; Hist. Parl. ubi suprà.

BOOK II
Aug 31,
1790

are in a state of nearly distracted uncertainty, the populace, armed and unarmed, roll openly delirious,—betrayed, sold to the Austrians, sold to the Aristocrats. There are loaded cannon, with lit matches, among them, and Bouillé's vanguard is halted within thirty paces of the Gate. Command dwells not in that mad inflammable mass; which smoulders and tumbles there, in blind smoky rage, which will not open the Gate when summoned; says it will open the cannon's throat sooner!—'Cannonade not, O Friends, or be it through my body! cries heroic young Desilles, young Captain of Roi, clapping the murderous engine in his arms, and holding it. Château Vieux Swiss, by main force, with oaths and menaces, wrench off the heroic youth; who undaunted, amid still louder oaths, seats himself on the touch hole. Amid still louder oaths, with ever louder clangour,—and, alas, with the loud crackle of first one, and then of three other muskets; which explode into his body; which roll it in the dust,—and do also, in the loud madness of such moment, bring lit cannon match to ready priming; and so, with one thunderous belch of grape-shot, blast some fifty of Bouillé's vanguard into air!

Fatal! That sputter of the first musket shot has kindled such a cannon shot, such a death blaze; and all is now red-hot madness, conflagration as of Tophet. With demoniac rage, the Bouillé vanguard storms through that Gate Stanislaus; with fiery sweep, sweeps Mutiny clear away, to death, or into shelters and cellars; from which latter, again, Mutiny continues firing. The ranked Regiments hear it in their meadow; they rush back again through the nearest Gate; Bouillé gallops in, distracted, inaudible,—and now has begun in Nanci, as in that doomed Hall of the Nibelungen, 'a murder grim and great'

Miserable—such scene of dismal aimless madness as the anger of Heaven but rarely permits among men! From cellar or from garret, from open street in front, from successive corners of cross streets on each hand, Château Vieux and Patriotism keep up the murderous rolling fire, on murderous not Unpatriotic fires. Your blue National Captain, riddled with balls, one hardly knows on whose side fighting requests to be laid on the colours to die—the patriotic Woman (name not given, deed surviving) screams to Château Vieux that it must not fire the other cannon; and even flings a pail of water on on it, since screaming avails not.¹ Thou shalt fight; thou shalt not fight; and with whom shalt thou fight! Could tumult awaken the old Dead, Burgundian Charles the Bold might stir from under that Rotunda of his: never since he, raging, sank in the ditches, and lost Life and Diamond, was such a noise heard here.

Three thousand, as some count, lie mangled, gory: the half of Château-Vieux has been shot, without need of Court-Martial. Cavalry, of Mestre-de-Camp or their foes, can do little. Regiment du Roi was persuaded to its barracks; stands there palpitating. Bouillé, armed with the terrors of the Law, and favoured of Fortune, finally triumphs. In two murderous hours, he has penetrated to the grand Squares, dauntless, though with loss of forty officers and five hundred men: the shattered remnants of Château-Vieux are seeking covert. Regiment du Roi, not effervescent now, alas no, but having effervesced, will offer to ground its arms; will 'march in a quarter of an hour.' Nay these poor effervesced require 'escort' to march with, and get it; though they are thousands strong, and have thirty ball-cartridges a man! The Sun is not yet down, when Peace, which might have come bloodless, has come bloody: the mutinous Regiments are on march, doleful, on their three Routes; and from Nanci rises wail of women and men, the voice of weeping and desolation; the City weeping for its slain who awaken not. These streets are empty but for victorious patrols.

Thus has Fortune, favouring the brave, dragged Bouillé, as himself says, out of such a frightful peril 'by the hair of the head.' An intrepid adamantine man, this Bouillé:—had he stood in old Broglie's place in those Bastille days, it might have been all different! He has extinguished mutiny, and immeasurable civil war. Not for nothing, as we see; yet at a rate which he and Constitutional Patriotism consider cheap. Nay, as for Bouillé, he, urged by subsequent contradiction which arose, declares coldly, it was rather against his own private mind, and more by public military rule of duty, that he did extinguish it,²—immeasurable civil war being now the only chance. Urged, we say, by subsequent contradiction! Civil war, indeed, is Chaos; and in all vital Chaos there is

¹ Deux Amis, v. 268.

² Bouillé, i. 175.

BOOK II murmurs, not loud but deep Here and in the neighbouring Sept. 17th Towns, 'flattened balls' picked from the streets of Nanci are worn at buttonholes balls flattened in carrying death to Patriotism, men wear them there in perpetual memento of revenge Mutincer deserters roam the woods, have to demand charity at the musket's end All is dissolution mutual rancour gloom and despair—till National Assembly Commissioners arrive with a steady gentle flame of Constitutionalism in their hearts, who gently lift up the downtrodden gently pull down the too uplifted, reinstate the Daughter Society recall the mutincer deserter, gradually levelling strive in all wise ways to smoothe and soothe With such gradual mild levelling on the one side, as with solemn funeral service cassolletes, Courts Martial National thanks on the other,—all that Official ity can do is done The buttonhole will drop its flat ball, the black ashes so far as may be, get green again

This is the 'Affair of Nanci', by some called the 'Massacre of Nanci',—properly speaking the unsightly wrong side of that thrice glorious Feast of Pikes the right side of which formed a spectacle for the very gods Right side and wrong lie always so near the one was in July, in August the other Theatres the theatres over in London are bright with their pasteboard simulacrum of that 'Federation of the French people,' brought out as Drums this of Nanci we may say, though not played in any pasteboard Theatre did for many months enact itself and even walk spectrally, in all French heads For the news of it fly pealing through all France awnkening in town and village in clubroom messroom to the utmost borders some mimic reflex or imaginative repetition of the business, always with the angry questionable assertion
 It was right It was wrong Whereby come controversies duels, embitterment, vain jargon, the hastening forward the nugmenting and intensifying of whatever new explosions lie in store for us

Meanwhile at this cost or at that the mutiny, as we say, is stilled The French Army has neither burst up in universal simultaneous delirium, nor been at once disbanded put an end to and made new again It must die in the chronic manner through years by inches with partial revolts as of Brest Sailors or the like which dare not spread, with men unhappy.

unhappy, insubordinate; officers unhappier, in Royalist mustachioes, taking horse, singly or in bodies, across the Rhine: ¹ sick dissatisfaction, sick disgust on both sides; the Army moribund, fit for no duty:—till it do, in that unexpected manner, phoenix-like, with long throes, get both dead and new-born; then start forth strong, nay stronger and even strongest.

CHAP. VI
Sept. 1790

Thus much was the brave Bouillé hitherto fated to do. Wherewith let him again fade into dimness; and, at Metz or the rural Cantonments, assiduously drilling, mysteriously diplomatising, in scheme within scheme, hover as formerly a faint shadow, the hope of Royalty.

¹ See Dampmartin, i. 249, etc. etc.

BOOK III
1700

would it willingly have tarnished itself into the dunness of old age?—Fearful: how we stand enveloped, deep-sunk, in that Mystery of TIME; and are Sons of Time, fashioned and woven out of Time; and on us, and on all that we have, or see, or do, is written—Rest not, Continue not, Forward to thy doom!

But in seasons of Revolution, which indeed distinguish themselves from common seasons by their velocity mainly, your miraculous Seven sleeper might, with miracle enough, awake sooner—not by the century, or seven years, need he sleep; often not by the seven months—Fancy, for example, some new Peter Klaus, sated with the jubilee of that Federation day, had lain down, say directly after the Blessing of Talleyrand, and, reckoning it all safe now, had fallen composedly asleep under the timber work of the Fatherland's Altar; to sleep there, not twenty-one years, but as it were year and day. The cannon-ading of Nancy, so far off, does not disturb him; nor does the black mortcloth, close at hand, nor the requiems chanted and minute-guns, incense-pans and concourse right over his head—none of these; but Peter sleeps through them all—Through one circling year, as we say; from July the 14th of 1790, till July the 17th of 1791—but on that latter day, no Klaus, nor most leaden Epimenides, only the Dead could continue sleeping—and so our miraculous Peter Klaus awakens—With what eyes, O Peter! Earth and sky have still their joyous July look, and the Champ-de-Mars is multitudinous with men: but the jubilee huzzaling has become Bedlam shrieking, of terror and revenge, not blessing of Talleyrand or any blessing, but cursing, imprecation and shrill wail; our cannon salvoes are turned to sharp shot; for swinging of incense-pans and fifty-three Departmental Banners, we have waving of the one sanguineous Drapeau Rouge—Thou foolish Klaus! The one lay in the other, the one was the other minus Time; even as Hannibal's rock rending vinegar lay in the sweet new wine—That sweet Federation was of last year; this sour Disunion is the self-same substance, only older by the appointed days.

No miraculous Klaus or Epimenides sleeps in these times; and yet, may not many a man, if of due opacity and levity, act the same miracle in a natural way; wo mean, with his eyes open?—Fyes has he, but he sees not, except what is under his

FOLLY & FATE

White King. Louis XVI.
 „ Queen. Marie Antoin
 „ Q.B. Cardinal de I
 „ Q.Kt. Count Fersen
 „ R. The Bastille (
 Black King. Terminus.
 „ Queen. Goddess of Re

BOOK III
17, 20-21

that he dare not join his order and fight.¹ Can he bear to have a Distaff, a Quenouille sent to him . say in copper plate shadow, by post , or fixed up in wooden reality over his gate-lintel as if he were no Hercules, but an Omphale ? Such scutcheon they forward to him diligently from beyond the Rhine ; till he too bestir himself and march, and in sour humour another Lord of Land is gone, not taking the Land with him Nay, what of Captains and emigrating Seigneurs ? There is not an angry word on any of those Twenty five million French tongues, and indeed not an angry thought in their hearts, but is some fraction of the great Battle Add many successions of angry words together, you have the manual brawl ; add brawls together, with the festering sorrows they leave, and they rise to riots and revolts One reverend thing after another ceases to meet reverence : in visible material combustion, chateau after chateau mounts up ; in spiritual invisible combustion, one authority after another With noise and glare, or noiselessly and unnoted, a whole Old System of things is vanishing piecemeal : the morrow thou shalt look, and it is not.

CHAPTER II

THE WAKEFUL

SLEEP who will, cradled in hope and short vision, like Lafayette, who, 'always in the danger done sees the last danger that will threaten him.'—Time is not sleeping, nor Time's seedfield

That sacred Herald's College of a new Dynasty ; we mean the Sixty and odd Billstickers with their leaden badges, are not sleeping Daily they, with pastepot and cross staff, new-clothe the walls of Paris in colours of the rainbow • authoritative-heraldic, as we say, or indeed almost magical thaumaturgic ; for no Placard-Journal that they paste but will convince some soul or souls of men The Hawkers brawl ; and the Ballad-singers • great Journalism blows and blusters, through all its throats, forth from Paris towards all corners of France, like an Aolus Cave ; keeping alive all manner of fires

¹ Thackeray's Journal

Throats or Journals there are, as men count,¹ to the number of some Hundred and thirty-three. Of various calibre; from your Chéniers, Gorsases, Camilles, down to your Marat, down now to your incipient Hébert of the Père Duchesne; these blow, with fierce weight of argument or quick light banter, for the Rights of Man: Durosos, Royous, Peltiers, Sulleaus, equally with mixed tactics (inclusive, singular to say, of much profane

CHAP. II
1790-91

JACQUES RENÉ HÉBERT.

Parody),² are blowing for Altar and Throne. As for Marat the People's-Friend, his voice is as that of the bullfrog, or bittern by the solitary pools; he, unseen of men, croaks harsh thunder, and that alone continually,—of indignation, suspicion, incurable sorrow. The People are sinking toward ruin, near starvation itself: 'My dear friends,' cries he, 'your indigence is not the fruit of vices nor of idleness; you have a right to life, as good as Louis XVI., or the happiest of the century. What man can

¹ Mercier, iii. 163.

² See Hist. Parl. vii. 51.

BOOK III
1791

say he has a right to dine, when you have no bread ? ' ' The People sinking on the one hand : on the other hand, nothing but wretched Sieur Motiers, treasonous Riquetti Mirabeaus : traitors, or else shadows and simulacra of Quacks to be seen in high places, look where you will ! Men that go mincing, grimacing, with plausible speech and brushed raiment ; hollow within : Quacks political ; Quacks scientific, academical : all with a fellow feeling for each other, and kind of Quack public-spirit ! Not great Lavoisier himself, or any of the Forty, can escape this rough tongue ; which wants not fanatic sincerity, nor, strangest of all, a certain rough caustic sense. And then the ' three thousand gaming houses,' that are in Paris ; cess-pools for the scoundrelism of the world ; sinks of iniquity and debauchery,—whereas without good morals Liberty is impossible ! There, in these Dens of Satan, which one knows, and perseveringly denounces, do Sieur Motier's mouchards consort and colleague ; battenng vampyre-like on a People next-door to starvation. ' O People !' cries he oftentimes, with heart-rending accent. Treason, delusion, vampyrism, scoundrelism, from Dan to Ilcersheba ! The soul of Marat is sick with the sight : but what remedy ? To erect ' Eight Hundred gibbets,' in convenient rows, and proceed to hoisting ; ' Riquetti on the first of them ! ' Such is the brief recipe of Marat, Friend of the People.

So blow and bluster the Hundred and thirty-three : nor, ne would seem, are these sufficient : for there are benighted nooks in France, to which Newspapers do not reach ; and everywhere is ' such an appetite for news as was never seen in any country.' Let an expeditious Dampmartin, on furlough, set out to return home from Paris, he cannot get along for ' peasants stopping him on the highway ; overwhelming him with questions ' : the Maître de Poste will not send out the horses till you have well nigh quarrelled with him, but asks always, What news ? At Autun, in spite of the dark night and ' rigorous frost,' for it is now January 1791, nothing will serve but you must gather your wayworn limbs and thoughts, and speak to the multitudes from a window opening into the market place.' It is the shortest method : Tais, good Christian

¹ Ami du Peuple, Nov. 26. See also Extrait de la 21^e et 22^e de la 1791 401
p. 153, 154.
Dampmartin, l. 154.

people, is verily what an august Assembly seemed to me to be doing ; this and no other is the news :

CHAP. II
1791

Now my weary lips I close ;
Leave me, leave me to repose !

The good Dampmartin !—But, on the whole, are not Nations astonishingly true to their National character ; which indeed runs in the blood ? Nineteen hundred years ago, Julius Cæsar, with his quick sure eye, took note how the Gauls waylaid men. ‘It is a habit of theirs,’ says he, ‘to stop travellers, were it even by constraint, and inquire whatsoever each of them may have heard or known about any sort of matter : in their towns, the common people beset the passing trader ; demanding to hear from what regions he came, what things he got acquainted with there. Excited by which rumours and hearsays, they will decide about the weightiest matters ; and necessarily repent next moment that they did it, on such guidance of uncertain reports, and many a traveller answering with mere fictions to please them, and get off.’¹ Nineteen hundred years ; and good Dampmartin, wayworn, in winter frost, probably with scant light of stars and fish-oil, still perorates from the Inn-window ! This People is no longer called Gaulish ; and it has wholly become braccatus, has got breeches, and suffered change enough : certain fierce German Franken came storming over ; and, so to speak, vaulted on the back of it ; and always after, in their grim tenacious way, have ridden it bridled ; for German is, by his very name, Guerre-man, or man that wars and gars. And so the People, as we say, is now called French or Frankish : nevertheless, does not the old Gaulish and Gaelic Celthood, with its vehemence, effervescence promptitude, and what good and ill it had, still vindicate itself little adulterated ?—

For the rest, that in such prurient confusion, Clubbism thrives and spreads, need not be said. Already the Mother of Patriotism, sitting in the Jacobins, shines supreme over all ; and has paled the poor lunar light of that Monarchic Club near to final extinction. She, we say, shines supreme, girt with sunlight, not yet with infernal lightning ; revered, not without fear, by Municipal Authorities ; counting her Barnaves, Lameths, Pétions, of a National Assembly ; most gladly of all, her Robespierre. Cordeliers, again, your Hébert,

¹ De Bello Gallico, lib. iv. 5.

BOOK III

1791

Hundred and thirty three Paris Journals; regenerative Social Circle; oratory, in Mother and Daughter Societies, from the balconies of Inns, by chimney nook, at dinner-table, —polemical, ending many times in duell! And ever, like a constant growling accompaniment of bass Discord: scarcity of work, scarcity of food. The winter is hard and cold; ragged Bakers'-queues, like a black tattered flag-of-distress, wave out ever and anon. It is the third of our Hunger years, this new year of a glorious Revolution. The rich man when invited to dinner, in such distress seasons, feels bound in politeness to carry his own bread in his pocket. how the poor dine? And your glorious Revolution has done it, cries one. And our glorious Revolution is subtly, by black traitors worthy of the Lamp iron, perverted to do it, cries another. Who will paint the huge whirlpool wherein France, all shivered into wild incoherence, whirls? The jarring that went on under every French roof, in every French heart, the diseased things that were spoken, done, the sum total whereof is the French Revolution, tongue of man cannot tell. Nor the laws of action that work unseen in the depth of that huge blind incoherence! With amazement, not with measurement, men look on the Immeasurable; not knowing its laws; seeing with all different degrees of knowledge, what new phases, and results of event, its laws bring forth. France is as a monstrous Galvanic Mass, wherein all sorts of far stranger than chemical galvanic or electric forces and substances are at work; electrifying one another, positive and negative; filling with electricity your Leyden jars — Twenty five millions in number! As the jars get full, there will, from time to time, be, on slight hint, an explosion

CHAPTER III

SWORD IN HAND

ON such wonderful basis, however, has Law, Royalty, Authority, and whatever yet exists of visible Order, to maintain itself, while it can. Here, as in that Commixture of the Four Elements did the Anarch O'd, has an august Assembly spread its pavilion; curtained by the dark infinite of discords; founded on on the wavering bottomless of the Abyss; and keeps continual hubbub. Time is around it, and Eternity, and the Inane; and it does what it can, what is given it to do.

CHAP. III
Aug. 1790

Glancing reluctantly in, once more, we discern little that is edifying: a Constitutional Theory of Defective Verbs struggling forward, with perseverance, amid endless interruptions: Mirabeau, from his tribune, with the weight of his name and genius, awing-down much Jacobin violence; which in return vents itself the louder over in its Jacobins Hall, and even reads him sharp lectures there.¹ This man's path is mysterious, questionable; difficult, and he walks without companion in it. Pure Patriotism does not now count him among her chosen; pure Royalism abhors him: yet his weight with the world is overwhelming. Let him travel on, companionless, unwavering, whither he is bound,—while it is yet day with him, and the night has not come.

But the chosen band of pure Patriot brothers is small; counting only some Thirty, seated now on the extreme tip of the Left, separate from the world. A virtuous Pétion; an incorruptible Robespierre, most consistent, incorruptible of thin acrid men; Triumvirs Barnave, Duport, Lameth, great in speech, thought, action, each according to his kind; a lean old Goupil de Prefeln: on these and what will follow them has pure Patriotism to depend.

There too, conspicuous among the Thirty, if seldom audible, Philippe d'Orléans may be seen sitting: in dim fuliginous bewilderment; having, one might say, arrived at Chaos! Gleams there are, at once of a Lieutenancy and Regency; debates in the Assembly itself, of succession to the Throne 'in case the present Branch should fail'; and Philippe, they say, walked anxiously, in silence, through the corridors, till such high argument were done: but it came all to nothing; Mirabeau, glaring into the man, and through him, had to ejaculate in strong untranslatable language: 'Ce j— j— ne vaut pas la peine qu'on se donne pour lui.' It came all to nothing; and in the meanwhile Philippe's money, they say, is gone! Could he refuse a little cash to the gifted Patriot, in want only of that; he himself in want of all but that? Not a pamphlet can be printed without cash; or indeed written without food purchasable by cash. Without cash your hopefulest Projector

¹ Camille's Journal (in Hist. Parl. ix. 366-85).

BOOK III
1791

ctum, or informal iconoclastic Decree of the Common People, in the course of being executed!—The Municipality sit tremulous, deliberating whether they will hang out the Drapeau Rouge and Martial Law National Assembly, part in loud wail, part in hardly suppressed applause, Abbé Maury unable to decide whether the iconoclastic Plebs amount to forty thousand or to two hundred thousand

Deputations, swift messengers,—for it is at a distance over the River,—come and go Lafayette and National Guards, though without Drapeau Rouge, get under way, apparently in no hot haste Nay, arrived on the scene, Lafayette salutes with doffed hat, before ordering to fix bayonets What avails it? The Plebian 'Court of Cassation,' as Camille might punningly name it, has done its work, steps forth, with unbuttoned vest, with pockets turned inside out sack, and just ravage, not plunder! With inexhaustible patience, the Hero of two Worlds remonstrates, persuasively, with a kind of sweet constraint, though also with fixed bayonets, dissipates, hushes down on the morrow it is once more all as usual

Considering which things, however, Duke Castries may justly 'write to the President,' justly transport himself across the Marches, to raise a corps or do what else is in him Royalism totally abandons that Robadlian method of contest, and the twelve Spadassins return to Switzerland—or even to Dreamland through the Horn gate, whichever their true home is Nay Editor Prudhomme is authorised to publish a curious thing 'We are authorised to publish,' says he dull blustering Publisher, 'that M Boyer champion of good Patriots is at the head of Fifty Spadassinicides or Bully killers His address is Passage du Bois de Boulogne, Faubourg St Denis'¹ One of the strangest Institutes, this of Champion Boyer and the Bully killers! Whose services however, are not wanted, Royalism having abandoned the rapier method, as plainly impracticable

¹ Révolution des Paris (n Hist Parl viii 440)

CHAPTER IV

TO FLY OR NOT TO FLY

THE truth is, Royalism sees itself verging towards sad extremities; nearer and nearer daily. From over the Rhine it comes asserted that the King in his Tuileries is not free: this the poor King may contradict, with the official mouth, but in his heart feels often to be undeniable. Civil Constitution of the Clergy; Decree of ejection against Dissidents from it: not even to this latter, though almost his conscience rebels, can he say Nny; but, after two months' hesitating, signs this also. It was 'on January 21st,' of this 1791, that he signed it; to the sorrow of his poor heart yet, on another Twenty-first of January! Whereby come Dissident ejected Priests; unconquerable Martyrs according to some, incurable chicaning Traitors according to others. And so there has arrived what we once foreshadowed: with Religion, or with the Cant and Echo of Religion, all France is rent asunder in a new rupture of continuity; complicating, embittering all the older;—to be cured only by stern surgery, in La Vendée!

Unhappy Royalty, unhappy Majesty, Hereditary Representative, Représentant Héritaire, or howsoever they may name him; of whom much is expected, to whom little is given! Blue National Guards encircle that Tuileries; a Lafayette, thin constitutional Pedant; clear, thin, inflexible, as water turned to thin ice; whom no Queen's heart can love. National Assembly, its pavilion spread where we know, sits near by, keeping continual hubbub. From without, nothing but Nanci Revolts, sack of Castries Hôtels, riots and seditions; riots North and South, at Aix, at Douai, at Belfort, Uzez, Perpignan, at Nismes, and that incurable Avignon of the Pope's: a continual crackling and sputtering of riots from the whole face of France;—testifying how electric it grows. Add only the hard winter, the famished strikes of operatives; that continual running-bass of Scarcity, ground-tone and basis of all other Discords!

The plan of Royalty, so far as it can be said to have any fixed

BOOK III
1791

fixed plan, is still, as ever, that of flying towards the frontiers. In very truth, the only plan of the smallest promise for it! Fly to Boullé, bristle yourself round with cannon, served by your 'forty thousand undebauched Germans'—summon the National Assembly to follow you, summon what of it is Royalist, Constitutional, gainable by money, dissolve the rest, by grapeshot if need be. Let Jacobinism and revolt, with one wild wail, fly into Infinite Space, driven by grapeshot. Thunder over France with the cannon's mouth, commanding, not entreating that this not cease. And then to rule afterwards with utmost possible Constitutionality, doing justice, loving mercy, being Shepherd of this indigent People, not Shearer merely, and Shepherd's similitude! All this, if ye dare. If ye dare not, then, in Heaven's name, go to sleep—other hand some alternative seems none.

Nay, it were perhaps possible, with a man to do it. For if such inexpressible whirlpool of Babylonish confusions (which our Era is) cannot be stilled by man, but only by Time and men, a man may moderate its paroxysms, may balance and sway, and keep himself unswallowed on the top 'of it—as several men and Kings in these days do. Much is possible for a man, men will obey a man that kens and cans, and name him reverently their Ken ning or King. Did not Charlemagne rule? Consider, too, whether he had smooth times of it, banging 'four thousand Saxons over the Weser Bridge,' at one dread swoop! So likewise who knows but, in this same distracted fanatic France, the right man may verily exist? An olive complexioned taciturn man, for the present Lieutenant in the Artillery service who once sat studying Mathematics at Brienne? The same who walked in the morning to correct proof sheets at Dole and enjoyed a frugal breakfast with M Joly? Such a one is gone, whither also famed General Paoli his friend is gone, in these very days, to see old scenes in native Corsica, and what Democratic good can be done there.

Royalty never executes the evasion plan yet never abandons it, living in variable hope, undecisive, till fortune shall decide. In utmost secrecy, a brisk Correspondence goes on with Boullé, there is also a plot, which emerges more than once, for carrying the King to Rouen.¹ plot after plot emerging.

¹ See Hist. Parl. vii. 316 Bertrand Moleville etc

emerging and submerging, like ignes fatui in foul weather, which lead nowhither. 'About ten o'clock at night,' the Hereditary Representative, in partie quarrée, with the Queen, with Brother Monsieur, and Madame, sits playing 'wisk,' or whist. Usher Campan enters mysteriously, with a message he only half comprehends: How a certain Comte D'Inisdal waits anxious in the outer antechamber; National Colonel, Captain of the watch for this night, is gained over; post-horses ready all the way; party of Noblesse sitting armed, determined; will his Majesty, before midnight, consent to go? Profound silence; Campan waiting with upturned ear. 'Did your Majesty hear what Campan said?' asks the Queen. 'Yes, I heard,' answers Majesty, and plays on. 'Twas a pretty couplet, that of Campan's,' hints Monsieur, who at times showed a pleasant wit: Majesty, still unresponsive, plays wisk. 'After all, one must say something to Campan,' remarks the Queen. 'Tell M. D'Inisdal,' said the King, and the Queen puts an emphasis on it, 'That the King cannot consent to be forced away.'—'I see!' said D'Inisdal, whisking round, peaking himself into flame of irritancy: 'we have the risk; we are to have all the blame if it fail,'¹—and vanishes, he and his plot, as will-o'-wisp do. The Queen sat till far in the night, packing jewels: but it came to nothing; in that peaked flame of irritancy the will-o'-wisp had gone out.

Little hope there is in all this. Alas, with whom to fly? Our loyal Gardes-du-Corps, ever since the Insurrection of Women, are disbanded; gone to their homes; gone, many of them, across the Rhine towards Coblenz and Exiled Princes: brave Miomandre and brave Tardivet, these faithful Two, have received, in nocturnal interview with both Majesties, their viaticum of gold louis, of heartfelt thanks from a Queen's lips, though unluckily 'his Majesty stood, back to fire, not speaking';² and do now dine through the Provinces; recounting hairsbreadth escapes, insurrectionary horrors. Great horrors, to be swallowed yet of greater. But, on the whole, what a falling-off from the old splendour of Versailles! Here in this poor Tuileries a National Brewer-Colonel, sonorous Santerre, parades officially behind her Majesty's chair. Our high dignitaries all fled over the Rhine: nothing now to be gained at Court; but hopes, for which life itself must be risked!

¹ Campan, ii. 105.

² Ibid. ii. 199-201.

BOOK III
1791

Ohscure husy men frequent the back stairs, with hearsays, wind projects, unfruitful fanfaronades Young Royalists, at the Théâtre de Vaudeville, 'sing couplets', if that could do anything Royalists enough, Captains on furlough, burnt out Seigneurs, may likewise be met with, 'in the Café de Valois, and at Méot the Restaurateur's' There they fan one another into high loyal glow, drink, in such wine as can be procured, confusion to Sansculottism, show purchased dirks, of an improved structure, made to order, and, greatly daring, dine¹ It is in these places, in these months, that the epithet Sansculotte first gets applied to indigent Patriotism, in the last age we had Gilbert Sansculotte, the indigent Poet² Destitute of Breeches a mournful Destitution, which however, if Twenty millions share it, may become more effective than most Possessions!

Meanwhile, amid this vague dim whirl of fanfaronades, wind projects, pomards made to order, there does disclose itself one punctum saliens of life and feasibility the finger of Mirabeau! Mirabeau and the Queen of France have met, have parted with mutual trust! It is strange, secret as the Mysteries, but it is indubitable Mirabeau took horse one evening, and rode westward, unattended—to see Friend Clavière in that country house of his? Before getting to Clavière's the much musing horseman struck aside to a back gate of the Garden of Saint Cloud some Duke D'Arenberg or the like, was there to introduce him, the Queen was not far, on a 'round knoll, ronde point the highest of the Garden of Saint Cloud' he beheld the Queen's face, spake with her, alone, under the void canopy of Night What an interview, fateful, secret for us after all searching, like the colloques of the gods!³ She called him 'a Mirabeau' elsewhere we read that she 'was charmed with him,' the wild submitted Titan, as indeed it is among the honourable tokens of this high ill fated heart that no mind of any endowment, no Mirabeau nay no Barnave no Dumouriez, ever came face to face with her hut, in spite of all prepossessions she was forced to recognise it, to draw nigh to it, with trust High imperial heart, with the instinctive attraction towards all that had any height! You know not the Queen,' said Mirabeau once

¹ Dampmart n. 129

² Mercier Nouveau Paris 1 204

³ Campan n. c. 17

in confidence; 'her force of mind is prodigious; she is a man for courage.'¹—And so, under the void Night, on the crown of that knoll, she has spoken with a Mirabeau: he has kissed loyally the queenly hand, and said with enthusiasm: 'Madame, the Monarchy is saved!'—Possible? The Foreign Powers, mysteriously sounded, gave favourable guarded response;² Bouillé is at Metz, and could find forty-thousand sure Germans. With a Mirabeau for head, and a Bouillé for hand, something verily is possible,—if Fate intervene not.

CHAP. IV
1791

But figure under what thousandfold wrappages, and cloaks of darkness, Royalty, meditating these things, must involve itself. There are men with 'Tickets of Entrance'; there are chivalrous consultings, mysterious plottings. Consider also whether, involve as it like, plotting Royalty can escape the glance of Patriotism; lynx-eyes, by the ten thousand, fixed on it, which see in the dark! Patriotism knows much: knows the dirks made to order, and can specify the shops; knows Sieur Motier's legions of mouchards; the Tickets of Entrée, and men in black; and how plan of evasion succeeds plan,—or may be supposed to succeed it. Then conceive the couplets chanted at the Théâtre de Vaudeville; or worse, the whispers, significant nods of traitors in moustachioes. Conceive, on the other hand, the loud cry of alarm that came through the Hundred-and-Thirty Journals; the Dionysius'-Ear of each of the Forty-Eight Sections, wakeful night and day.

Patriotism is patient of much; not patient of all. The Café de Procope has sent, visibly along the streets, a Deputation of Patriots, 'to expostulate with bad Editors,' by trustful word of mouth: singular to see and hear. The bad Editors promise to amend, but do not. Deputations for change of Ministry were many; Mayor Bailly joining even with Cordelier Danton in such; and they have prevailed. With what profit? Of Quacks, willing or constrained to be Quacks, the race is everlasting: Ministers Duportail and Dutertre will have to manage much as Ministers Latour du Pin and Cicé did. So welters the confused world.

But now, beaten on for ever by such inextricable contradictory influences and evidences, what is the indigent French Patriot, in these unhappy days, to believe, and walk by? Uncertainty all; except that he is wretched, indigent; that a

¹ Dumont, p. 211.

² Correspondance Secrète (in Hist. Parl. viii. 169-73).

BOOK III
1791

glorious Revolution, the wonder of the Universe, has hitherto brought neither Bread nor Peace, being marred by traitors, difficult to discover. Traitors that dwell in the dark, invisible there,—or seen for moments, in pallid dubious twilight, stealthily vanishing thither! Preternatural Suspicion once more rules the minds of men.

'Nobody here,' writes Carra, of the Annales Patriotiques, so early as the first of February, 'can entertain a doubt of the constant obstinate project these people have on foot to get the King away, or of the perpetual succession of manœuvres they employ for that.' Nobody—the watchful Mother of Patriotism deputed two Members to her Daughter at Versailles, to examine how the matter looked there. Well, and there? Patriotic Carra continues. 'The Report of these two deputies we all heard with our own ears last Saturday. They went with others of Versailles, to inspect the King's Stables, also the stables of the whilom Gardes du Corps—they found there from seven to eight hundred horses standing always saddled and bridled, ready for the road at a moment's notice. The same deputies, moreover, saw with their own two eyes several Royal Carriages, which men were even then busy loading with large well stuffed luggage bags, leather cows, as we call them, vaches de cuir, 'the Royal Arms on the panels almost entirely effaced.' Momentous enough! Also 'on the same day the Maréchaussée, or Cavalry Police, did assemble with arms horses and baggage,—and disperse again. They want the King over the marches, that so Emperor Leopold and the German Princes, whose troops are ready, may have a pretext for beginning.' 'this,' adds Carra, 'is the word of the riddle—this is the reason why our fugitive Aristocrats are now making levies of men on the frontiers, expecting that, one of these mornings, the Executive Chief Magistrate will be brought over to them, and the civil war commence.'¹

If indeed the Executive Chief Magistrate, bagged, say in one of these leather cows, were once brought safe over to them! But the strangest thing of all is that Patriotism, whether barking at a venture, or guided by some instinct of preternatural sagacity, is actually barking aright this time, at something, not at nothing. Boullé Secret Correspondence, since made public, testifies as much.

¹ Carra's Newspaper 1st Feb 1791 (n Hist Parl ix 39)

Nay, it is undeniable, visible to all, that Mesdames the King's Aunts are taking steps for departure: asking passports of the Ministry, safe-conducts of the Municipality; which Marat warns all men to beware of. They will carry gold with them, 'these old Béguines'; nay they will carry the little Dauphin, 'having nursed a changeling, for some time, to leave in his stead'! Besides, they are as some light substance flung up, to show how the wind sits; a kind of proof-kite you fly off to ascertain whether the grand paper-kite, Evasion of the King, may mount!

In these alarming circumstances, Patriotism is not wanting to itself. Municipality deputed to the King; Sections deputed to the Municipality; a National Assembly will soon stir. Meanwhile, behold, on the 19th of February 1791, Mesdames, quitting Bellevue and Versailles with all privacy, are off! Towards Rome, seemingly; or one knows not whither. They are not without King's passports, countersigned; and what is more to the purpose, a serviceable Escort. The Patriotic Mayor or Mayorlet of the Village of Moret tried to detain them: but brisk Louis de Narbonne, of the Escort, dashed off at hand-gallop; returned soon with thirty dragoons, and victoriously cut them out. And so the poor ancient women go their way: to the terror of France and Paris, whose nervous excitability is become extreme. Who else would hinder poor Loque and Graille, now grown so old, and fallen into such unexpected circumstances, when gossip itself turning only on terrors and horrors is no longer pleasant to the mind, and you cannot get so much as an orthodox confessor in peace,—from going what way soever the hope of any solacement might lead them?

They go, poor ancient dames,—whom the heart were hard that did not pity: they go; with palpitations, with unmelodious suppressed screechings; all France screeching and cackling, in loud unsuppressed terror, behind and on both hands of them: such mutual suspicion is among men. At Arnay le Duc, above halfway to the frontiers, a Patriotic Municipality and Populace again takes courage to stop them: Louis Narbonne must now back to Paris, must consult the National Assembly. National Assembly answers, not without an effort, that Mesdames may go. Whereupon Paris rises worse than ever, screeching half-distracted. Tuileries and precincts are filled

CHAP. IV
Feb. 19, 1791

BOOK III
Feb 19, 1791

be blown up,—though the powder, when we went to look, had got withdrawn. A Tuilerics, sold to Austria and Coblentz, should have no subterranean passage. Out of which might not Coblentz or Austria issue, some morning; and, with cannon of long range, 'foudroyer,' bethunder a patriotic Saint-Antoine into smoulder and ruin!

So meditates the benighted soul of Saint-Antoine, as it sees the aproned workmen, in early spring, busy on these towers. An official-speaking Municipality, a Sieur Motier with his legions of mouchards, deserve no trust at all. Were Patriot Santerre, indeed, Commander! But the sonorous Brewer commands only our own Battalion: of such secrets he can explain nothing, knows nothing, perhaps suspects much. And so the work goes on; and afflicted benighted Saint-Antoine hears rattle of hammers, sees stones suspended in air.¹

DENIS DIDEROT.

¹ Montgaillard, ii. 285

BOOK III
Feb 28,
1791

indisposed to act Heavy laden Hero of two Worlds, what tasks are these! The jeerings, provocative gambollings of that Patriot Suburb, which is all out on the streets now, are hard to endure, unwashed Patriots jeering in sulky sport; one unwashed Patriot 'seizing the General by the hoot,' to unhorse him Santerre, ordered to fire, makes answer obliquely, 'These are the men that took the Bastille', and not a trigger stirs Neither dare the Vincennes Magistracy give warrant of arrestment, or the smallest countenance wherefore the General 'will take it on himself' to arrest By promptitude, by cheerful adroitness, patience and brisk valour without limits, the riot may be again bloodlessly appeased

Meanwhile the rest of Paris, with more or less unconcern, may mind the rest of its business for what is this hut an effervescence, of which there are now so many? The National Assembly, in one of its stormiest moods, is debating a Law against Emigration, Mirabeau declaring aloud, 'I swear beforehand that I will not obey it' Mirabeau is often at the Tribune this day, with endless impediments from without, with the old unabated energy from within What can murmurs and clamours, from Left or from Right, do to this man, like Teneriffe or Atlas unremoved? With clear thought, with strong bass voice, though at first low, uncertain, he claims audience, sways the storm of men anon the sound of him waxes, softens, he rises into far sounding melody of strength, triumphant, which subdues all hearts, his rude seamed face, desolate, fire scathed, becomes fire lit, and radiates once again mea feel, in these heggarly ages, what is the potency and omni potency of maa's word on the souls of men 'I will triumph, or be torn in fragments' he was once heard to say 'Silence,' he cries now, in strong word of command, in imperial consciousness of strength, 'Silence, the thirty voices, Silence aux trente voix'—and Robespierre and the Thirty Voices die into mutterings, and the Law is oace more as Mirabeau would have it

How different, at the same instant, is General Lafayette's street eloquence, wrangling with sonorous Brewers, with an ungrammatical Saint Antoine! Most different, again, from both is the Café-de-Valois eloquence, and suppressed fanfaronade, of this multitude of men with Tickets of Entry, who are now munding the Corridors of the Tuileries Such things can go on simultaneously in one City. How much more

THE SANS-CULOTTES.

more in one Country ; in one Planet with its discrepancies, every Day a mere crackling infinitude of discrepancies,—which nevertheless do yield some coherent net-product, though an infinitesimally small one !

But be this as it may, Lafayette has saved Vincennes ; and is marching homewards with some dozen of arrested demolitionists. Royalty is not yet saved ;—nor indeed specially endangered. But to the King's Constitutional Guard, to these old Gardes Françaises, or Centre Grenadiers, as it chanced to be, this affluence of men with Tickets of Entry is becoming more and more unintelligible. Is his Majesty verily for Metz, then ; to be carried off by these men, on the spur of the instant ? That revolt of Saint-Antoine got up by traitor Royalists for a stalking-horse ? Keep a sharp outlook, ye Centre Grenadiers on duty here : good never came from the 'men in black.' Nay they have cloaks, rédingotes ; some of them leather-breeches, boots,—as if for instant riding ! Or what is this that sticks visible from the lapelle of Chevalier de Court ?¹ Too like the handle of some cutting or stabbing instrument ! He glides and goes ; and still the dudgeon sticks from his left lapelle. 'Hold, Monsieur !'—a Centre Grenadier clutches him ; clutches the protrusive dudgeon, whisks it out in the face of the world : by Heaven, a very dagger ; hunting-knife or whatsoever you will call it ; fit to drink the life of Patriotism !

So fared it with Chevalier de Court, early in the day ; not without noise ; not without commentaries. And now this continually increasing multitude at nightfall ? Have they daggers too ? Alas, with them too, after angry parleyings, there has begun a groping and a rummaging ; all men in black, spite of their Tickets of Entry, are clutched by the collar, and groped. Scandalous to think of : for always, as the dirk, sword-cane, pistol, or were it but tailor's bodkin, is found on him, and with loud scorn drawn forth from him, he, the hapless man in black, is flung all-too rapidly down stairs. Flung ; and ignominiously descends, head foremost ; accelerated by ignominious shovings from sentry after sentry ; nay, as it is written, by smittings, twitchings,—spurnings à posteriori, not to be named. In this accelerated way emerges, uncertain which end uppermost, man after man in black, through all issues, into the Tuileries Garden ; emerges, alas, into the arms

¹ Weber, ii. 286.

BOOK III
Feb 23,
1791

of an indignant multitude, now gathered and gathering there, in the hour of dusk, to see what is toward, and whether the Hereditary Representative is carried off or not. Hapless men in black, at last convicted of poniards made to order, convicted 'Chevaliers of the Poniard'! Within is as the burning ship, without is as the deep sea. Within is no help, his Majesty, looking forth, one moment, from his interior sanctuaries, coldly bids all visitors 'give up their weapons', and shuts the door again. The weapons given up form a heap, the convicted Chevaliers of the Poniard keep descending pell mell, with impetuous velocity, and at the bottom of all staircases the mixed multitude receives them, hustles, huffets, chases and disperses them.¹

Such sight meets Lafayette, in the dusk of the evening, as he returns, successful with difficulty at Vincennes. Sansculotte Scylla hardly weathered, here is Aristocrat Charybdis gurgling under his lee! The patient Hero of two Worlds almost loses temper. He accelerates, does not retard, the flying Chevaliers, delivers, indeed, this or the other hunted Loyalist of quality, but rates him in bitter words such as the hour suggested, such as no saloon could pardon. Hero ill hestead, hanging, so to speak, in mid air, hateful to Rich divinities above, hateful to Indigent mortals below! Duke de Villequier, Gentleman of the Chamber, gets such contumelious rating, in presence of all people there, that he may see good first to exculpate himself in the Newspapers, then, that not prospering, to retire over the Frontiers, and begin plotting at Brussels.² His Apartment will stand vacant, usefuller, as we may find, than when it stood occupied.

So fly the Chevaliers of the Poniard, hunted of Patriotic men, shamefully in the thickening dusk. A dim miserable business, born of darkness, dying away there in the thickening dusk and dunness. In the midst of which, however, let the reader discern clearly one figure running for its life. Crispin Catiline d'Esprémenil,—for the last time or the last hut one. It is not yet three years since these same Centre Grenadiers, Gardes Françaises then, marched him towards the Calypso Isles, in the gray of the May morning, and he and they have got thus far. Buffeted, beaten down, delivered by popular Pétion, he might well answer bitterly 'And I too, Monsieur,

¹ Hist. Parl. ix. 139, 48

² Montgaillard ii. 286

have have been carried on the People's shoulders.'¹ A fact which popular Pétion, if he like, can meditate.

CHAP. V
Feb. 28,
1791

But happily, one way and another, the speedy night covers up this ignominious Day of Poniards; and the Chevaliers escape, though maltreated, with torn coat-skirts and heavy hearts, to their respective dwelling-houses. Riot twofold is quelled; and little blood shed, if it be not insignificant blood from the nose: Vincennes stands undemolished, reparable; and the Hereditary Representative has not been stolen, nor the Queen smuggled into Prison. A day long remembered: commented on with loud hahas and deep grumblings; with bitter scornfulness of triumph, bitter rancour of defeat. Royalism, as usual, imputes it to D'Orléans and the Anarchists intent on insulting Majesty: Patriotism, as usual, to Royalists, and even Constitutionalists, intent on stealing Majesty to Metz: we, also as usual, to Preternatural Suspicion, and Phœbus Apollo having made himself like the Night.

Thus, however, has the reader seen, in an unexpected arena, on this last day of February 1791, the Three long-contending elements of French Society dashed forth into singular comico-tragical collision; acting and reacting openly to the eye. Constitutionalism, at once quelling Sansculottic riot at Vincennes, and Royalist treachery in the Tuileries, is great, this day, and prevails. As for poor Royalism, tossed to and fro in that manner, its daggers all left in a heap, what can one think of it? Every dog, the Adage says, has its day: has it; has had it; or will have it. For the present, the day is Lafayette's and the Constitution's. Nevertheless Hunger and Jacobinism, fast growing fanatical, still work; their day, were they once fanatical, will come. Hitherto, in all tempests, Lafayette, like some divine Sea-ruler, raises his serene head: the upper Æolus blasts fly back to their caves, like foolish unbidden winds: the under sea-billows they had vexed into froth allay themselves. But if, as we often write, the submarine Titanic Fire-powers came into play, the Ocean-bed from beneath being burst? If they hurled Poseidon Lafayette and his Constitution out of Space; and, in the Titanic melly, sea were mixed with sky?

¹ See Mercier, ii. 40, 202.

BOOK III
March 1791

CHAPTER VI

MIRABEAU

THE spirit of France waxes ever more acrid, fever sick towards the final outburst of dissolution and delirium. Suspicion fules all minds: contending parties cannot now commingle, stand separated sheer asunder, eying one another, in most aguish mood, of cold terror or hot rage. Counter Revolution, Days of Poniards, Castries Duels, Flight of Mesdames, of Monsieur and Royalty! Journalism shrills ever louder its cry of alarm. The sleepless Dionysius Ear of the Forty eight Sections, how feverishly quick has it grown, convulsing with strange pangs the whole sick Body, as in such sleeplessness and sickness the ear will do!

Since Royalists get Poniards made to order, and a Sieur Motier is no better than he should be, shall not Patriotism too, even of the indigent sort, have Pikes, secondhand Firelocks, in readiness for the worst? The anvils ring, during this March month, with bammering of Pikes. A Constitutional Municipality promulgated its Placard, that no citizen except the 'active' or cash citizen was entitled to have arms, but there rose, instantly responsive, such a tempest of astonishment from Club and Section, that the Constitutional Placard, almost next morning, had to cover itself up, and die away into inanity, in a second improved edition¹. So the bammering continues, as all that it betokens does.

Mark, again, how the extreme tip of the Left is mounting in favour, if not in its own National Hall, yet with the Nation, especially with Paris. For in such universal panic of doubt, the opinion that is sure of itself, as the meagrest opinion may the soonest be, is the one to which all men will rally. Great is Belief, were it never so meagre, and leads captive the doubting heart. Incorruptible Robespierre has been elected Public Accuser in our new Courts of Judicature, virtuous Pétion, it is thought, may rise to be Mayor. Cordeher Danton, called also by triumphant majorities, sits at the Departmental Council table, colleague there of Mirabeau. Of incorruptible

¹ Ordonnance du 17 Mars 1791 (Hist. Parl. ix. 257)

THE TUILERIES

BOOK III arch 1791 necius duel with him, there is Monster after Monster Emigrant never sullied, sword on thigh, vaunting of their Loyalty with ferocity, descending from the air, like Harpy swarms Typhon of Anarchy, Political, Religious, sprawling hundred headed, say with Twenty five million heads, wide as the area of France, fierce as Frenzy, strong in very Hunger With these shall the Serpent queller do battle continually, and expect no rest.

As for the King he as usual will go wavering chameleon like, changing colour and purpose with the colour of his environment,—good for no Kingly use. On one royal person, on the Queen only, can Mirabeau perhaps place dependence
 It is possible the greatness of this man, not unskilled too in blandishments, courtiership, and graceful adroitness, might, with most legitimate sorcery, fascinate the volatile Queen, and fix her to him She has courage for all noble daring, 'that and a heart the soul of Theresa's Daughter 'Faut il donc, Is it fated then, she passionately writes to her Brother, 'that I with the blood I am come of, with the sentiments I have, must live and die among such mortals?' Alas, poor Princess, Yes 'She is the only man,' as Mirabeau observes, 'whom his Majesty has about him' Of one other man Mirabeau is still surer of himself There he his resources, sufficient or insufficient

Dim and great to the eye of Prophecy looks that future.
 A perpetual life and death battle, confusion from above and from below,—mere confused darkness for us, with here and there some streak of faint lurid light We see a King perhaps laid aside, not tonsured,—tensured is out of fashion now,— but say, sent away anyhow, with handsome annual allowance, and stock of smith tools We see a Queen and Dauphin, Regent and Minor, a Queen 'mounted on horseback,' in the din of battles, with Moriamur pro rege nostro! 'Such a day,' Mirabeau writes, 'may come'

Dim of battles, wars more than civil, confusion from above and from below in such environment the eye of Prophecy sees Comte de Mirabeau, like some Cardinal de Retz, stormfully maintain himself, with head all devising heart all-daring, if not victorious, yet unvanquished, while life is left him The specialties.

* Fils Adoptif with supra.

specialities and issues of it, no eye of Prophecy can guess at : it is clouds, we repeat, and tempestuous night ; and in the middle of it, now visible, far-darting, now labouring in eclipse, is Mirabeau indomitably struggling to be Cloud-Compeller !—One can say that, had Mirabeau lived, the History of France and of the World had been different. Further, that the man would have needed, as few men ever did, the whole compass of that same ‘ Art of Daring, Art d’Oser,’ which he so prized ; and likewise that he, above all men then living, would have practised and manifested it. Finally, that some substantiality, and no empty simulacrum of a formula, would have been the result realised by him : a result you could have loved, a result you could have hated ; by no likelihood, a result you could only have rejected with closed lips, and swept into quick forgetfulness for ever. Had Mirabeau lived one other year !

CHAP. VI
March 1791

CHAPTER VII

DEATH OF MIRABEAU

BUT Mirabeau could not live another year, any more than he could live another thousand years. Men’s years are numbered, and the tale of Mirabeau’s was now complete. Important or unimportant ; to be mentioned in World-History for some centuries, or not to be mentioned there beyond a day or two, —it matters not to peremptory Fate. From amid the press of ruddy busy Life, the Pale Messenger beckons silently : wide-spreading interests, projects, salvation of French Monarchies, what thing soever man has on hand, he must suddenly quit it all, and go. Wert thou saving French Monarchies ; wert thou blacking shoes on the Pont Neuf ! The most important of men cannot stay ; did the World’s History depend on an hour, that hour is not to be given. Whereby, indeed, it comes that these same would-have-beens are mostly a vanity ; and the World’s History could never in the least be what it would, or might, or should, by any manner of potentiality, but simply and altogether what it is.

The fierce wear and tear of such an existence has wasted out

BOOK III
March 1791

out the giant oaken strength of Mirabeau. A fret and fever that keeps heart and brain on fire—excess of effort, of excitement, excess of all kinds, labour incessant, almost beyond credibility! 'If I had not lived with him,' says Dumont, 'I never should have known what a man can make of one day, what things may be placed within the interval of twelve hours. A day for this man was more than a week or a month is for others—the mass of things he guided on together was prodigious, from the scheming to the executing not a moment lost'—'Monsieur le Comte,' said his Secretary to him once, 'what you require is impossible'—'Impossible!'—answered he, starting from his chair, 'Ne me dites jamais ce bête de mot, Never name to me that blockhead of a word' ¹. And then the social repasts, the dinner which he gives as Commandant of National Guards, which 'cost five hundred pounds', alas, and 'the Syrens of the Opera', and all the ginger that is hot in the mouth—down what a course is this man hurled! Cannot Mirabeau stop, cannot he fly, and save himself alive? No! there is a Nessus Shirt on this Hercules, he must storm and burn there, without rest, till he be consumed. Human strength, never so Herculean, has its measure. Herald shadows flit pale across the fire-brain of Mirabeau, heralds of the pale repose. While he tosses and storms, straining every nerve, in that sea of ambition and confusion, there comes, sombre and still, a monition that for him the issue of it will be swift death.

In January last, you might see him as President of the Assembly, 'his neck wrapt in linen cloths, at the evening session' there was sick heat of the blood, alternate darkening and flashing in the eyesight, he had to apply leeches, after the morning labour, and preside bandaged. 'At parting he embraced me,' says Dumont, 'with an emotion I had never seen in him. "I am dying, my friend, dying as by slow fire, we shall perhaps not meet again. When I am gone, they will know what the value of me was. The miseries I have held back will burst from all sides on France" ². Sickness gives louder warning, but cannot be listened to. On the 27th day of March, proceeding towards the Assembly, he had to seek rest and help in Friend de Lamarch's, by the road, and lay there, for an hour, half-fainted, stretched on a sofa. In the Assembly nevertheless he went, as if in spite of Destiny itself, spoke, loud and eager, five several times; then quitted the Tribune—for ever. He steps out, utterly exhausted, into the Tuileries Gardens; many people press round him, as usual, with applications, memorials; he says to the Friend who was with him: ‘Take me out of this!’

¹ Dumont p. 311

² Ibid p. 267

And so, on the last day of March 1791, endless anxious multitudes beset the Rue de la Chaussée d’Antin; incessantly inquiring: within doors there, in that House numbered, in our time, 42, the overwearied giant has fallen down, to die.¹ Crowds of all parties and kinds; of all ranks from the King to the meanest man! The King sends publicly twice a-day to inquire; privately besides: from the world at large there is no end of inquiring. ‘A written bulletin is handed out every three hours,’ is copied and circulated; in the end, it is printed. The People spontaneously keep silence; no carriage shall enter with its noise: there is crowding pressure; but the Sister of Mirabeau is reverently recognised, and has free way made for her. The People stand mute, heart-stricken; to all it seems as if a great calamity were nigh: as if the last man of France, who could have swayed these coming troubles, lay there at hand-grips with the unearthly Power.

The silence of a whole People, the wakeful toils of Cabanis, Friend and Physician, skills not: on Saturday the second day of April, Mirabeau feels that the last of the Days has risen for him; that on this day he has to depart and be no more. His death is Titanic, as his life has been! Lit up, for the last time, in the glare of coming dissolution, the mind of the man is all glowing and burning; utters itself in sayings, such as men long remember. He longs to live, yet acquiesces in death, argues not with the inexorable. His speech is wild and wondrous: unearthly Phantasms dancing now their torch-dance round his soul; the soul itself looking out, fire-radiant, motionless, girt together for that great hour! At times comes a beam of light from him on the world he is quitting. ‘I carry in my heart the death-dirge of the French Monarchy; the dead remains of it will now be the spoil of the factions.’ Or again, when he heard the cannon fire, what is characteristic too: ‘Have we the Achilles’ Funeral already?’ So likewise, while some friend is supporting him: ‘Yes, support that head; would I could bequeath it thee!’ For the man dies as he has lived; self-

¹ Fils Adoptif, viii. 420-79.

BOOK III conscious, conscious of a world looking on. He gazes forth on April 2, 1791 the young Spring, which for him will never be Summer. The Sun has risen; he says, 'Si ce n'est pas là Dieu, c'est du moins son cousin germain.'¹—Death has mastered the outworks;

MIRABEAU.

power of speech is gone; the citadel of the heart still holding out: the moribund giant, passionately, by sign, demands paper and pen; writes his passionate demand for opium, to end these agonies. The sorrowful Doctor shakes his head: Dormir, 'To sleep,' writes the other, passionately pointing at it! So dies a gigantic Heathen and Titan; stumbling blindly, undismayed, down to his rest. At half-past eight in the morning, Doctor Petit, standing at the foot of the bed, says, 'Il ne souffre plus.' His suffering and his working are now ended.

¹ Fils Adoptif, vol. 450; Journal de la maladie et de la mort de Mirabeau, par P. J. G. Cabanis (Paris, 1803)

Even so, ye silent Patriot multitudes, all ye men of France; this man is rapt away from you. He has fallen suddenly, without bending till he broke; as a tower falls, smitten by sudden lightning. His word ye shall hear no more, his guidance follow no more.—The multitudes depart, heart-struck; spread the sad tidings. How touching is the loyalty of men to their Sovereign Man! All theatres, public amusements close; no joyful meeting can be held in these nights, joy is not for them: the People break in upon private dancing-parties, and sullenly command that they cease. Of such dancing-parties apparently but two came to light; and these also have gone out. The gloom is universal; never in this City was such sorrow for one death; never since that old night when Louis XII. departed, 'and the Crieurs des Corps went sounding their bells, and crying along the streets: Le bon roi Louis, père du peuple, est mort, The good King Louis, Father of the People, is dead!' ¹ King Mirabeau is now the lost King; and one may say with little exaggeration, all the People mourns for him.

For three days there is low wide moan; weeping in the National Assembly itself. The streets are all mournful; orators mounted on the bornes, with large silent audience, preaching the funeral sermon of the dead. Let no coachman whip fast, distractively with his rolling wheels, or almost at all, through these groups! His traces may be cut; himself and his fare, as incurable Aristocrats, hurled sulkily into the kennels. The bourne-stone orators speak as it is given them; the Sansculottic People, with its rude soul, listens eager,—as men will to any Sermon, or Sermo, when it is a spoken Word meaning a Thing, and not a Babblement meaning No-thing. In the Restaurateur's of the Palais-Royal, the waiter remarks, 'Fine weather, Monsieur':—'Yes, my friend,' answers the ancient Man of Letters, 'very fine; but Mirabeau is dead.' Hoarse rhythmic threnodies come also from the throats of ballad-singers;

¹ Hénault, Abrégé Chronologique, p. 429.

BOOK III
April 4, 1791

ballad singers, are sold on gray white paper at a sou c
But of Portraits, engraved, painted, hewn and written Eulogies, Reminiscences, Biographies, nay Vaudevilles, Dr and Melodramas, in all Provinces of France, there will, thr these coming months, be the due immeasurable crop, as the leaves of Spring Nor, that a tincture of burle might be in it, is Gobel's Episcopal Mandement want goose Gobel, who has just been made Constitutional Bi of Paris A Mandement wherein Ça ira alternates strangely with Namque Domini, and you are, with a g countenance, invited to 'rejoice at possessing in the mid you a body of Prelates created by Mirabeau, zealous folle of his doctrine, faithful imitators of his virtues'² So sp and cackles manifold, the Sorrow of France, wailing ar lately, inarticulately, as it can, that a Sovereign Man is snat away In the National Assembly, when difficult questions astir, all eyes will 'turn mechanically to the place w Mirabeau sat,'—and Mirabeau is absent now

On the third evening of the lamentation, the fourth of A there is solemn Public Funeral, such as deceased mortal sel had Procession of a league in length, of mourners reck loosely nt n hundred thousand All roofs are thronged on lookers, all windows, lamp irons, branches of trees ness is painted on every countenance, many persons w
There is double hedge of National Guards, there is Nati Assembly in a body, Jacobin Society, and Societies, Ki Ministers, Municipals, and all Notabilities, Patriot or Arist Bouillé is noticeable there, 'with his hat on', say, hat dr over his brow, hiding many thoughts! Slow wending religious silence, the Procession of a league in length, u the level sun rays, for it is five o'clock, moves and mard with its sable plumes, itself in a religious silence, but fits with the muffled roll of drums, by fits with some l drawn wail of music, and strange new clangour of trombo... and metallic dirge voice, amid the infinite hum of men In the Church of Saint Eustache, there is funeral oration by Cerutti, and discharge of fire arms, which 'brings down pieces of the plaster' Thence, forward again to the Church of Sainte Geneviève, which has been consecrated, by supreme decree,

¹ Fils Adoptif v. 1 10 Newspapers and Excerpts (in Hist Parl ix. 366 402).

² Hist Parl x. 405

on the spur of this time, into a Pantheon for the Great Men of the Fatherland, Aux Grands Hommes la Patrie reconnaissante. CHAP. VII Hardly at midnight is the business done; and Mirabeau left April 4, 1791 in his dark dwelling: first tenant of that Fatherland's Pantheon.

Tenant, alas, who inhabits but at will, and shall be cast out. For, in these days of convulsion and dissection, not even the dust of the dead is permitted to rest. Voltaire's bones are, by and by, to be carried from their stolen grave in the Abbey of Scellières, to an eager stealing grave, in Paris his birth-city: all mortals processioning and perorating there; cars drawn by eight white horses, goadsters in classical costume, with fillets and wheat-ears enough;—though the weather is of the wettest.¹ Evangelist Jean-Jacques too, as is most proper, must be dug up from Ermenonville, and processioned, with pomp, with sensibility, to the Pantheon of the Fatherland.² He and others: while again Mirabeau, we say, is cast forth from it, happily incapable of being replaced; and rests now, irrecongnisable, reburied hastily at dead of night 'in the central part of the Churchyard Sainte-Catherine, in the Suburb Saint-Marceau,' to be disturbed no further.

So blazes out, far-seen, a Man's Life, and becomes ashes and a caput mortuum, in this World-Pyre, which we name French Revolution: not the first that consumed itself there; nor, by thousands and many millions, the last! A man who 'had swallowed all formulas'; who, in these strange times and circumstances, felt called to live Titanically, and also to die so. As he, for his part, had swallowed all formulas, what Formula is there, never so comprehensive, that will express truly the plus and the minus of him, give us the accurate net-result of him? There is hitherto none such. Moralities not a few must shriek condemnatory over this Mirabeau; the Morality by which he could be judged has not yet got uttered in the speech of men. We will say this of him again: That he is a Reality and no Simulaerum; a living Son of Nature our general Mother; not a hollow Artifice, and mechanism of Conventionalities, son of nothing, brother to nothing. In which little word, let the earnest man, walking sorrowful in a world mostly of 'Stuffed Clothes-suits,' that chatter and grin

¹ Moniteur, du 13 juillet 1791.

² Ibid. du 18 Septembre 1791. See also du 30 Août, etc. 1791.

BOOK III as if exhausted, the sceptre passing to others The chosen April 4, 1791 Last of the Mirabeaus is gone, the chosen man of France is gone It was he who shook old France from its basis, and as if with his single hand, has held it toppling there, still unfallen What things depended on that one man! He is as a ship suddenly shivered on sunk rocks much swims on the waste waters. far from help

END OF VOL I

